Strange things happened in our sanctum last Monday evening. A few of the boys had gathered in the counting room after supper. Harry was posting his cash account, John was examining the last order for cigar boxes, Peeler was devouring the last number of Peck's Sun, and Billy was testing the merits of a new brand of smoking tobacco, when a gentle rustle was heard proceeding from the editorial room. They all listened and the noise was soon repeated. They decided upon a reconnoissance in force to ferret out the cause of the mystery, and upon arriving upon the scene a big mouse was found revelling in the paste pot. It was evident that something must be done, and be done at once. All the paste in the establishment was in that cup. Tuesday was the day for setting up poetry and miscellany, and the editor could'nt run the office without paste. So John clapped his hat over the cup and held his ratship a prisoner until some method could be devised to dispatch him. One man suggested the borrowing of a rat trap and putting the mouse in it; another suggested roasted cheese; another recommended chloroform; another allowed that "Rough on Rats" was a sure cure. By this time the trouble had attracted the attention of outsiders and a number of good little boys had assembled to see the show. But amid the multitude of counsel nothing was done. A telephone dispatch was then sent to the editor at his residence, asking his advice in the emergency. The reply was returned, "eat him." But no one craved the job. There was'nt a Chinaman in the crowd. Accordingly lots were drawn, and the long straw was taken by Bobby Roper, a darkey boy about ten years old and as black as the ace of spades. At first Bobby demurred, but the crowd appealed to his sense of manliness and honor and he finally consented. "Dis chile neber eat no mice befo'," said he, "but dat mouse can't taste no wusser dan co'n whiskey or plug terbacker, so here goes, gem'len." Bobby was placed on the table upon his back and then the question arose how to pour the mouse down the boy's throat, and this plan was hit upon: To make a big funnel out of a newspaper, pour the mouse into the big end of the funnel, and insert the small end in the boy's mouth. The mouse would then slide down the funnel and innocently rush to its own destruction. A funnel was made from a copy of the last New York Herald from which had been clipped "An Ode to Autumn" and a recipe for making paste. The hole left by these clippings was not perceived. The cup was turned upside down and the contents emptied into the funnel. The paste gently trickled down into Bobby's throat, while the mouse dropped through the wrong hole and escaped. In the melee the lamp was overturned, some one yelled fire and the crowd dispersed as though they had been shot out of a mortar. Several hats were ruined and some shins were badly battered. Bobby was the last man to escape. He turned on his heel as he left the office and with a broad grin on his face exclaimed: "Gem'len, if yo' want a rat trap wot never misses fiah, jus' peramberlate down to ole man Roper's and call on dis chile. I'll do der business ebery time, ya! ya!"

COUNTY CONDENSATIONS.

The Schermerhorn Bros. are the managers of the Hudson Opera House, and they fill the bill admirably.

Draper's Uncle Tom's Cabin will show in Hudson this week. Why can't some Uncle Tom strike this town?

School Dist. No. 5, of Seneca, has been abolished and the contents scattered around among the adjoining districts.

Lenawee county has more apples than other counties in this part of the state but we only have about one-tenth of a good crop here.

The district lodge of Good Templars meets at Palmyra Nov. 12-14.—An officer of the Grand Lodge is expected to be present. There are now eleven lodges reported in the county. Mr. Geo. Tansley is still the district deputy.

Blissfield Advance: General Bailey, the Salvation Army man, gave us a call the other day. He left a very handsome copy of the bible, which we will be glad to return to him when he calls again.

And so Gen. Bailey has plucked up courage to tackle the editor of the Advance.

Blissfield Advance: The residence of Dr. Levi Vanderburg was entered by burglars through a bay window at 4 o'clock Friday morning. They succeeded in getting a gold pin and a diamond shirt stud from the bedroom, when the Doctor was aroused and the ruffian fled.

Deerfield Record: Messrs. John Long and Lewis Smith went to Adrian, Wednesday, and purchased the furniture for the new Masonic hall, at a cost of $150. It will be one of the best furnished lodge halls in this section, and is to be jointly occupied by the Masons and Odd Fellows, the latter society as renters.

The fact that Judge Geddes had appointed J. M. Robertson as special commissioner to clear out and straighten the Raisin, created considerable excitement at Blissfield and vicinity. As soon as the appointment was made known, some enterprising liar circulated the rumor that "Joe" proposed to cut a huge canal through the big swamp from Raisin to Dundee, through which the waters of the river were to be conducted, thus leaving Palmyra, Blissfield, Deerfield, and Petersburg, with their dams and other river obstructions, completely out in the cold. Although the Raisin does not amount to much, these towns did not want to lose it altogether, and hence the excitement.

The correspondent of the Hudson Post has this to say on the depot question: "The object of interest in Addison the past week has been the depot question, which was intensified to fever heat on Friday last when two car loads of stone were left upon the west side of the pond, evidently for foundation purposes. But the hopes of the west siders had hardly risen within them and taken on a bolsterous form in the shape of bluffs and bets, etc., than the two car loads of stone were pushed over to the east side. As the hopes of the west siders went down the hopes of the east siders arose in corresponding proportion, and as he was about wagering everything down to his old shoes upon the issue, the cars were pushed back upon the west side; and so amid the alternating hopes and fears of Addison those two car loads of stone were tilted back and forth across the bridge until the sun went down. But the depot has at last been actually located upon the east side. They are now surveying, grading, and piling lumber upon that side preparatory to building there. The west siders have not entirely given up, and are endeavoring to bring an influence upon the headquarters of the company strong enough to overcome Mr. Latcha's influence in favor of the east side. Each side accuses the other of an utter disregard of word, faith and honor."

Facts for Consideration.

"Parties in Tecumseh and vicinity will do well by seeing B. J. Coller, of Adrian, if they contemplate purchasing any sewing machine, and have him take a New Home to their house, then call or drop me a card and I will send you a White or Domestic or both, to be thoroughly tested side by side with said New Home, and if you do not decide that either of my machines is far superior and preferable in every particular, you will not be bored to purchase, we will simply load up and skip out.

The warning "not to be misled," in Mr. Coller's ad. is uncalled for, no attempt has been made in that direction, and furthermore I have no desire whatever to handle the New Home or bogus Singer. I am trying to establish a sewing machine business on a square basis. I have regular prices on the White and Domestic, from which I do no deviate. So you can buy a machine of me with the assurance that no one has bought for less money. I do not sell way down to one and make it up on the customer that will stand it. I am represented on the road by W. H. Moore, a "square toed" man who will not misrepresent or take any advantage of you and who will make as good terms with you as myself. The White and Domestic have no superiors and are the leading machines in this vicinity; therefore I say do not buy any machines without giving them a trial, then you will be prepared to decide intelligently. I have in stock the Chickering, Whitney and Ithaca Duplex Pianos; and Estey, Whitney, Royal Ithaca and Peloubet Organs, which I will sell for cash at Detroit cash prices less freight, and your expenses there and return to find out.

Half Out of His Head.

"Bless ye for the man," said Don Quixote to Sancho Panza, "who invented sleep." Sancho's gratitude is due, but what if one cannot for any cost secure that excellent invention? "Nervousness is the disease of the age," writes Mr. William Coleman, the well known wholesale druggist of Buffalo, N. Y.

"Out of sorts, and my nights were either passed in that sort of restlessness which nearly drives a man, or in a kind of stupor haunted by horrible dreams. Having taken Parker's Tonic for other troubles, I tried it also for this. The result both surprised and delighted me. My nights were turned to concert pitch, and, like a school-boy again, I fell into the ranks of those who sleep o' nights. I should add that the Tonic has driven away with the weakness of general debility and dyspepsia, occasioned by my nervous sleeplessness, and gave me strength and spirits. In brief the use of the Tonic has completely reestablished my health. I have used Parker's Tonic with entire success for sea-sickness and for the bowel disorders incident to foreign voyages."

This preparation, which has been known as Parker's Ginger Tonic, will hereafter be advertised and sold simply under the name of Parker's Tonic, omitting the word ginger. Hiscox & Co. have deemed it wise to make this change by the advice of unprincipled dealers who have for years deceived their customers by substituting inferior preparations under the name of ginger. We drop the misleading word all the more willingly, as it is an unimportant flavoring ingredient of Parker's Tonic.

This change however in the preparation itself, and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers wrapped under the name of Parker's Ginger Tonic contain the genuine medicine if the signature of Hiscox & Co., is on the bottle, and the red-lettered wrapper.

A Regular "D. B."

Not long ago a well-known newspaper man took day board at the Sherman House, says the Chicago Times. He was at home in the place, and was a privileged character. One day he sauntered behind the office counter into the regions that are supposed to be sacred to gentlemen who wear diamonds and address congressmen, governors, tourists, porters, newsboys and other statesmen by their first names, when his eye happened to catch sight of his own name on a slip with others over the book-keeper's desk. He would not have given it a passing thought had not the letters "D. B." been attached. He "flew off the handle" on the instant, and demanded an interview with the proprietor. That august functionary was found, and to him the irate journalist addressed a few remarks. "Do I owe you anything?" he asked. "No, sir," was the prompt reply. "I have paid my bills all right so far as you know, haven't I?" "Certainly. I have no complaint to make."

"Then why do you permit your clerk to post me over his desk as a 'D. B.?'"

"I do not; there must be some mistake."

The journalist assured him that there was no mistake, and that he had seen the objectionable and significant letters with his own eyes. The more he thought of it the madder he got. The proprietor could not pacify him until he promised to have the matter investigated and the guilty man punished. It was found that the night clerk had perpetrated the outrage, and that evening the injured citizen took an early opportunity to take him to task. "What did you mean by putting 'D. B.' after my name?" inquired the newspaper man. "O, go away," he replied, thinking his interlocutor was "chaffing," as was his custom "don't bother me." "No, I won't go away and I demand a civil answer to my question."

The clerk looked up and saw an angry man in front of him. Then his countenance was suddenly bisected by a grin, and he doubled up like a man with the colic. "You took day-board, didn't you?" he inquired, as soon as he regained his composure. "Yes, I did, and I have paid for all the day-board I have enjoyed." "So you have," was the soothing response, "but just come around here a minute, till I show you something. You see you are in good company. You are an associate of several millionaires and railroad magnates. They are each and every one designated the same way. 'D. B.' That is short for 'day-board. Regular boarders are marked 'R. B.'"

The journalist spent a week's salary trying to bribe his audience with liquid nourishment to keep still, but like all good things the joke leaked.

All weakness and ill health owes its origin to an impure state of the blood and a weakness of the urinary and digestive organs. A medicine that will strengthen these organs, and at the same time purify the blood, will assist nature in curing nearly every disease that human flesh and blood is heir to. Such a remedy is Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla, and, although it possesses no cathartic or diuretic effect, its use will soon establish a regular habit of body as well as cure weakness of the kidneys, indicated by urinary sediments, nervousness, etc.

Japanese Life.

The Japanese is the cleanest of mankind. Cleanliness is, so to speak, more than godliness with him. Though he has no soap, he washes all over at least once a day—he worships but once a week. His candles are made of vegetable wax. He uses a cotton coverlet, well stuffed and padded, for bed covering and mattress. A sort of stereoscope case—made of wood—makes his pillow. He resorts to that, and so does his wife and daughters, that their carefully arranged hair may not be disturbed during sleep. No head-covering is used by the Japanese. No nation dresses the hair so tastefully. Usually, it is with the men dressed in sections. They are coming now to wear in European fashion. They are adopting all European customs.

On Levee day I saw the reception at the Mikado's palace in Yeddo. Every one presented had to come in full dress. The dress does not become the Japanese figure. He looks awkward in it. His legs are too short. The tails of his claw-hammer coat drag on the ground, and the black dress trousers wrinkle up and get baggy around his feet. His European-fashioned clothes are taken out ready-made from America or England, and in no case did I notice anything approaching to a good fit. Yet he smiled and looked very happy though he could not get his heels half way down his Wellington boots, and his pants were either too large or too small for his legs. He always smiles and looks pleasant. Nothing can make him grumble, and he is not learned to swear. He is satisfied to be paid his due, and never asks for more. As a New York cabman he would be a failure, being curiously

A remedy that has proven itself a never failing cure for scrofula and all syphilitic disorders must quickly cure less terrible blood diseases. Dr Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla is such a perfect blood purifier and strengthener of bodily functions that it cures the above diseases even when Hot Springs and all other treatment has failed. Remember it is absolutely free from mineral poisons, and will not injure the most delicate constitution. Its use will make you feel buoyant, strong and well, and will rid your system of all blood impurities, and every internal and external indication of disease.

THE MODEST FATHER.—"Father," began a young Detroiter the other evening, "were you in the war?"

"Yes, my son."

"Was it awful?"

"Yes."

"Lots of dead and wounded men?"

"Yes."

"Did you kill many?"

"Well, I shouldn't like to answer that question."

"Are you very modest, pa?"

"I hope I am too modest to brag."

"That was what Mr. Smith meant, then, when he was telling the men down at the drug store that you hadn't any war record to brag of."

"He did, eh? Smith is a liar!"

"That's what I thought. He told the men that you run so fast he couldn't catch you on horseback, and any boy knows that a horse can catch a man with a stiff knee."

North Pole Expeditions.

Prize fights, lotteries, walking matches, and balloon ascensions, are usually humbugs of the worst sort. Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is not a humbug. It is a quick cure for aches and sprains, and is just as good for a lameness.

Scientific Notes.

The human body is seven-eighths water. The blood is mostly water. All the tissues owe their softness to it, and even the bones have a share of this fluid. No organ of the body could perform its duty, nor could life be sustained without it. Alcohol burns up the water, diseases and destroys the body.

An iron rail properly made, it is said, will last as long as those of steel. The Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton road near Dayton has in use iron rails placed there thirty-one years ago which are yet in fair condition. They were made at Johnston, Pa., and the order required that they should be the best possible to be made. It is said to be a fact that no iron rails are made nowadays which would endure an equal amount of traffic for thirty years.

Denmark has lately acquired a torpedo boat which is pronounced in England, where it was made, the largest afloat. Her displacement is fifty-five tons and her armament comprises four of the largest Whitehead torpedoes, each carrying eighty pounds of gun-cotton and a Hotchkiss revolving gun. She has a coal capacity of ten tons, which is equivalent to 1,200 miles at eleven knots, but her full speed is twenty knots. Despite her great size, the boat is capable of transportation by rail.

In a paper read before the British Medical Association, Dr. J. Hadden objects to the treatment of fevers by immersing the patient in cold baths for the purpose of directly abstracting heat. He says the theory upon which such treatment is advocated is incorrect. The high temperature is not itself the cause of the worst symptoms of fevers. Furthermore he declares that in practice such treatment is dangerous, and that the only safe way of using baths in fevers is by sponging the surface with moderately cold water. Even tepid or warm water will exert a cooling and soothing effect. The immersion method is too shocking.

Professor Donders, long known as the most distinguished oculist in Holland, recently delivered a lecture in Amsterdam, on color, which has been widely quoted. After an elaborate experimental analysis of various popular notions on the subject in hand, Professor Donders proceeded to demonstrate that, notwithstanding the prevailing theory, green must be ranked with the primitive colors, like red, blue, and yellow. Green, the Professor explained could not be produced by mixing pure yellow and blue—such a composition would be white, in the very nature of things. The green color which is apparently derived from the mixture or amalgamation of two paints is, in reality, says Professor Donders, the result of "subtraction."

It is well to know the best remedy for coughs and colds, soreness of the throat and lungs, consumption and all pulmonary diseases, is Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. It quickly allays inflammation and checks decay.

Changes of a Century

The nineteenth century has witnessed many and very great discoveries and changes:

In 1809 Fulton took out his first patent for the invention of a steamboat.

The first steamships which made regular trips across the Atlantic ocean were the Sirius and Great Western in 1830.

The first public application to practical use of gas for illumination was made in 1802.

In 1813 the streets of London were for the first time lighted with gas.

In 1813 there was built in Waltham, Mass., a mill, believed to have been the first in the world which combined all the requirements for making finished cloth from the raw cotton.

In 1790 there were only twenty-five post-offices in the whole country, and up to 1837 the rate of postage was 25 cents for a letter sent over 400 miles.

In 1807 wooden clocks began to be made by machinery. This ushered in the era of cheap clocks.

About the year 1833 the first railroad of any considerable length in the United States was constructed.

In 1840 the first experiments in photography were made by Daguerre.

About 1840 the first express business was established.

The anthracite coal business may be said to have begun in 1820.

In 1836 the patent for the invention of matches was granted.

Steel pens were introduced for use in 1803.

The first successful trial of a reaper took place in 1833.

In 1846 Elias Howe obtained a patent for his first sewing machine.

Absolutely the best Porous Plaster ever made, The Hop Plaster is composed of Fresh Hops, Balsams and Gums. Weak Back, Side Ache, Sore Chest, and all pains are speedily cured by its use. Apply one. Only 25 cts., at any drug store.

The Model Farm.

The Keota (Iowa) Eagle has at last found a western man who is satisfied with a fifty acre farm. His name is Artemus Fisher, and he lives one mile and a half south of Keota. The Eagle tells the story of his management and of his success as follows:

He keeps one team of horses, three first class cows, and a nice little drove of the best hogs. He milks his cows for the creamery, and they made him nearly $200 last year; will perhaps do better this year. He will sell $500 worth of hogs this year, and have thirty stockers to keep over. He has $200 worth of flax-seed to sell; has an abundance of hay and grain to keep his stock in first-class condition during the winter. He keeps everything in apple-pie order about his farm; his cows revel in clover up to their eyes; he attends to feeding, watering and milking as regularly as the clock strikes, hence he gets the best results with the least possible feed. He keeps his stock under cover, and never allows any animal to shiver in the fence corners. He has a barn that is a model of convenience and economy. It is snow-proof, and as warm as the old kitchen. He has a first-class selection of fruit—not a large orchard, but a choice selection of the varieties that thrive and bear the best in this locality. Everything about the farm bears marks of intelligence, thrift and economy. Besides making a living for himself and the "old lady," he will sell at least $800 worth of stuff off his fifty acres this year, and not be exceeding former years either. There is no rush or hurry about this model farm. Everything goes off quietly and regularly. The expenses are very small and the gains sure.

No exaggerated or fictitious certificates, but solid facts, testify the marvelous cures of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

ASHBURNHAM, Mass. Jan. 14, '80.
I have been very sick over two yrs. They all gave me up as past cure. I tried the most skillful physicians, but they did not reach the worst part.—The lungs and heart would fill up every night and distress me and my throat was very bad. I told my children that I should never die in peace until I had tried Hop Bitters. I have taken two bottles. They have helped me very much indeed. I am now well. There was a lot of sick folks here who have seen how they helped me, and they used them and are cured, and feel as thankful as I do that there is so valuable medicine made.

DR. A. TRASK'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years,

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

COMPOUND OXYGEN NOT A DRUG

A NEW TREATMENT.

For Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, Dyspepsia, Catarrh, Headache, Debility, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all Chronic and Nervous Disorders.

A CARD.

We the undersigned, having received great and permanent benefit from the use of "COMPOUND OXYGEN," prepared and administered by Drs. STARKEY & PALEN, of Philadelphia, and being satisfied that it is a new discovery in medical science, and all that is claimed for it, consider it a duty which we owe to the many thousands who are suffering from chronic and so-called "incurable" diseases to do all that we can to make its virtues known, and to inspire the public with confidence.

We have personal knowledge of Drs. Starkey & Palen. They are educated, intelligent and conscientious physicians, who will not, we are sure, make any statement which they do not know or believe to be true, nor publish any testimonials or reports of cases which are not genuine.

DR. B. MINCER,
Scientific Optician!

I have devoted 25 years wholly to a study of the eye, and how to aid vision properly, and I make a specialty of fitting glasses to the eyes that have been injured by cheap, inferior glasses. I manufacture every kind of glasses, and guarantee satisfaction. Read what prominent physicians of Adrian say:

Having for some time past used glasses to improve my sight, without satisfactorily gaining my object, I called on Mr. Mincer, optician, of Detroit, who readily adapted glasses to my eyes, with which I am so well pleased, that I cheerfully speak in his favor. His method of examining and its application in selecting glasses to fit the eye can only be acquired by a knowledge of the useful organ to which must be added extensive experience. He has also adapted glasses to Mrs. Baker's eyes with which she is well pleased. I recommend him to all who need glasses adapted to their wants; poor glasses are an abomination. V. A. BAKER, M.D.

ADRIAN, Nov. 18, 1882.

I have used spectacles bought of Mr. B. Mincer for the past three months, and find them superior to any I have ever used, and can cheerfully recommend him to anyone in need of glasses, and the benefit of his experience in the science of optics to adjust proper lenses. DANIEL TODD, M.D.

I have investigated the work of Mr. B. Mincer, optician. I have reason to believe that he understands his profession, and adjusts excellent glasses on scientific principles. C. BYND, M.D.

Winter Evenings on the Farm.

I remember to have read somewhere how some Italian artist gathered up all the bits of broken glass cast aside in building a cathedral, and how from these pieces, trimmed, arranged and set in order, he constructed one of the most beautiful windows found in Italy. What others had cast aside as useless, he took up and from it wrought out the beautiful, and the useful.

Boys and girls on the farm, as everywhere else, let run to waste many bits of time, spare moments, hours, evenings which if they would but turn to good use, might be made to serve the noblest purpose. But the trouble is to get at it, to have some plan of working over these spare hours. How can the evenings be turned to use, and the best use? Of course one can doze them away sitting before the fire, can gossip, play checkers, and so on, but this is not the best use, nor the best way to spend long evenings. An occasional evening spent in this way may be good, but to thus let all these passing spare hours slip by is to waste life. And at the end of ten years of spare hours what have we to show?

Let me suggest a simple plan for utilizing evenings; and let me suggest it out of my own experience, for I do no not know what our experience is good for if it is not to help others. It often comes too late, to help us. And now, the fact that you are on a farm, is a great advantage for using your evenings. I know this from experience both of farm life and city life. In the city there is something to break in on your plans all the time. In the country your evenings are comparatively free, at least an hour or two for each evening, and you can set aside this time if you plan before hand to do so. We can do it in the city, but it is more easily done in the country.

I know now what objections you begin to offer: "I am too tired, too sleepy, have too much else to do," and all this. Yes, but all these obstacles fade out of sight if we only take hold of the work with a purpose. For those who do not care to make the most and best of life, these suggestions of mine will have little value. But here and there possibly they may find a young man or woman to whom they may be helpful. If so, I have my reward, in endeavoring to do for others what I would that some one had done for me when I was a boy on the farm struggling for ways and means toward gaining an education.

The problem is, how to get time? And the only answer is, "take it." Take time; that is the only way you will ever have time for anything. Lay your plan, write it out and solemnly sign your name to it, if it will thus make it more binding, to spend at least an hour every evening in reading some good book. You will have interruptions, but persist in your plan, and soon other things will yield and you can pass from one hour's reading to two. And you can hardly imagine how much good may come to you from these few hours spent over a good book. They will follow you all the days of your life. You will look back to them in after years with sweet reflections and pleasant memories. No one of you who may read this is likely to find greater difficulties in working this plan than I did as a boy. I remember well how my first interest was awakened in history, an interest which has never left me, because commenced early in life and against great obstacles. Yes, the very difficulties I met with added zest to the task, and I have lived long enough now to see that these very hindrances were to me blessings in disguise. They gave me then and have confirmed all these years to give me a sense of victory over difficulties and, you notice in your own experience every difficulty mastered gives you strength and nerve, and tone for still greater difficulties. Stop not, then, for these little obstacles; rise above them, and in the mastery find hope and courage for future struggles.

I was at work on a farm by the month, and for a man who was unhappy if a boy in the house was sleeping after four o'clock in the morning, or came in from his chores before seven in the evening. And yet, having signed the solemn compact with myself to read history one hour each evening, I did it, though it was a terrible thorn in the flesh for the head of the family to see the tallow candle wasting away for such foolish business as reading. He would often upbraid me with "What y' goin' to do with yer larnin', when y' git it?" But on I pressed with my plan, and I have come now to thank God, not only for the obstacles overcome, but for a sense of strength and courage, that has helped me in many another struggle of life. And it is this sense of strength from victories won which I would bring to bear upon every young man who may be wrestling with the same or similar difficulties.

WINSTON, Forsyth Co., N. C.

Gents—I desire to express to you my thanks for your wonderful Hop Bitters. I was troubled with dyspepsia for five years previous to commencing the use of your Hop Bitters some six months ago. My cure has been wonderful. I am pastor of the First Methodist Church of this place, and my whole congregation can testify to the great virtues of your bitters.

Very respectfully, Rev. H. Feretee.

A foreign scientific journal remarks as a curious physiological fact, that although open-air life is so favorable to health, yet it has the apparent effect of stunting the growth in early youth. Thus, while the children of well-to-do parents, carefully housed and tended, are found to be taller for their age than the children of the poor, they are not so strong in after years, the laborer's children, for instance, who play in the lonely country roads and fields all day, whose parents lock their humble doors when leaving for work in the morning, so that their offspring shall not gain entrance and do mischief, are almost invariably short for their age; the children of working farmers exhibit the same peculiarity. After sixteen or eighteen—after years of hesitation, as it were—the lads shoot up and become great, hulking, broad fellows, possessed of immense strength. According to these statements, it would seem that indoor life forces the growth at the wrong period and thus injures it. Is it so?

Time to Stop it.

It's too bad, Sir or Madam, but don't get frightened. Your hair is falling off—that's certain. A glance in the mirror, or an appealing committee of fingers tell the dismal story. We won't discuss the possible cause. It is enough that Parker's Hair Balsam used now will prevent further destruction. The poor hair somewhat gray, too and dry? Alas, yes. The Balsam will give back the original color, softness and gloss. Not a dye, not oily, elegantly perfumed, a perfect dressing.

The Art of Advertising.

The time has come when a knowledge of this art is an essential part of the education of every business man. To be successful in business they should understand how to advertise. It is only necessary, in order to illustrate the truth of this statement, to call attention to the most successful merchants and manufacturers of any large city, or small village, in the United States. They know just what to say to the public, when to say it, how to say it, and the medium to employ in saying it. They have made the same careful study of this as of any other branch of their business. They don't insert a single beggarly little "ad" in an obscure corner of some paper, out of favor to the publisher, to support a party organ, and then endeavor to make the proprietor of the paper sensible of the value of their patronage, by growling when asked to pay for the advertisement, and vowing that it never did them any good, but was just put in out of charity. They are not content with an old stale advertisement that repeats the same old story at all seasons of the year, offering the same bargains, and the same full supply of goods "just received" at all times of the year—when their stocks have run so low that they are scarcely able to fill the orders of a single customer, as when their houses are filled with the most seasonable and attractive commodities. They never allow the public to remain in ignorance of the fact that they have a good thing to sell. They know how to make their constant appeals in a manner that will prove attractive. They are always devising new and striking methods for presenting their wares to the public notice, by the use of printer's ink. They are always careful to advertise what they have—not what they had last winter, nor what some one else has now. They advertise honestly as well as liberally, and their customers learn to believe the promises publicly made through the newspapers. Their advertisements are studied with interest by every one who expects to become a purchaser. It is as important that a man about to engage in mercantile pursuits should know how to advertise, as to know how to buy judiciously, or to sell at a living profit.

Feathered Slaves.

No people are more ingenious than the Chinese in the minor arts of life. That they have succeeded in training birds to fish is a striking example of their ingenuity and patience. Instead of carrying nets, the fishermen provide themselves with a large number of cormorants which perch on the edge of the boats. It is a curious spectacle to see these creatures engaged in fishing, diving into the water and always coming up with a fish in their beaks. As the Chinese fear the vigorous appetites of their feathered servants, they fasten around their necks an iron ring, large enough to allow their breathing but too small to admit of the entrance of the fish they seize; to prevent their straying about in the water and wasting the time desired for their work, a cord is attached to the ring and to one claw of the cormorant by which he is pulled up when inclined to stay too long under water. When tired he is permitted to rest for a while; but if he abuse the indulgence and waste his time, a few strokes of the bamboo recalls him to duty, and the poor diver resumes his laborious occupation. In passing from one fishing ground to another, the cormorants perch side by side, so as not to disturb the equilibrium of the frail vessel.

Extreme Tired Feeling.

A lady tells us "the first bottle has done my daughter a great deal of good her food does not distress her now, nor does she suffer from that extreme tired feeling which she did before taking Hood's Sarsaprilla." A second bottle effected a cure. Ne other preparation contains such a concentration of vitalizing, enriching, purifying and invigorating properties as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

POOR GIRLS.—The poorest girls in the world are those who have never been taught to work. There are thousands of them. Rich parents have petted them, they have been taught to despise labor, and depend upon others for a living, and are perfectly helpless. If misfortune comes upon their friends, as it often does, their case is hopeless. The most forlorn and miserable women upon earth belong to this class. It belongs to parents to protect their daughters from this deplorable condition. They do them a great wrong if they neglect it. Every daughter should be taught to earn her own living. The rich as well as the poor require this training. The wheel of fortune rolls swiftly around; the rich are very likely to become poor, and the poor rich. Skill to labor is no disadvantage to the rich, and as indispensable to the poor. Well-to-do parents must educate their daughters to work; no reform is more imperative than this.

These are Solid Facts.

The best blood purifier and system regulator ever placed within the reach of suffering humanity, truly is Electric Bitters. Inactivity of the liver, billiousness, jaundice, constipation, weak kidneys, or any disease of the urinary organs, or whoever requires an appetizer, tonic or mild stimulant, will always find Electric Bitters the best and only certain cure known. They act surely and quickly, every bottle guaranteed to give entire satisfaction or money refunded. Sold at 50 cents a bottle.

The Commercial Bulletin remarks that "the American nose can now be wiped with an American made silk handkerchief, but no American nose can be wiped with a domestic linen handkerchief; and moreover, no American heart beats beneath a domestic linen bosom. Let linen be a little better protected and linens would be sold cheaper in price and better in quality than the imported linens at the present time." Not a yard of linen is made in the United States. And yet no country is better adapted to flax raising or manufacturing!

Like an Evil Spirit.

In olden times it was thought that evil spirits came in through cracks and keyholes. The generally approved way to keep them out was to plug up the keyholes and stop the cracks with cotton. Notwithstanding these preventive measures, the evil things had their own way and often came in as they pleased.

So comes malaria now-a-days. We try to keep it out of the keyhole and it comes in by the crack. We stop up the crack, and lo! it comes from a leak in the plumbing, or an opening from some neglected drain, or from some unsuspected source and unguarded direction.

We cannot always keep malaria out, but we can give it battle and drive its effects from our systems. If BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is taken in time, malaria has not a ghost of a chance. This is the great family medicine. Your druggist sells it and you ought to keep a bottle in the house.

ESTATE OF WILLIAM TAYLOR.

STATE OF MICHIGAN County of Lenawee, ss. At a session of the Probate Court, for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian on Friday, the 5th day of October, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three.

Present, Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of William Taylor, an insane person.

On reading and filing the petition, of Charles C. Tuttle, guardian of said insane person, praying for the allowance of his first guardian's account, now on file in this court.

Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the 5th day of November next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the next-of-kin of said ward and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing. (A True Copy.)

KING OF THE BLOOD.

The Most Thorough Purifier of the Blood Yet Discovered.

Cures all Humors, from a Common Eruption to the worst Scrofula.

It purifies the Blood.
It invigorates the Liver.
It regulates the Bowels.
It strengthens the stomach.
It gives vivacity in place of lassitude; cheerfulness in place of gloom, and robust vigor in place of debility.

Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Disordered Liver, Constipation, Nervous Affections, General Debility, in short all the numerous diseases and discomforts caused by impure blood are speedily conquered by this powerful corrector, the chief and sovereign of all ancient or modern medical discoveries—KING OF THE BLOOD.

Its name is the best description as it is a royal dispenser of the blessings of health and vanquishes the foes that lurk in the blood.

It banishes PIMPLES, SALT RHEUM, SCALY ERUPTIONS, ULCERS, SCALD HEAD, FEVER SORES, and all SCROFULOUS DISORDERS.

It checks CONSUMPTION in its early stages. It has frequently cured it when advanced.

It disperses TUMORS and CANCERS without the Surgeon's knife.

It cures DROPSY, general or partial.

It cures FEMALE WEAKNESS and DISEASE.

It reduces in a safe and effectual manner all swellings, external or internal.

It eradicates the effects of Venerial Disease and Mineral Poisons, and establishes a sound constitution.

Many certificates, much further information and full directions for using, will be found in the pamphlet, "Treatise on Diseases of the Blood," in which each bottle is enclosed.

Price $1 per bottle containing 12 ounces, or 12 doses. Sold by dealers in medicine.

If your druggist does not happen to have it on hand, request him to order a supply of it for you, as it will be cheaper than for you to order direct of us, and less trouble.

COULD NOT GO TO BED.

CHERRY TREE TOWNSHIP, March 20, 1886.
Venango County, Pa.

I have been afflicted with Rheumatism more or less for the past thirty years, so much so in the leg that I would have to lie down to get ease and at one time I could not go to bed, but was compelled to set up all night. This affliction continued for five months. I was solicited to use Wilson's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism, which made a perfect cure. I found it to act with certainty, and giving relief immediately. I used but one bottle and have not been afflicted since.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

MACON CENTER CUTS.

Mr. Cyrus Mead was called by telegraph to attend the funeral of his cousin at Ypsilanti on Saturday last.

The address of A. H. Briggs at Grange hall on Friday evening, was well attended, and appreciated by the audience. We hope to hear from him again on the subject of Political Economy, as much interest was created in this subject by the able address. The next open grange meeting will be in four weeks. Address by Alexander Easlick; subject, Tariff and Free Trade. He will be assisted by Isaac Mills, criticised by Dr. Geo. Howell and R. R. Hall. Others will be called upon to speak on either side.

Mr. Joseph Osborn is giving his residence a new coat of paint, which makes it look very attractive.

A. Easlick has his new tile and brick machine in full blast.

On Friday, while the Rev. Mr. Bordine, pastor of the De Spelder church, and lately moved into the parsonage at South Macon, was away attending to his ministerial duties, the house was taken possession of by some of the neighbors, and on return he found to his surprise the house filled with almost entire strangers, who made him so welcome that he soon felt himself at home. After spending an hour socially and partaking of a bountiful supper which the ladies provided, we all felt as though we were friends and not strangers. After being thanked by the host and hostess for the greeting we took our way homeward, all agreeing that we had a very pleasant and agreeable time.

The Macon correspondent must be very dull not to know what attracts so many young people from the Center there to attend their entertainments. It is their peculiarly interesting exercises, charming manners and pretty girls. The four young ladies from the Center who attended the concert at Macon are well known, and justly feel much aggrieved by the item in last week's HERALD. We are sorry that a feeling of jealousy, caused undoubtedly by the excellence of the entertainments at the Center, should prompt anyone to publish such a libel on a few innocent ones, thus imputing a breach of propriety to those whose manners and reputation are above reproach. If there has been any wrong done, place it where it belongs, but we are happy to say it does not belong here.

Last week occurred the marriage of Miss Mattie Vescelius of Macon, and Eugene Bryan of Tecumseh. About 75 relatives and friends were present, and the happy couple received a large number of beautiful presents.

HOLLOWAY HICKUPS.

B. Kelly & Co. shipped two cars of hogs Saturday.

Mr. V. J. Slee is very ill with brain difficulty.

Miss Brouse, of Ohio, and Miss Wicoff of N. Y., who have been visiting Mr. Matthew Spence, intend returning home this week.

Cards are out announcing the marriage of Miss Alice Green, of Raisin, and Mr. David Barker, of New York, on Thursday of this week.

Ezra Hoxie and John Soper have moved in their new houses.

AUCTION SALE.

John Sones will sell at auction on the old Daniel Kelly farm, 4½ miles north of Tecumseh, on the old Saline road, Friday, Nov. 9, 1883, at 12 o'clock, M., the following property: One mare and colt, 3 yr. old colt broke single or double, two yr. old colt, past, 2 yearling steers, cow, 5 hogs, 100 sheep, 7 yearling rams, farm wagon, single buggy, set single harness, feed mill and sheller combined, new corn sheller, cultivator, quantity corn stalks and potatoes, binder cover, 12x16; double barrel shot-gun, new extension table, &c. Usual terms of sale. Ben. Reynolds, auc.

Chas. A. Kniffin will sell at auction ½ mile north and one mile east of Britton station, Thursday, Nov. 8, at 12 o'clock M., one span work horses, two cows, 1 fat, 4 two year old steers, 1 two yr. old heifer, yoke of yearling steers, 4 calves, 50 weathers, 35 lambs, 75 sheep, 2 fine wool bucks, sow and 8 pigs, breeding sow, 7 shoats, quantity hay, etc. Usual terms of sale. Abe Hanford, auc.

The next regular meeting of the Lenawee county Pomona grange will be held with Morenci grange, at Morenci village, Thursday, Nov. 8th, at 10 A. M. All are invited to attend the public meeting, at 1½ o'clock P. M., at which a very interesting literary program will be presented. A delegate to the state grange will be elected at the fifth degree meeting. A general attendance of patrons is desired.

November 1st, cold with strong west wind.

FORTY BILLION GERMS.

A Wonderful Theory that Concerns the Welfare, Happiness and Life of Everyone.

In his quiet and cosy library at the close of a busy day sat a gentleman and his wife, he absorbed in a new book and she in a newspaper. Quickly glancing toward her husband, she asked, at a certain point in the article,

"John, what is the germ theory?"

"The germ theory—well—yes; just look in the encyclopedia under 'Germ,' that will explain it so much better than I can."

Accordingly his wife opened the book at the word named and read: Germ Theory of Disease—A theory advanced by the ablest and best investigators and scientists of the times. It supposes the surface of the earth, the air and water to be inhabited to a greater or less extent with a peculiar growth of the lowest form of fungi—commonly termed bacteria, whose power of reproduction, under favorable conditions, is so great that a single germ will increase to fifteen million in twenty-four hours time, and unchecked in its increase would grow to a mass of eight hundred tons in three days' time, if space and food be furnished. There is no condition under which it can be said to be absent, unless it be from fire or air filtered through cotton-batting in numerous layers. A single drop of water containing a germ, put into water, boiled, filtered and thus freed from bacteria, will grow murky in a day or two from the development of new germs. When it is considered that it requires about forty billion to weigh one grain, some remote idea can be had of the capacity of germ reproduction. Prof. John Tyndall, in a late work elaborately treats of the influence of germs in the propagation of disease and charges upon this cause the inception and development of very many of the ailments most injurious to man. Professor Pasteur, an eminent French savant, has carried his original and beautiful experiments so far, and from them deduced such practical results as very greatly to diminish the number of cases of anthrax among sheep and chicken cholera among fowls,—proving his theory that these are essentially and actually germ diseases. These germs are carried into the system through the lungs, and stomach, and possibly the skin, but through the lungs chiefly. Once in the system they begin to develop, poisoning the blood, invading the nerve centers, disturbing the functional activity of the great organs of the body and inducing a general impairment of the vital processes. They are the cause of fevers, rheumatism, Bright's disease of the kidneys, pneumonia, blood poisoning, liver disease, diphtheria, and many other ailments. Lately Professor Koch, a famous German physician, has proved that consumption of the lungs is due to this cause—the presence of a peculiar germ.

When the circulation is bounding, the nerves elastic and the system all aglow with life and energy, the germs seem to develop poorly, if at all. But with weakened nerves, poor digestion or malassimilation food or a lowering of vitality from any cause, a change ensues, and in this impoverished and weakened fluid the germ finds a genial home and develops until symptoms of disease are distinctly manifested. This is seen in the every day experience of all. The healthy man resists the influences around him and does not take cold, while those whose systems have become weak from any cause readily contract colds. This is on the same principle as the germ theory. The germs attack any weakened spot in the body, and fixing themselves upon it, begin their propagation. It is plain therefore that it is only by fortifying the weak portions of the body that the germs of disease can be resisted and driven from the system. But this has proved almost an impossibility heretofore, and it has been the study of physicians for years how best to accomplish it. Within the past few years, however, a preparation has been attracting great attention, not only throughout the entire land, but among the medical profession and scientists generally, which is based upon this theory, and it may safely be said, no remedy has been found which can so successfully place the system in a condition to resist the germs of disease as Warner's Safe Cure. This article is unquestionably the best and most efficient that has ever been discovered for this purpose, and—

"John, say, John! does the encyclopedia advertise Warner's Safe Cure?"

"I should not wonder, dear, it's a grand remedy, and that pamphlet we received the other day stated that Dr. Gunn, of the United States Medical College endorsed it. At all events the wonderful cures it has accomplished entitle it to be honorably noted among the great discoveries of the present century."

However the facts above stated may be, the truth remains, that the germ theory of disease is the correct one and that the great remedy mentioned is the only one which has ever been found that can put the system in a condition to kill these germs before they obtain a hold upon the body and undermine the life.

The annual meeting of the Lenawee County Farmer's Mutual Insurance Company, was held Monday afternoon. Zach. Cook, of Raisin, was re-elected president and treasurer, and George R. Allis, of Adrian, secretary. The fire losses for the year were 27 in number, the losses and expenses incurred in which amounted to $1,067, 763; total amount of property insured $8,521,019. The amount for each $1000 insured is to be raised one twenty-eighth. Half of the association voted to allow country school houses to be insured hereafter.

A Last Talk.

Come out in the garden and walk with me,
While the dashers whirr to that dreamy tune;
Then the moonlight silvers the sleeping sea,
And the world is fair as a night in June.
Let me hold your hand as I used to do;
This is the last, last time, you know,
For tomorrow a wooer comes to wed
And take you, though I love you so.

You are pale—or is it the moonlight's wan
Thatsoever to rouse from that strange old song?
We cannot wake at last from our summer dream,
We have come to the end of the golden days.

Over the place has a strange spell,
The shadows are heavy, the moonlight is cold,
And yet, as the clock strikes, I feel like a traitor—
Let, love, the moonlight play fool and fool.

You wear a rose—yes, I gave it you—
Crushed my rose I gave you long ago;
Just as you crushed out the summer days
A flower of white from head to toe,
A creature of snow, cold, pure, frozen. Ah me!
How the chilling war power kept at bay
Of love to quicken my memory.

Hear the clock—yes, and the deep tones
Seem echoing within my undertone,
Is my memory, memory. The rose
[illegible]
For I because we must part to-night
That the moon seems so sad. Ah me!
[illegible]
[illegible]

They say you are [illegible]
Must I say goodbye, and kiss my wife?
If we must part, it is better so—
Goodbye—such a dream to have been so sad!

DOUBTING DIXON

I don't know, Concerned Emigrant Blakely, I don't think so I told you anything about Doubting Dixon yesterday when he was talking of Denver in 53?

Emigrant Blakely and I were seated one pleasant summer evening, after a comfortable supper, in front of the Pacific House, Omaha. Mr. Blakely had been labelled Emigrant because of the immense wagon train he had displayed in the Union Pacific railway, and was indefatigable in his efforts to engage settlers to colonize with his company. [illegible]

No, I believe not. Yes, I [illegible]
[illegible]

Dixon stood a chance [illegible] out from Denver [illegible] Dixon. He didn't come down [illegible] office a week [illegible] Dixon, he never could [illegible] anything at the bar, an' he didn't never carry home anything in a jug. [illegible] of this little eccentricity. Doubting Dixon was unpopular with the [illegible] Dixon, himself, didn't appear to have any great an' overpowering affection for them. I said that he was unpopular, an' didn't seem to have many friends. There was one exception. That was a vicious looking York State feller, a gambler, and the boys all said a skill gambler at that. He an' Dixon were seen together occasionally conversing in low tones, and everybody wondered why Pistol Grip, as the York State chap was called, an' Doubting Dixon should be so thick when Dixon didn't gamble nor drink either. One day this Doubting Dixon struck it rich in his claim, and he sold out for one hundred and forty thousand dollars, an' he an' the kid left the old shanty an' came into town an' went to boardin' at the hotel. One Saturday afternoon Doubting Dixon sat watchin' a game of billiards in the Senate saloon an' Monte Bill come in, an' he says.

"Dixon, there's a lady outside in a hoodrige as wants to see yer."

"I don't know no ladies in Denver, said Doubting Dixon, a little uneasy, an' I don't believe as any ladies wants to see me."

"Mebbe you think I'm a liar," said Monte Bill, carefully rubbing the nickel-plate on his revolver with his thumb.

"No, I won't say you're a liar, Bill, said Dixon, meek as a lamb, "for I don't hardly reckon any lady wants to see me. Who is she?"

"I don't know who she is," said Monte Bill, "but she's a lady, an' says she's got some news from your wife."

Doubting Dixon started suddenly from his chair, an' then sat back again an' his face was blue, just as though he had been swimming in ice water for an hour or so.

"I don't believe she has got any news from my wife," said Dixon.

"Well, come along out an' see," said Monte Bill. "Hit ain't no use of your sittin' here mooning an' implying as if everybody else but you was a liar. Come along out an' see for yourself."

When Doubting Dixon got up out of the chair, he weaved back and forth a minute, as if he was going to fall, but he braced up, an' went out to the carriage with Bill. There was a lady there sure enough, an' a right handsome one at that, dressed up to kill, an' diamonds all over her where they'd do the most good.

"Is this Mr. Dixon?" said the lady, with a most fascinating smile.

"Yes, m'm," said Dixon, humbly.

"Well, your wife's down at the Tallman House, an' she wants you to see you."

Dixon seized hold of the tire of the carriage wheel to steady himself.

"She wants to take the kid away from me, she's afraid," gasped Dixon with a sickly attempt at a smile in his face.

"Oh, no, I guess not," said the lady pleasantly.

"She's got a divorce an' the custody of the child, an' all that sort of thing, I suppose," Rechemed Dixon, leaning on Pistol Grip's arm for support, as he stepped into the carriage.

"Why, nothing of the kind," said the lady, "but she wants to see you on the way. She came here with me from Boston, where she has been working."

"Working!" said Dixon, blankly.

"Yes, she has been living all alone by herself, and working hard for her support. Get into the carriage with me, an' we will drive down to the hotel."

When they arrived, Dixon met his wife with the "kid" and of reserve, an' poor woman, was almost heart broken. The handsome woman and Dixon had stopped on the way, an' got the kid, an' Mrs. Dixon cried over the boy, and hugged and kissed him. But Dixon he stood to be saved as an ironbound an' never shed a drop, while the woman wasn't the less a face with her tears. Dixon spoke up, an' said.

"Kate, where's the gambler?"

"What gambler?" said Kate, looking suddenly up, an' it seemed as if the tears in her eyes had dried up all the way.

"The gambler chap you took up with."

"It's false," said the woman, "false as hell."

Doubting Dixon looked up wonderfully puzzled at this.

"Didn't you leave me, Kate?" he said.

"I did, Harry," answered the woman. "I left you for your own good. I left you because I saw nothing but ruin for you, body an' soul an' weary poverty for the little boy an' me. You drank the last cent away that you an' I could earn."

"I did bowl up too much," said Dixon, "but then—

"I left the child with his father in the faint hope that it might work in you a reformation. I knew he was the apple of your eye, and trusted he might save you. He has. I now come back to take a last farewell of him an' you an' to thank God for having kept my boy from your society."

"Ben Darnley said you eloped with a gambler an' went to Philadelphia."

"He lied!"

"Your wife speaks the truth," said the handsome lady. "I have known her history since she left your humble home, and she asked me to trust to what I may pray. She comes to you as pure as on the day she left your roof."

Doubting Dixon leaned against the door-post, panting. The strong man's tears were coming now, dropping fast on his face. He looked at the little, wondering kid, an' the kneeling mother, smoothing it with caresses. Then he stepped a way from the door, raising himself a moment as though fearful [illegible]

[illegible]

In another moment the wife and Doubting Dixon were all mixed up in a hugging match, an' the handsome woman from Massachusetts, who had, at her own expense, brought about this happy reunion, looked so pleased and delighted over the success of her scheme, that she really deserved hugging by somebody on her own account.

"That night, Doubting Dixon and Ben Darnley, the famous New York gambler, met.

"You are positive," said Dixon, "that my wife eloped with the Philadelphia faro dealer?"

"Know it," said Darnley. "Why she even hinted once that she would leave home with me if I would come west."

"Say, Darnley, now be honest, didn't you kinder try to take advantage of me an' make love to Kate?"

"Yes, Dixon, since everything is all over now, an' you know just what kind of a woman your wife is, I'll confess that I did. But then, to be honest again, I'll just say that she fairly froze the blood in my veins with indignation. High, ho! This is a curious world, an' very few people ever get out of it alive."

"Right you are," hissed Dixon. "You are right, Darnley. Old man, my wife is safe an' sound in her own home, with her own boy, an' under the protection of her own husband, an' all this in spite of your devilish revenge. Ben Darnley, for years you have kept my wife an' I apart. For years you have daily lied to me, an' worked upon the passions of a weak an' doubting man—"

"Hold hard there, Dixon, or by the gods of war I'll kill you!"

"I doubt it, Darnley. This is a day of retributive justice. You will not kill me."

Ben Darnley was quick with his gun, an' a flash an' report were his answer to Dixon. Then Darnley, turned an' ran into a saloon. He had missed his man. Cooler an' dispassionate, Doubting Dixon, standing outside on the sidewalk, looked down the long, brilliantly lighted saloon. He looked along the bright, shining barrel of his revolver. At the farther end of the saloon crouched Darnley. Cool an' dispassionate, Doubting Dixon took deadly aim, an' down through the ninety feet of glittering light and gilded mirrors he sent a bullet true to the heart of Ben Darnley."—Texas Siftings.

AN AFRICAN EARTHQUAKE.

Graphic Account of an Upheaval in the Tropics.

A correspondent of The London Telegraph residing at Accra, west coast of Africa, sends the following particulars of the recent earthquake at that place: "It was at 10 P. M. on the morning of Sunday, August 19, that several shocks of earthquake were experienced. The evening previous had been hot, with intense perspiration, thus [illegible] being the season of the year when [illegible] the coast, and seat of government, is [illegible] almost entirely [illegible] there and there, where a cluster of huts [illegible] showing evident signs of volcanic origin, jutting into the sea. An [illegible] prevailed all along the coast, lashing the shore with great fury, and especially on the rocky promontories above mentioned. On the night in question it was observed that the surf was particularly violent until about an hour prior to the first shock, when the water seemed to subside and become comparatively calm. I noticed this fact, because it happened that I was suffering from a slight attack of coast fever and was unable to sleep. My first impression on hearing the house rattle in so unusual a manner was that a forcible attempt was being made to force open the doors and windows by persons outside, but before there was time to strike a light a second and more violent shock followed, shaking the foundations. In each case the shock was preceded by an explosion resembling in a great degree the sound usually caused by the discharge of a gun from ships lying in the roadstead. In the native villages around the town the greatest consternation was caused. The native houses, which had been but a few moments before surrounded in darkness, were soon ablaze with light, and the occupants, who have unpleasant recollections of what occurred in 1862 and 1868, immediately huddled together in the open streets, chattering, crying, shouting and praying. Several of the houses which are all built in a shaky manner, succumbed at the second shock, and the loss of life occurred [illegible] castle, which in look, was very old, by an earthquake at the same time of year, fell and [illegible] of the [illegible] generally. WE DO NOT CLAIM that HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA will cure everything, but the fact that on the purity and vitality of the blood depend the vigor and health of the whole system, and that disease of various kinds is often only the sign that nature is trying to remove the disturbing cause, we are naturally led to the conclusion that a remedy that gives life and vigor to the blood, eradicates scrofula and other impurities from it, as HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA undoubtedly does, must be the means of preventing many diseases that would occur without its use; hence the field of its usefulness is quite an extended one, and we are warranted in recommending it for all derangements of the system which are caused by an unnatural state of the blood.

Why Suffer with Salt-Rheum?

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Gentlemen—I was a great sufferer from Salt-Rheum on my limbs, for a space of seven years previous to the summer of 1876, at which time I was cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. The skin would become dry, chap, crack open, bleed and itch intensely, so that I could not help scratching, which of course made them worse. At the time I commenced taking Hood's Sarsaparilla (in the summer of 1876) they were so bad that they discharged, and I was obliged to keep them bandaged with linen cloths. The skin was drawn so tight by the heat of the disease that if I stooped over they would crack open and actually bring tears into my eyes. The first bottle benefited me so much that I continued taking it till I was cured. I used one box of Hood's Olive Ointment, to relieve the itching. Hoping many others may learn the value of Hood's Sarsaparilla and receive as much benefit as I have, I am,

Very truly yours,
MRS. S. S. MOODY,
No. 75 Broadway.

SCROFULA CURED.

PORT BYRON, N.Y., Feb. 20, '83.
Rheumatic Syrup Co.:
I had been doctoring for four years with different physicians, for scrofula, as some called it, but found no relief until I concluded to give it a trial in myself. I commenced taking your Syrup. After taking it a short time, to my surprise it began to have effect, continuing its use a fourth bottle. I think it the best blood purifier I have ever heard of for the cure of rheumatism and neuralgia.

NEURALGIA CURED.

FAIRPORT, N.Y., March 12, '83.
Rheumatic Syrup Co.:
Gents—Since November, 1882, I have been a constant sufferer from neuralgia, and have not known what it was to be free from pain until I commenced the use of Rheumatic Syrup. I find it the best.

TECUMSEH, MICH., NOV. 1, 1883.

John Sherman generously contributed $100 to the Ohio campaign fund. How much did R. B. Hayes contribute?

An Adrian night watch was recently suspended for sleeping on duty. What are we coming to? Has a night policeman no rights which city councils are bound to respect?

John Quincy Adams held office sixty-nine years and drew $435,000 in official salaries. Ohio politicians entertain the highest regard for John Quincy Adams.

The campaign in Massachusetts waxes hotter and hotter. All other issues are now lost sight of except Butler and Anti-Butler. It rather looks as though Ben would get worsted this time.

A Miss Miller brought suit against a Mr. Beck, down in Pennsylvania, for breach of promise. The jury gave her a verdict of $1,008.33, estimating her damages at one cent a kiss. A little wrestling with mental arithmetic will enable one to comprehend the thrilling nature of the testimony which occasioned the verdict.

Alice King is an actress. A Nashville paper described her as a very small woman with a very big nose.—She sued the editor for fifty thousand dollars damages, and didn't get a cent. Thereupon she took an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States. A woman may have a big nose, or a pug nose, or a red nose. This is a matter beyond her control. But should a newspaper reporter, who knows such a nose, ever presume to display a detailed description of said nose in print? This momentous question will soon be judicially decided.

The Salvation Army Livery Stable in Adrian has been undergoing the house cleaning process and the Times says that one would be surprised now at the neatness and order reigning there. The walls have been kalsomined with a sky-green tint, and the pulpit has been given two coats of whitewash. Several tin cuspidors have been purchased. As soon as the water works shall be completed and the new soft soap factory shall be in running order a mammoth bath tub will be constructed to run in connection with the concern. It gives us great pleasure to note these improvements in the Salvation Army headquarters.

Gen. Hazen has just issued from the government printing office a remarkable book entitled "Weather Proverbs." Vennor and Wiggins will hereafter be relegated to back seats. We give a few of the reliable weather signs contained in this interesting official publication. Bears and coons are always restless before rain. When the spaniel sleeps it indicates rain. When a cow stops and shakes her foot it indicates that there is bad weather behind her. When there is enough clear sky to patch a Dutchman's breeches expect fair weather. When the donkey blows his horn, 'tis time to house your hay and corn. When the stars begin to huddle, the earth will soon become a puddle. These few extracts show what a valuable acquisition the book will be to the almanac literature of the present day.

An exceedingly interesting event took place at the White House the other day. Governor Proctor Knott, of Kentucky, presented to President Arthur an elegant fishing rod. It is said to be the most elaborately constructed fishing-rod ever manufactured in this country. It is made in sections like a rattlesnake and opens and shuts like a telescope. There is a silver tip and ring on the small end of the smallest section and a seal skin muff glued on the big end of the biggest section for a handle. The two larger sections are hollow and contain—concealed from the prying eyes of the common herd—a lunch basket, a champagne bottle and a smoking set. Governor Knott's presentation remarks were thrillingly appropriate, and when he alluded to the President's eighty pound bass there wasn't a dry eye in the company. No event of more political significance has transpired at the White House since the days of Andrew Jackson.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30, 1883.

The flurry in Wall Street is not over yet, and the bulls are gradually gaining the ascendency. Every day they take up some new security and toss it up so high as to make the bears dizzy watching its flight. I was at the horse show the other evening, and at one time stood for a few minutes in front of the box occupied by the grand old trotter Goldsmith Maid, owned by Mr. Henry N. Smith. She is now 26 years old, too old to be of any service, and is allowed the free run of Mr. Smith's farm. He is so fond of the old heroine that he would not sell her at any price. Two gentlemen of the Wall Street stripe came up and stood beside me. "Smith is very proud of her," remarked one of them, "and would not dispose of her for any amount." "That's so," replied the other, "but who knows how soon he will be forced to let her go. He got a pretty severe fall in the present bull market, and unless Vanderbilt lets up on him he may have to give up a good many things."

"I think Vanderbilt must enjoy the first night of the opera at the Metropolitan very much. He has made the bears pay for it all, and if he wanted to be liberal could rent the entire orchestra and fill it with tramps if he liked, and not miss the gap such a proceeding would make in his pile of winnings." There is now no doubt that a bull market is coming. The bears are making frantic efforts to maintain their ascendency, but it is plain to everybody that their back is broken.

The Herald's war against the newsdealers has not yet lost a whit of its acrimony, and so far the Herald cannot be said to have got the best of it. The refusal of the Aldermen to allow Mr. Williams to erect Herald newsstands near the stations of the Elevated Road has caused some surprise, but it is easily explained by the fact that it is near election time, and the philanthropic liquor dealers who compose our board of Aldermen intend to make capital out of their aid to "the poor workingmen," against a "bloated millionaire." "How did the Herald get that resolution into the Board?" I asked a man pretty well versed in the petty intricacies of local politics. "Oh, I suppose it was through their City Hall reporter," he replied. "You know the City Hall reporters of the different morning papers are a little power of their own and they work it pretty well. No Alderman would dare refuse them anything for fear of being punished afterward. Now and then however, amusing complications arise. Some time ago, for instance, the Morning Journal, which has its publication office in the basement of the Tribune building desired a permit from the Board to erect a pillar with a sign in front of their establishment. The Tribune people naturally objected. The Journal's reporter got a number of Aldermen, in fact a majority of them to vote for the resolution. The Tribune reporter found out about it and had it killed, as the Tribune naturally has more standing and influence than Albert Pulitzer's fantastic and unreliable little sheet.

The most remarkable new book of the week is Howard Pyle's "Adventures of Robin Hood," published by the Scribners. Mr. Pyle has collected all the floating Robin Hood ballads and made a running connected story of them, and told it in quaint mediæval English. At the same time he has illustrated the text with a number of full page head piece and tail piece illustrations in the mediæval English style. Mr. Pyle's effects are very happy. He has evidently studied Holbein and Durer to much profit, and their quaint vigor is reflected in his lines. The publication of this book has revived in literary circles the discussion as to whether such a being as Robin Hood ever existed.

Rowell, the pedestrian is on his way over to this country on the Alaska. He has been challenged by Fitzgerald, and the walk will come off within the next two months. Since Rowell's departure from this country, Fitzgerald has become an Alderman of Long Island City. The spectacle of seeing him wear out the little Englishman on the tan bark arena, will be a very edifying and dignified one, and Long Island City may be proud of her city father.

The Horse Show, which has been in progress this week has been a financial success, but otherwise it is a failure. The quality of the horses as a rule is below par. The only exception is among the trotters. The exhibitions in riding are very silly. They remind one very much of the donkey acts in the circus.

Mathew Arnold has been astonishing everybody by his naive innocence. He seems to be in fear of being mobbed for what he said about Americans years ago, and seems bent on conciliating them by saying that he has frequently read American newspapers. Poor fellow, nobody thinks of him. That pushing lion hunter, Mr. Carnegie, who made a coaching tour through England and wrote a silly book on it, has taken him up and no doubt hopes to be regarded as a sort of nineteenth century Mecenas through associating with the philosopher.

Poor Mrs. Jenkins can't be merry,
For her mouth shows bad teeth and breath;
But let her use the great "Teaberry,"
And there'll be danger of laughing herself to death.

Evening News: Most of the Adrian churches are grouped near one common center, and as each church has tried to get the loudest bell and most muscular bell ringer, the racket they make Sundays and prayer meeting nights is enough to make all but the deaf backslide, and sick people have to be removed to the suburbs in order to die sane.

In the last issue of the Adrian Weekly Times, under the head of Tecumseh Topics, is an item relating to the arrest of Ed. Karns for the assault of Michael Wilson. The man who wrote the article must have drawn largely upon his imagination for his facts. Karns assaulted Mr. Wilson, that is true, was arrested therefor and fined $15, and costs, but Mr. Wilson's daughter had nothing to do with the affair at all and was away from home when it occurred. The trouble arose out of business matters between Karns and Wilson. The effort to drag the name of an innocent girl into the affair is entirely uncalled for and hence we make this statement to set Mr. Wilson right before the public.

HEROES AND HEROINES OF THE BORDER.

In American history there are no more interesting figures than the Heroes and Heroines of the Border. Bold, dashing, adventurous and patriotic; loyal to friends, to country and to the interests of society, their work was singularly effective in the advancement of civilization. With seeming recklessness, their efforts were in the interest of the law and order, and the people owe them a debt of gratitude they do not forget. Their page in history is as facinating as it is honorable, and there is a peculiar pleasure in reading the narrative of their wonderful exploits.

The times which produced those heroes and heroines mark a period in American history of absorbing interest alike to old and young. It is proper that it should be so. These hardy pioneers coupled virtue with courage, humanity and love of country with the stern duties of frontier life and battle, and the example of their lives not only interests but strengthens our faith and admiration in human courage and unselfish purpose.

In American pioneer history there are three distinct eras marked as distinctly by three geographical divisions; from the Alleghany Mountains to the Mississippi, marking the first; from the Mississippi to the Rocky Mountains the second; California and the Pacific Slope the third. The settlement of the vast regions developed great leaders, whose achievements have made them justly and widely famous. They have a warm place in the hearts of the people, and a prominent one in their admiration. It is appropriate that their achievements should be recorded, and we note with pleasure the forthcoming of a new book, now ready, from the press of N. D. Thompson & Co., Publishers, New York and St. Louis, Mo., called: "Conquering the Wilderness, or New Pictorial History of the Life and Times of the Pioneer Heros and Heroines of America."

It is written by Col. Frank Triplett, an accomplished writer, whose literary qualifications and great experience on the frontiers are said to eminently fit him for so noble a task.

A special feature of the book is its apt and profuse illustrations, embracing 220 superb engravings, illustrating incidents and persons—the latter embracing nearly 100 life-like portraits of pioneer leaders, never before given—men and women—which make it a sort of picture gallery, as well as a book of thrilling narrative, that will lend to the book a charm and interest not to be resisted.

It is sold by subscription, through canvassing agents, and presents an opportunity to agents to make money especially inviting. We advertise it in another column.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD.

TECUMSEH, MICH., NOV. 1, 1883.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

Milan is to have a knitting works factory.

Harry Snell was at home a day or two last week.

Ten states will hold elections on the 6th of November.

Thanks to Dr. Hause for late copies of Florida papers.

Three doctors have offices in the new Ormsby block at Deerfield.

We have a new time card of the T. & A. A. road in this week's issue.

The material has arrived for the Hudson and Addison telephone line.

There are four married men and one widower attending the Adrian college.

Miss Anna Barker, of Saratoga, N. Y., is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Bates.

Thanks to Earl and Carl Updike for the present they sent us last Saturday.

The pay roll of the M. & O. railway company for the past month was over $80,000.

The Morenci village sexton is very ill, and it is feared that he will pass in his checks.

Workmen have been engaged the past week in repairing the roof of the opera house.

Aunt Laura Haviland has been visiting at Cadillac and was the guest while there of C. T. Chapin.

That ancient refrain "meet me at the gate, love" will now be sung no more until the weather gets warmer.

Remenyi, the celebrated violinist, will appear at the Adrian opera house on Tuesday evening next, Nov. 6th. He will be supported by Miss Jennie Dutton, soprano; Adolph Bauer, pianist, and Edmond De Celle, tenor.

Rose leaves should never be thrown away. Dry them and place them in a box. They are useful for scenting linen and a very cooling wash for inflamed eyes when steeped in warm water and then left to cool before applying.

Saline Observer: A floating item says that there are twenty-five shades of gray in the hair stores. That's nothing; an Ann Arbor boarding-house butter dish could give them several points and beat them at least a few shades.

Cadillac News: Mrs. C. T. Chapin made a successful attack upon a porcupine one day last week while driving out to Selma. The little animal showed good spunk but was vanquished in the end, and there was not enough left of him to show to what kingdom he belonged.

She lives at Kalamazoo, and, seeing her husband dodge in a saloon, she also walked in, ranged herself up in line with him before the bar, ordered a glass of beer, and as she drank it off, remarked that if her hubby was going to perdition she was going right along with him.—Eve. News.

A change has been made in the Tecumseh telephone exchange. Stacy Bros. have relinquished the local management and Mr. Sidney Baker, of Adrian, has been appointed in their place. Mr. Baker is well posted in the details of telephone management and our business men will find it a pleasure to do business with him. The office will remain in the HERALD building as heretofore. The state line instrument will be removed upstairs.

The Lilley House will soon undergo a change which will be a great improvement. The store just vacated by Slayton & Kinney will be changed over into an office, reading room, etc., for the hotel. The partition separating the present office and dining room will be torn out, thus doubling the size of the dining room, and extending it to the railroad street sidewalk. These changes will put the hotel in first-class shape, and will give Tecumseh a public house second to none in the county.

The Drs. K. & K., U. S. Medical and Surgical Association's Surgeons. Call promptly on the following date at the place mentioned, where one or more of the physicians can be consulted free, as follows: At the Lilley House, Monday, Nov. 5. Notice to the public: Some itinerant vagabonds are traveling in Michigan spreading small handbills leading people to understand that they represent our Association: They are frauds. All our consulting surgeons carry credentials bearing our Corporate Seal. Consultation free.

Marshall Statesman: A petition is being circulated among our citizens, asking that the M. & O. depot be located just west of Kalamazoo avenue. It is receiving many signatures. This should have been done before, for the officials of the M. & O. have supposed the only sentiment that existed here was in favor of locating it at the east end. Those favoring the east end location have heretofore been the only ones to urge the matter before them, and the west end people have been apathetic. Now that a disposition is shown to represent the choice of a second party, the result may be different.

Leap year is not far off.

Thanksgiving Nov. 29th.

The wood market is brisk with but little offering.

Coal bins and wood piles are receiving attention.

The "Baptist Items" for November will be issued next Saturday.

Several car loads of telegraph poles are now at Dundee for use along the line of the M. & O. railroad.

The season for auctions is again at hand, and the HERALD office is the place to have your bills printed.

There are 124 policies in force in the township of Tecumseh in the Farmers' Mutual Insurance Company.

Strangers will have to be careful in wandering about Milan or they will get lost. That burg now boasts of 23 streets.

Bashful young men and anxious young ladies should bear in mind that it is only a little over two months to leap year.

A. B. Cotton made Tecumseh a brief visit last week. He is well pleased with his business prospects at West Bay City.

Blinn Tallman is making some excellent cider this fall. If you doubt this assertion go up there and sample some of it.

Canadian marriages will be all the rage now with Yankee girls. The word "obey" has been dropped from the service.

The trustees of the M. E. church will sell at auction on Saturday next, at 2 P. M., the wire fence which now surrounds the church lot.

Persons having drain orders should hand them to the supervisor of their township for presentation at the December session of the Board.

Joe Sage will give one of his popular dancing parties on Friday evening, Nov. 9th, at Macon Center. A good time is guaranteed to all who attend.

Manchester boys make so much noise in the streets at night that the council have instructed the marshal to make arrests if the nuisance is not stopped.

Dr. Mincer has returned from Detroit and is now ready to serve the citizens of this county. Orders left at Central Hotel, Adrian, will be promptly attended to.

Notice Slayton & Kinney's new advertisement on third page. They are to have a grand opening Nov. 10th, when all goods in store will be sold at a greatly reduced price.

Exchanges are asking folks to keep the sidewalks freed from leaves especially in wet weather, as a person slips up as easily on a leaf as on a piece of orange peel.

The old straw hat, the dear straw hat, the hat of the summer that all know so well, rests now in the garret, the cobwebby garret, the garret forlorn and of long musty smell.

On the evening of November 9th Co. C will give the first of a series of dancing parties at their armory.—Good music has been engaged and a good time will be had by all who attend.

Can it be that Haroun al Raschid is a member of our city government?—Adrian Times. Just as likely as not. You have had all sorts of things in that city government of late years.—Evening News.

Mrs. R. Ford, of this village, is visiting her daughter Addie at St. Paul, Minn., and reports having a splendid time. She will visit friends at Racine, Grand Rapids and Ionia before returning home.

The Presbyterian church has just been carpeted with a new and beautiful carpet which adds much to its attractiveness and comfort. The ladies of the church intend to soon uphol-ster all the seats.

John R. Clark will be home on Saturday next, Nov. 3d. On Sunday, the 4th, inst., he will address a union meeting at Clayton, and on Monday, the 5th, he will speak at Dover Center, giving his To and Fro in London the 244th time.

If you have a cough or cold try Dr. Keegan's Lung Balsam. It is pronounced by those who have used it to be the best medicine in the market.—Jas. Dunnigan, of Napoleon, is the Gen. Agt. for the U. S. We have tried it and have no hesitancy in pronouncing it A No. 1.

Gainsley & Co. take the lead in the dry goods trade. Their store is now crowded to overflowing with a mammoth stock of fall and winter goods, and they have a most accommodating corps of clerks who know how to sell them. Far full particulars read the eighth page of this paper.

A funny case is reported from Wampun, Wisconsin: S. J. Hudson, of Belvidere, Ill., came there recently with two children, in search of his runaway wife. He found her masquerading in male attire, under the name of Frank Dubois. She was living with Gertrude Fuller, having been married to her early last spring, by the Rev. H. L. Morrison, at the home of the bride's mother. The deception had not been suspected, and, doing odd jobs of painting, she was making sufficient to support them both.

"Dit" Nixon, of Adrian, spent last Sunday with friends in Tecumseh.

Our presses are kept busy now days supplying the demand for job printing.

Our merchants are vieing with each other in handsomely trimmed windows.

Eighteen hundred is the exact number of Tecumseh HERALDS we print this week.

Dr. D. D. Meeker and J. S. Strong were re-elected elders of the Presbyterian church, at an election held last Sunday.

A note received from Rev. J. Phelps announces the fact that services will be resumed in St. Peter's church on Sunday next, Nov. 4th.

The registration law was changed at the last session of the legislature so that persons wishing to register can hand their names to the supervisor, treasurer or clerk, instead of to the clerk only, as heretofore.

L. F. Wheeler took one of his paintings to Detroit last week. A member of the executive committee saw it, and in consequence, the picture can be seen at the Art Loan during the balance of the time the exhibition remains open.

Lenawee county is represented in the university by Miss Libbie Rowley in literary department, Fred. Seger in medical department, Frank Seger in dental college, Fred B. Wood, of Tecumseh, Thomas C. Sawyer, of Hudson, and Geo. W. Ayres in law dept. The whole number in attendance is 1,212, as follows: Literary dept., 510; law, 278; medical, 473; dental 61.

We passed an hour's leisure yesterday afternoon in calling upon the offices of the Saginaw Herald and Courier. The latter is now located in a new building and is in a prosperous condition. Col. Deland surrenders possession of the Herald to the lessees this morning. We enjoyed a pleasant chat with the Colonel. Upon handing him the Stacy-Bigelow marriage notice we inquired the fee. His reply was, "Nothing, my dear sir; we never charge anything for marrying off a printer."

Hudson Gazette: Some Adrian folk are kicking a little about the size and make up of the new court house committee. It is suggested that a committee of three good practical mechanics or builders outside of the board of supervisers would have been better and looked more disinterested and business-like. Perhaps, however, if the chairmanship had gone to Adrian instead of Hudson, the pickings for a couple of years would have mollified the critical. The principal objection to Mr. Swaney will probably be distance from the county seat.

OUR WAYWARD PARTNER.

The bachelor ownership of the HERALD was irretrievably broken on yesterday afternoon at three o'clock. At that hour Mr. Geo. N. Stacy, junior partner of our firm, was united in marriage to Miss Gertrude Bigelow, daughter of Rev. A. J. Bigelow, now Presiding Elder of the Saginaw District, at the home of the bride's parents in East Saginaw. The knot was appropriately tied by Rev. John Wilson, Pastor of the M. E. church, assisted by the father of the bride. The attendance was not large, as the acquaintances of both parties lived far away, but the numerous letters of regret and handsome gifts received bore witness that they were most kindly remembered by all their friends. It was a cosy, home-like wedding, blessed with friendship and good cheer. It occurred on the anniversary of Halloween, the festival observed in bonny Scotland, when young people play necromantic games to discover their future partners, and the fairies hold their annual carnival. Is not this coincidence a happy omen? We believe they have chosen well. Encomiums upon the bride are superfluous, as she has long been known and highly esteemed in this community. In behalf of the HERALD boys who know the groom best, we extend to them our heartiest hand-shake, and our sincerest wishes for a bon voyage down the river of life.

Who Killed Tecumseh.

Youth's Companion: In the campaign of 1836, Martin Van Buren, of New York, and Col. Richard M. Johnson, of Kentucky, were the Democratic candidates for president and vice-president. One of the "bearing questions" of the canvass was, "Who killed Tecumseh?" The friends of Johnson claimed that he charged up to the great Indian leader, while surrounded by his warriors and shot him dead.

The Whigs, on the other hand, derided Johnson's claim to be the hero of the battle, and brought forward several claimants for that honor. Among others was Col. Skinner, who had emigrated to Texas. The colonel was put upon the western stump to settle the disputed question, and he did it in this style:

"Feller citizens," said the colonel with a knowing look, "I was at the battle where Tecumseh was killed—I was. I commanded a regiment there—I did!

"I'm not gwine to say who did kill Tecumseh—I won't! But this much I will say, Tecumseh was killed by one of my pistols. Gentlemen, I leave it to your knowledge of human nature to say if a man would be apt to lend out his pistols on an occasion of that sort."

To their credit, the "boys" were not convinced by that way of putting the case.

COUNTY CONDENSATIONS.

Watson's Tray Factory, of Deerfield, is running again.

The Japanese Liniment Concert Company returned home last week from a successful trip.

Judge Geddes has revoked his appointment of special commissioner to clear out the river Raisin.

Ryder Post G. A. R., of Deerfield, will have a house warming when they take possession of their new hall.

The prospects are favorable for the establishment of a Young Men's Christian Association in Hudson.

A Springville firm wants 1,000 bushels of cider apples. They will want them some time before getting them this fall.

There will be a dance at Ayres Hall in Springville to-morrow evening. Music by Barlow and Williams' full orchestra.

The racks in the apple dryer of the Morenci canning works caught fire last week and were damaged to the extent of fifty dollars.

The drain business is a leading industry in this county now. It is estimated that over fifty miles of ditch will be constructed this fall.

Adrian Press: Hiram Emerson walked off with the Morenci Observer premium for the bushel of best potatoes, and Dar walked off with the potatoes.

Adrian Press: Some newspaper is liable to have a big patronage, as the Clayton merchants propose to have a list of all dead-beats on their books published, and the accounts offered for sale.

The Adrian city supervisors kicked because the Board raised their assessments. They wanted their city assessments to remain the same as they were three or four years ago before the business boom struck the city.

Supervisor Ira Swaney has been appointed chairman of a committee of five of the county board, to supervise the construction of a $75,000 court house.—Hudson Post.

The county appropriation is $50,000, but perhaps Adrian intends to do her duty and pay $25,000 additional towards the construction of the building.

Deerfield Record: A. G. Rood, living one-half mile west of the village, lost a valuable horse Sunday. The animal was in the road, and the gate being open it got upon the Canada Southern, near J. Heminway, jr.'s barn, and tried to walk the railroad bridge, but fell through, broke a leg, and had to be killed.

Dundee Reporter: Our friend Boardman of the Petersburg Bulletin, was in Deerfield, Monday, and is reported as having engaged in fishing—not in the waters of the Raisin for pickerel, but in a different kind of a pond—for his watch which he lost therein. Moral: before drinking sweet cider at Deerfield secure your watch by dropping it into the boot leg.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Baker celebrated their silver wedding at their residence west of Adrian on the 17th ult. They entertained a very large company, and five generations of relatives were present at the dinner table. Friends were present from New York, Ohio, Kansas and Texas and from Grand Rapids, Detroit, Chelsea, Jackson and Hudson in this state.

Adrian Press: A colored boy, aged fifteen, son of Samuel Foster, was arrested Tuesday and tried for drawing a loaded pistol and threatening to shoot some of the girls at the North Branch school of which he was a member. He has been a source of great trouble for a long time and Justice Long sent him to the Reform School till he becomes of age.

Blissfield Advance: There is a little drain which crosses the road between Riga and Deerfield. It is only two rods long, yet a special commissioner was called for to construct the ditch. He gets in seventeen days at $3 per day, the surveyor must be paid, advertising, etc., making a total cost of nearly a hundred dollars. All for a job that a man could dig in half a day.

Clinton News: Last Friday Bert Kishpaugh met with a painful and, for the time being, serious accident. He was loading clover seed on the farm and was thrown from the load by the team starting up. He struck on his head and shoulders, and was picked up insensible. He soon regained consciousness and was taken to the house. He experienced a great deal of pain in the back and neck and was at times delirious during the day, but we are glad to learn, has now recovered from the shock.

Morenci Observer: "The glorious uncertainty of the law" was again illustrated last week, in a legal tilt, which one of our citizens had with a Fayette man in the courts of Wauseon. The lawyers talked encouragingly, the testimony seemed all right, and everything went swimmingly for Morenci until the verdict—the essential thing—was reached, which was for Fayette. The Buckeyes are acting strangely this fall anyway, and nothing but the quinine which Judge Hoadly took for his "ager" seems to work correctly.

What Struck an Old Soldier.

[illegible] years since the war closed.

Under the date of August, 1882, the village of Dover, N. H., lay still as the sphinx in Egypt. Abner Elkins sharp, of that place, slowly and with speak of the past. "Yes," he said, "I was in the army and saw many of the sights of those earthly years. I was finally discharged from the army, coming home sandy and [illegible] from inactivity, which I had [illegible] and that I was in the shape to appreciate the warmer weather to my blood once in more.

"That was enough," [illegible] responded Mr. Sharp [illegible] "Now, I'll tell you what happened when my condition I began taking Parker's Tonic and my health commenced to improve right away. I was astonished at it and so was my wife. I slept like a log and could eat anything. My nerves got strong up. I could attend to business without stopping. Now I have to take a vacation, leaving my wife to look after the farm. I was [illegible] I enclosed. What a difference there are in things, you see, and this one, Parker's Tonic, saves."

This preparation which has been known as Parker's Ginger Tonic, will hereafter be advertised and sold simply under the name of Parker's Tonic, omitting the word "Ginger." Hitherto it has been necessary to make this change by the action of disappointed dealers who have for years deceived their customers by substituting inferior preparations under the name of ginger. We think the misleading word all the more willingly as Ginger is an important and governing ingredient in the old preparation.

There is no change however in the preparation itself, and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers wrapped under the name of Parker's Ginger Tonic contain the same medicine that the signature of Hiram Ketchum is on each wrapper.

PLAY-WRITERS.

Extraordinary Profits in Successful Play-Writing.

Bartley Campbell is Successful But Not Happy.

[illegible] talking to a theatrical man to-day I picked up these items, correct or incorrect. "Theatres in one sense, are boys's carried out," said he. "A man writes a play, for instance, in the United States, and his chances are very small of having it accepted. A literary man of very respectable talent in New York not long ago wrote a play which gave himself and friends great satisfaction, and a certain manager who bears a reputation for literary discrimination gave his personal promise to the composer's friend that it should be the coming piece, and promptly, too. The writer was overjoyed, and carried his own piece to the theatre and saw it laid in the manager's hands. Months passed by and no word was received. At the expiration of six months he sent for his piece, and it was not till one year had passed that it was returned, and then only after getting drunk and going to the theatre with a club and behaving in a most boisterous manner, falling through doors, box offices, screens and others things. If he had not really wanted the money his manuscript might never have been returned. They sent it back with great thanks. When he came to look at it he found just some gum had been put over the leaves, which had been stuck together from the time we sent it, and this gum was clear proof the leaves had never been opened."

"Well," said I to my acquaintance, who is a pretty deep man in theatricals, "is that the way managers conduct themselves?"

"There is one theatre in New York," said he "which has employed a man and pays him a salary to read plays. That theatre, though it was started by persons new to theatricals, has made more money than any concern in New York. The money really lies in original pieces, but our managers are often dull, imitative men who pay enormous royalties for the cut-and-dried stuff from London, and sometimes from Paris, putting no other value on their fellow-citizens than a foreign seal. Here, for instance, is the 'Silver King' running at Wallack's. It owes its entire strength to a few strong melodramatic situations. It has neither comedy nor character to speak of. They have to pay for it well."

"How much do they pay?" said I.

"Well, it has been bought by a speculator, who farms it out. I think he gets about 10 per cent of the gross receipts at every performance. The theater contains perhaps $1,200, seven times a week, on which the speculator will receive $700. Now, that sum of money would pleasure in writing by a respectable man in this country of a play."

"Are there many plays written by Americans?"

"Oh, yes; the production has been very large for some time past. The Madison Square theater has been paying good prices for plays, and has made money all the time, both in New York and on the road. Mrs. Burnett has concluded a contract for another play with them. Brandon Howard probably has made a contract for another one. They look ahead, and do not pay the Bohemian like most of our managers, who seem to have neither bow nor beam, nor center-board."

"What do you suppose a woman like Mrs. Burnett would get for her play?"

"I merely guess when I say that she may get $2,000 on signing the agreement, give her $500 to each act as it is produced, and then pay her from 10 to 20 per cent of the gross receipts after the play begins. That is way to bring out the quality of authors who has got it, to put them under the highest pressure of competition."

"How does Bartley Campbell do with his pieces?"

"Campbell is now worth about $40,000. He drinks champagne when he used to drink beer. I met him the other day, strong as ever, and he cried out, 'Hello! Have you already come to life?' Now, said he, 'I am not half as happy as when I drank beer. My happiest days are over. There was a time when I could not pay my printing bills, take my company out of town without owing part of my board bill, and could not buy railroad tickets for them to the next point, but said to the conductor, 'Jim, you must let me alone this time, I have no money and take the rest out in trade.' Ah, said Campbell, those were golden days. Now I can draw a check for my company and have no bright colloquies with the conductor, and drink champagne. Yet I am comparatively miserable. So, you see, life is not a bed of roses.'"

"How does Campbell make his money?"

"Why, he hires the manager as well as his company. He picks up a man acquainted with the profession to get him up a company to suit his purse, and, there one need have nothing to say except to object to such a part being imperfectly represented. While he is not a man of strictly literary capacity, he is a man of very good dramatic capacity, and having lost money by writing over the heads of his audience, now writes toward the hearts and seldom misses it."

"Do you think that the New York theatres draw the money they ought to?"

"No. Their ignorance, laziness, prejudice and superstition keep from their doors thousands of people who would cultivate a native drama which would amuse the literary instinct. In Paris the best actors of the play are people who rather think they could write one or two acts. I the subject of the original drama as a piece of patriotism. The stage becomes more and more the indication of a nation's mental resources and love of country. In New York we play British pieces, French pieces and German pieces, and even the Italian drama is creeping in here; but a man writes pieces about his own country at his peril. The New York press, indeed, is a foreign press. It affects to treat matters from all portions of the United States like the London Times treats the operations of Frenchmen, Socialists and Nihilists. The tone of this press is given to it by a set of emigrants, who appear not liable to arouse the hostility of its obscure native managers. We have a few play-writers whose pieces draw money on the other side of the water, but they are hardly noticed in the New York newspapers. Here are McKee Rankin's two plays, each of which has run in London a whole season, and you would find in London that they were by an American author, and his name exploited; but in New York you would have to go into some actor's chop-house to inquire who wrote the pieces, and then you would hear that the actor did it himself—so great is conceit. Most of our actors, after they get a piece a few weeks, go around with a swagger and call the author a great villain. 'I got the piece from him, says Stuff, 'and it wasn't worth a damn. I built it up—it's mine.' In short, the New York stage to-day has some of the most provincial attributes on the earth. They will buy failures from London and have lawsuits over failures from Paris, because they really do not know anything about theatrical work. Lester Wallack said but yesterday that he knew nothing about plays, that unexpected successes were made in his house by things he had never admired."

Youth's Companion

A recent census bulletin shows that of the various states and territories, New Mexico is the most illiterate and Iowa the least. In the former state only 2 per cent of the population above ten years of age cannot read, while in the former territory 60 per cent cannot read. In Massachusetts the percentage of persons who cannot read is about 6 per cent, in New York about 4 per cent, and in Ohio about 3 per cent. The southern states are more illiterate than the states of any other section of the country, 48 per cent of the population in South Carolina being unable to read.

All baneful infections of the blood are promptly removed by Ayres Sarsaparilla. Sold by all druggists.

A remedy that has proven itself a never failing cure for scrofula and all syphilitic disorders must quickly cure less terrible blood diseases. Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla is such a perfect blood purifier and strengthener of bodily functions, that it cures the above diseases even when Hot Springs and all other treatment has failed. Remember, it is absolutely free from mineral poisons, and will not injure the most delicate constitution. Its use will make you feel buoyant, strong and well, and will rid your system of all blood impurities and every internal and external indication of disease.

Cured His Hump.

A day or two ago, as the passengers were leaving one of the ferry boats, a gentleman who stood beside a city policeman remarked,

"When I see a poor fellow like that I am consoled for not being rich."

"Why?"

"Why, there's a man with the hump on his back. I'd rather be poor all my days than be deformed and have millions of money."

"I can cure him in about five minutes; come and see," replied the officer, as he walked toward the unfortunate and invited him to pass up stairs. There was a kick, but he had to go and three or four minutes' time sufficed to remove his deformity, which consisted of twenty-two yards of flannel and six pairs of socks.

"Purty smart!" growled the smuggler, as he was allowed to go.

"Not so very," was the reply; "a man who carries a hump on his back should carry a stiff neck. You didn't."—Detroit Free Press.

All weakness and ill health owes its origin to an impure state of the blood and a weakness of the urinary and digestive organs. A medicine that will strengthen these organs, and at the same time purify the blood, will assist nature in curing nearly every disease that human flesh and blood is heir to. Such a remedy is Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla, and, although it possesses no cathartic or diuretic effect, its use will soon establish a regular habit of body as well as cure weakness of the kidneys, indicated by urinary sediments, nervousness, etc.

A Beautiful Woman in a Painter's Eyes.

I was standing on Broadway, a few days since, talking with my friend James H. Beard, the celebrated animal painter, his tall figure and long white locks attracting the attention of passers-by. While we were discussing art topics a very beautiful woman went past. I touched my friend, calling his attention to her. Said

"By jove! Jim, look! such a creature!"

Striking a [illegible] pose he looked at her critically, with the eye of a connoisseur, and finally said: "Yes, she is as beautiful as Venus."

I don't know precisely how the lady would have liked the criticism had she heard it, but it was meant as a compliment. He spoke as an artist, rather than as a man.

It is well to know the best remedy for coughs and colds, soreness of the throat and lungs, consumption and all pulmonary diseases, is Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. It quickly allays inflammation and checks decay.

Speech-Recording Invention.

One of the most interesting exhibits at the Vienna Electrical Exhibition is Gentilli's glossograph, a little instrument by which speech is automatically reproduced as soon as uttered. A small apparatus is placed in the mouth of the speaker in contact with the roof of his mouth, his tongue and lips—and on being connected with an electro-magnetic registering apparatus the sounds are committed to paper. It is constructed in such a manner as not to cause any inconvenience to the speaker, neither is it necessary that the voice should be raised, as it reproduces a whisper as exactly as a shout; the only condition is a correct and distinct articulation. According to the inventor's calculation, it will be possible to write four or five times as fast by means of the glossograph as has hitherto been possible even by the quickest writer. The chief difficulty to the introduction of the glossograph says the Pall Mall Gazette, will not be [illegible] in deciphering the [illegible] It is not impossible that with the help of a second automatic apparatus the characters produced by the glossograph may be translated into our common type-writing. The orthography would doubtless appear strange, but in these days of phonetic spelling this might not long be a hindrance.

Hysteria and Nervous Prostration.

We give our readers an extract from a cheerful letter written by Mrs. Elizabeth Smith, of Richmond, Ind., who says: "Samaritan Nervine cured me of hysteria and nervous prostration." Comment is useless.

Do not try to milk cows, especially heifers, too rapidly; milk with a steady, continuous movement, and not by jerks.

Dearer to Nature.

Nature has made her laws with us, which we must obey or suffer the penalty. This penalty is often lung or throat trouble, which leads on to consumption. Every man believes consumption incurable. People have been educated to this belief which is proven incorrect by Dr. Bigelow's Positive Cure, which is nature's great helpmate, and it cures consumption and all throat and lung diseases speedily and permanently. NEW BLOOMFIELD, Miss., Jan. 2, '80.

I wish to say to you that I have been suffering for the last five years with a severe itching all over. I have heard of Hop Bitters and have tried it. I have used up four bottles, and it has done me more good than all the doctors and medicines that they could use on or with me. I am old and poor but feel to bless you for such a relief by your medicine and from torment of the doctors. I have had fifteen doctors at me. One gave me seven ounces of solution of arsenic; another took four quarts of blood from me. All they could tell was that it was skin sickness. Now, after these four bottles of your medicine, my skin is well, clean and smooth as ever.

MADE ON PURPOSE.

One of Those Mistakes Which are More Frequent than Profitable.

"Why, my child, this is not Benson's Capcine Porous Plaster," said a father to his little daughter, after examining a package she had just brought from the drug store.

"Isn't it papa? I'm sorry, but I asked the man for Benson's—I know I did, and he took the 25c you gave me to pay for it with," exclaimed the child positively. "Maybe the drug man made a mistake."

"I'll go 'round myself and see," was the gentleman's comment, as he dogged his coat and hat.

"Why didn't you send me Benson's plaster, instead of this cheap and trashy thing?"

"Why, I thought that would suit you just as well."

"You thought! you thought! What business had you to think? I don't pay you for thinking, but for filling my order," said the indignant caller, contemptuously. "There! take that thing back and give me my money. I'll get what I want elsewhere."

A NEW TREATMENT.

For Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, Dyspepsia, Catarrh, Headache, Debility, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all Chronic and Nervous Disorders.

A CARD.

We the undersigned, having received great and permanent benefit from the use of "COMPOUND OXYGEN," prepared and administered by Drs. STARKEY & PALEN, of Philadelphia, and being satisfied that it is a new discovery in medical science, and all that is claimed for it, consider it a duty which we owe to the many thousands who are suffering from chronic and so-called incurable diseases to do all that we can to make its virtues known, and to inspire the public with confidence.

We have personal knowledge of Drs. Starkey & Palen. They are educated, intelligent and conscientious physicians, who will not, we are sure, make any statement which they do not know or believe to be true, nor publish any testimonials or reports of cures which are not genuine.

DR. B. MINCER,

Scientific Optician!

I have devoted 25 years wholly to a study of the eye, and how to aid vision properly, and I make a specialty of fitting glasses to the eyes that have been injured by cheap, inferior glasses. I manufacture every kind of glasses, and guarantee satisfaction. Read what prominent physicians of Adrian say:

Having for some time past used glasses to improve my sight, without satisfactorily gaining my object, I called on Mr. Mincer, optician, of Detroit, who readily adapted glasses to my eyes, with which I am so well pleased, that I cheerfully speak in his favor. His method of examining and his application in selecting glasses to fit the eye can only be acquired by a knowledge of the useful organ to which must be added extensive experience. He has also adapted glasses to Mrs. Baker's eyes with which she is well pleased. I recommend him to all who need glasses adapted to their wants; poor glasses are an abomination.

N. A. BAKER, M.D.

ADRIAN, Nov. 18, 1882.

I have used spectacles bought of Mr. B. Mincer for the past three months, and find them superior to any I have ever used, and can cheerfully recommend him to anyone in need of glasses, and the benefit of his experience in the science of optics to adjust proper lenses.

DANIEL TODD, M.D.

I have investigated the work of Mr. B. Mincer, optician. I have reason to believe that he understands his profession, and adjusts excellent glasses on scientific principles. C. RYND, M.D.

REMEMBER!

I will visit every town in the county during the month.

A CLEAR HEAD.

"One year ago I was induced to try AYER'S PILLS as a remedy for Indigestion, Constipation, and Headache, from which I had long been a great sufferer. Commencing with a dose of five Pills, I found their action easy, and obtained prompt relief. In continuing their use, a single Pill taken after dinner, daily, has been all the medicine I have required. AYER'S PILLS have kept my system regular and my head clear, and benefited me more than all the medicines ever before tried. Every person similarly afflicted should know their value. 152 State St., Chicago, June 6, 1882.

M. V. WATSON."

For all diseases of the stomach and bowels, try AYER'S PILLS.

YELLOWSTONE PARK.

The Monuments Upon the Great National Park.

Murat Halstead.

There is a public sensibility about the Yellowstone park that honors the people, and is gratifying, because it proves that they feel that the park is their property. Intense feeling has been aroused about the leases that have been granted to Uncle Rufus Hatch, and threats have been made that Uncle Rufus should suffer for his temerity, and General Brisben, who has a fancy that he was forcordained to be the great and only admiral of Yellowstone lake, and who thinks that the stern-wheel steamboat should paddle the golden waters and bear no sound save her own dashings, and witness no rival smoke from a competing chimney of galvanized iron in all her journeyings, has contributed to the public perplexity some literary efforts that need explanation.

I am enabled to contribute a fact or two to the Yellowstone controversy that may have general application. There is to be a rush of visitors to the national park this year. The Northern Pacific railroad runs fifty-six miles north of the northern boundary of the park, and a branch line will be built to the park itself as soon as possible. The Northern Pacific is finished to a point opposite the park, and the whole line will be completed by August 1.

Now, Uncle Rufus Hatch has leased a few ten-acre fields, to erect hotels for the accommodation of travelers. Without the leases there could not be hotels, without hotels all visitors would have to carry camp equipage, and that would give a monopoly of visiting to those prepared to expend large sums in providing a suitable outfit for their shelter and protection. Uncle Rufus means to keep a few good hotels.

The members of the Western associated press who are to visit Yellowstone park this summer, at such time as they may appoint, as guests of the Northern Pacific railroad, should not be severe beyond the dictates of conscience on an arrangement that will provide them with hotel accommodations, and all citizens should be grateful if, at the same time, provision is made for the protection of the wonders of nature in the park from those barbarians, whose peculiar degradation has already been illustrated by setting fire to venerable forests, hacking and mutilating picturesque objects, and spoiling the magnificent geysers with stones and logs. In comparison with the hideous product of recklessness and wantonness capable of such acts of destruction and desecration, the wild Indian, though called a savage, is to be esteemed a gentleman.

Pa and the Hot Maple Syrup.

Peck's Sun.

Last night we had hot maple syrup, and biscuit for supper, and pa had a saucer full in front of him, just a steaming. I could see he was thinking too much about his mining stock, and I thought if there was anything I could do to take his mind off of it, and place it on something else, I would be doing a kindness that would be appreciated. I sat on the right of pa, and when he wasn't looking I pulled the table cloth so the saucer of red hot maple syrup dropped off in his lap. Well, you'd a died to see how quick his thoughts turned from his financial troubles to his physical misfortunes. There was about a pint of hot syrup, and it went all over his lap, and you know how hot melted maple sugar is, and how it sort of clings to anything. Pa jumped up and grabbed hold of his pants legs to pull them away from himself, and he danced around and told ma to turn the hose on him, and then he took a pitcher of ice water and poured it down his pants, and he said the condemned old table was getting so rickety that a saucer wouldn't stay on it, and I told pa if he would put some tar on his legs, the same kind that he told me to put on my lip to make my moustache grow, the syrup wouldn't burn so, and then he cuffed me, and I think he felt better. It is a great thing to get a man's mind off of his trouble, but where a man hasn't got any mind, like you, for instance.

At this point the grocery man picked up a fire poker, and the boy went out in a hurry and hung up a sign in front of the grocery, "Cash paid for fat Dogs."

Sarah Bernhardt's Bankruptcy.

A formidable struggle is going on among the creditors of Mme. Sarah Bernhardt for the possession of the 37,000 and odd dollars realized by the sale of her jewelry. M. Bloch, the diamond expert, appears to have a prior claim upon the money, as he advanced upon the jewelry a sum superior to the total amount realized. Mr. Worth and another dressmaker claim more than $5,000 for the costumes worn by Mme. Bernhardt at the Vaudeville theatre, while a host of other creditors demand various sums for "value received" in the shape of cash or goods. The affair is being examined by a court of law, and a decision will be arrived a next week.

Complicated Breach of Promise.

A Philadelphia case goes to prove that women, as well as men who live in glass houses, should not throw stones. Miss Susan Benison, of that town, sued William Craig for breach of promise, and got $7,500. Whereupon James Johnson came forward and sued Susan for breach of promise, showing that she was engaged to him at the time it was proven that William jilted her. The court set aside the verdict against Craig, and Susan is forlorn.

Alcohol in the Hospitals.

New York Sun.

A return laid before the Melbourne hospital committee lately, being the result of non-alcoholic as opposed to alcoholic treatment, by various hospital surgeons (whose names in these reports are only represented by letters), is decidedly in favor of the use of stimulants in sickness—the death rate being much heavier among those who had a meagre allowance of them.

It was a Cold Day, and He Got Left.

A tramp looked at the jail at Malvern, Iowa, on a cold day. Smoke was coming from the chimney, and as he shivered in his ragged clothes, he longed for the comfortable warmth inside the building. As a means of getting in, he threw a brick through a church window. Bitter was his disappointment. The magistrate gave him fourteen days' labor on the streets.

HUMAN BLOOD.—On the purity and vitality of the blood depend the vigor and health of the whole system. Disease of various kinds is often only the sign that nature is trying to remove the disturbing cause. A remedy that gives life and vigor to the blood, eradicates scrofula and other impurities from it, as Hood's Sarsaparilla undoubtedly does, must be the means of preventing many diseases that would occur without its use. Measuring the Age of Trees.

The counting of the rings added by exogenous trees every year to their circumference can only, without risk of error, be applied to trees cut down in their prime, and hence is useless for the older trees which are hollow and decayed. Trees, moreover, often develop themselves so unequally from their center that, as in the case of a specimen in the museum at Kew, there may be about two hundred and fifty rings on one side to fifty on the other. Perhaps the largest number of rings that has ever been counted was in the case of an oak felled in 1812, where they amounted to seven hundred and ten; but De Candolle, who mentions this, adds, that three hundred years were added to this number as probably covering the remaining rings which it was no longer possible to count. This instance may be taken to illustrate how unsatisfactory this mode of reckoning really is for all but trees of comparatively youthful age.

The external girth measurement is for these reasons the best we can have, being especially applicable where the date of a tree's introduction into a country or of its planting is definitely fixed, since it enables us to argue from the individual specimen in question to a number of specimens, not with certainty, but within certain limits of variability, to the rate of growth of that tree as a species. In these measurements of trees of a century or more in age, such as are given abundantly in London's "Aboretum," lies our best guide, though even then the growth in subsequent ages must remain matter of conjecture. The difficulty is to reduce this conjectural quantity to the limits of probability; for, given the ascertained growth of the first century, how shall we estimate the diminished growth of later centuries? The best way would seem to be to take the ascertained growth of the first century, and then to make, say, the third of it the average growth of every century. Thus, if we were to take twelve feet as the ascertained growth of an oak in its first century, four feet would be its constant average rate, and we might conjecture that an oak of forty feet was a thousand years old. But clearly it might be much less; for the reason for taking the third is not so much that it is a more probable average than the half, as that it is obviously less likely to err on the side of excess of rapidity.—Popular Science Monthly for November.

A Million Dollars Depending on the Letter S.

Leonard Case, a millionaire old bachelor, charitable and eccentric, died in Cleveland city several years ago, leaving besides a handsome legacy for a school of applied science which bears his name, a large property for his heirs and next of kin to quarrel over in the courts. One of the suits now pending in the Ohio Supreme Court, the court of last resort, hinges upon the appearance of the letter "s" in the statutes. The other descendants of Leonard Case's mother claim a share in the estate. The statutes provide that under certain conditions the estate of a deceased person shall pass to the next of kin of the blood of ancestors from whom the estate came. If the word "ancestors" is to be construed in its full force, the descendants of Mrs. Case can obtain their full share. On the other hand, it is claimed that the letter "s" at the end of "ancestors" crept into the statutes through the carelessness of some printer or proofreader. The case will be heard in the Supreme Court before long. The property involved is valued at $1,000,000.—Correspondence New York Sun.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 7, 1883.

Rheumatic Syrup Co.:

Gents—For seven years I have been troubled with rheumatism in my ankles and feet, and for months at a time I could not get out of the house. I have tried almost every remedy I could hear of, but I obtained no relief from any of them. While reading one of the Wayne county papers I read the names of a number of acquaintances who had been cured by the use of Rheumatic Syrup. I immediately sent for some, and after using it a short time the pain and soreness left me. I sincerely believe your Rheumatic Syrup is one of the best medicines I ever saw and I am confident it is a great blood purifier, as well as a rheumatic remedy. I am truly yours, George W. Snedaker, 138 Allen street.

The Peculiar Old Mystery!

It was one of the peculiarities of the old-fashioned Doctors that they never would tell patients what they were prescribing for them. They said it would do the patients no good to know, and that it would only be gratifying a foolish curiosity. In order to keep patients from knowing, they would write their prescriptions in dog-Latin, so that most patients could not read them. All that sort of thing is now over. The patient wants to know what he takes. He is weak, and wants to be strong, or he is dyspeptic, and wants to digest well. Or he has a troublesome liver which he wants to put to rights. So he takes Brown's Iron Bitters about which there is no mystery at all. This is the best preparation of iron in the world, in combination with gentle yet efficient tonics. It gives strength. It builds up enfeebled systems. It enriches impoverished blood. It removes feminine weaknesses. It casts out debility. It is what you want, and your druggist has it.

Auction Sale of Real Estate.

In this issue will be found notice of the sale on the 27th inst., at Manchester, of the splendid water power and site of the Peerless and Pioneer Mills. These mills were burned a few years ago, but the dam was not injured. The power is a good one, and we regard this as an excellent opportunity for parties desiring to engage in any kind of manufacturing to obtain an excellent site and cheap power.

A LETTER FROM HARTFORD

EDITOR HERALD:

How welcome are the weekly visits of the HERALD to our eastern home sent to us through the kindness of the editors. Six months have elapsed since I bade adieu to my many Tecumseh friends, and while thinking to-day over the events which have transpired between then and now, I decided to pen a brief letter to the HERALD.

Hartford is a beautiful city of nearly 50,000 inhabitants, surrounded on three sides by mountain ranges, from which can be seen dimly pencilled on the horizon the mountains of New Hampshire and Massachusetts. It is neatly laid out in the fertile Connecticut valley. It is considered the most wealthy city of its size in the Union. The principal industries prominent are insurance, book binding, and manufactories, of which Colt's Armory of immense extent is the most prominent. Among the public buildings, the state capitol is superior. It is situated in a large elegant park named after the late Dr. Horace Bushnell. The park is in the center of the city, and besides containing nearly 100 different varieties of trees, abounds in beautiful driveways and foot-paths all leading to the capitol. An artificial lake, a little winding river, rustic seats, statuary, etc., complete the picture.

The capitol was erected at a total cost of over $3,000,000. When it was completed $40,000 of appropriated money remained in the treasury—a thing unheard of before in the history of public buildings. I went through the building in company with mother and Mrs. Dr. Pilcher, of Brooklyn, the other day, and we were amazed at its elegance. I climbed up to the highest point on the dome, a height of 250 feet, and "viewed the landscape o'er."

Hartford is the residence of Mark Twain, Charles Dudley Warner, Mrs. H. B. Stowe, Gen. Jos. R. Hawley, and many other noted persons. Some of the private residences are very fine, but perhaps the unique dwellings of Mark Twain and Mrs. Colt attract more attention from strangers than all the rest combined. The order in which Mark Twain's house is constructed is the reverse of the natural order. It seems to be turned around, the parlor and kitchen exchanging places. The grounds around Mrs. Colt's residence are spacious and very tastily adorned.

All the courts in Hartford, both civil and criminal are opened with prayer, a fact which impressed me as worth mentioning. I know this to be true, because father, the other day, acted as chaplain of the Superior Court.

A C. L. S. C. had never been organized in this city, but last month several persons who were interested in the subject began the formation of a class. We, of course, being true Chautauquaians, lent our aid to the movement, and were rewarded by the organization of a class of 200, representing all denominations. Four sub-circles have been formed from the general circle, which meet monthly in the four quarters of the city. The general circle, of which father has been elected president, meets once a month. The members are enthusiastic and the signs betoken for us a very pleasant year.

Dr. John H. Vincent lectures in our church on Monday eve., Nov. 12, on "That Boy," and as he has never lectured in Hartford, we are anticipating a grand treat.

And so I might continue if it were best. I find the eastern people very pleasant, and among them have made some very warm friends. I am rapidly improving, and considering all things, the change of state and climate has been of great benefit to me. Next summer I expect to spend a month in Tecumseh, visiting my friends. Meanwhile, however I shall live in anticipation of the pleasant times in store for me.

David Swift, who has lived in Cambridge forty years, has sold his farm and returned to England, his native land.

Adrian Press: Three lawyers wrangled four days before a Hudson justice, over a $10 plow. Each party got justice, and cheerfully chucked down enough money for lawyer's fees to buy a whole plow factory.

Morenci Observer: Our village schools, that have been so sadly depleted by the scarlet fever are again gradually filling up, with the exception of the primary department, which has only about one-third its usual number.

Deerfield Record: The Star minstrels from Dundee gave one of their "recherche" entertainments in Burnham's hall, Wednesday evening. The audience was very select—about a dozen; but not one could be found the next morning.

Clinton News: There is a cat in this town so piously inclined that it walks right into church during service—at least a certain feline indulged in that caprice last Sunday morning. Kitty stopped first at the Methodist church and then went up to the Episcopal church, but was ingloriously expelled from both places.

Hudson Post: The lake of the evil name and its vicinity are furnishing material almost daily for litigation and criminal prosecution. Whether the lake is in such close proximity to Addison or vice versa we don't pretend to know, but all the civil and criminal matters brought into the Justice's court of Hudson of late have been incubated "on the margin of the lake."

Brooklyn Exponent: On last Friday night a bay horse, which carries his head low, an open bootback buggy and a harness were stolen from the barn of C. H. Hess of Woodstock. The thief is supposed to be a dark complexioned man with whiskers and baldheaded. A liberal reward will be paid for the return of the property or arrest of the thief.

Hudson Gazette: While the Rose wheelbarrow works at Adrian are about petered, our Mr. Weaver and the Whitney works are moving right forward, we thank you. Why, gentlemen of the county seat, when we provide you with institutions, don't you keep them on their legs? If you are going to act so, we shall not set you up in the wheelbarrow business again.

Blissfield Advance: The excitement incident to the appointment of Commissioner Robertson to clean out the Raisin, is quieting down, and the matter in all probability will fall through. Mr. Robertson will not undertake the work unless he has every assurance that he will be backed up by the courts. Popular sentiment seems to be averse to taking out the dams, at least in Blissfield.

The Blissfield Advance indulges in these sensible remarks:

Occasionally we see a man going or coming from the cities, where he does his trading for the season. He may think he can make money thereby, but we doubt it very much. Dealers in all kinds of merchandise in our village carry an abundant stock, and an assortment and variety so large, that anyone can make a satisfactory selection in what ever goods he may desire. Then the price in every case is below that in cities, where the expenses are large and goods must be sold at a higher figure. Patronize home.

Morenci Observer: It is proposed to open the proceedings of our village board of trustees with the use of the good old Episcopal prayer, where it says: "We have done those things we ought not to have done and have left undone those things we ought to have done," as the time is being flitted away in ditching the dryest part of the village, while the draining of Main st. and the repairs on the street leading from Chesterfield, one of the most important in the village, are left entirely untouched.

In the bitter gloom of a winter's morn
A babe was born.
The snow piled high against wall and door,
On the mighty oak boughs the frost lay hoar
But the warmth and light shrined the happy face
So softly pillowed with down and lace.
The twin clashed out from the pealing spire,
The night was reddened by many a fire
The cottage smiled for the joy at the hall
As the poor man answered the rich man's call.
And his joy for a day was not forgotten
Because a little child was born.

Catarrh

At this season of the year everybody has a cold, and some very bad ones. By frequent exposures the membranes of the nose become very sensitive, and catarrh and influenza are epidemic. Relief may be obtained by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

For many years in succession, beginning so far back I don't remember when, I had the catarrh in my head. It consisted of an excessive flow from my nose,

Ringing and Bursting Noises

in my head. Sometimes the hearing in my left ear was affected. Five years ago, about this season of the year, I began to use Hood's Sarsaparilla. I was helped right away, but I continued to use it until I felt myself cured.—Mrs. Eliza H. Caulfield, Lowell, Mass.

Jerome Brownell, merchant and extensive miller at Victor, Ontario county, N. Y., writes: "I have used Hood's Sarsaparilla for my catarrh, and it has helped me. I consider Hood's Sarsaparilla one of the best remedies for blood disease to be obtained."

100 Doses One Dollar

"I have been troubled with that distressing complaint, catarrh, and have been using Hood's Sarsaparilla, and find it one of the best remedies I have ever taken. My trouble has lasted ten years, and never could get any relief until I commenced to use Hood's Sarsaparilla.—Martin Shield, Chicago, Ill.

Danger from Catarrh

Depends upon the amount and extent of the scrofulous infection. Unquestionably many deaths from consumption can be traced to neglected catarrh. There is a violent distress, prostrated and coughing spells, the eyes weep, the nose discharges copiously, and the head seems about to split.

In such cases Hood's Sarsaparilla corrects the catarrh by its direct action in discharging the poison from the blood through nature's great outlets, so that healthy, sound blood reaches the membranes and is wholesome.

HERALD OFFICE.

Monster Trees of California.

As regards the wonderful size of the Sequoia, that is a matter which does not at first fully come to one. The fact is that all the trees are so large that one fails to realize the magnitude of the giants. All have increased in proportion. It requires a mental calculation to convince one's self that the transformation is something quite out of the common. It is only when you come to walk in and out of the hollow trees, and to circle round them and take a constitutional by walking along inside of a fallen giant, or, perhaps (if it had done duty as a chimney before it came to grief), by riding up inside the hollow for a considerable distance, that you begin to understand their size. You do so best, when standing on the ground beside a prostrate tree lying buried in a ditch of its own making, you look up at a red wall rising, perhaps, fifteen or twenty feet above your head, bulging outward considerably and extending in a straight line for three hundred feet along the ground, and tell yourself it is only a tree! The owners of the beautiful grove near the hotel have erected tall ladders, to enable people to climb on to some of these heights and walk along the fallen trees as if on garden terraces. It sounds cockney, but it is decidedly pleasant to gain a view of the forest from an elevation of thirty feet, and it is not every one that can scale the red rampart without the aid of the ladders. If you choose to clamber along the upturned roots you may find an airy seat some forty feet above the ground. This sounds high, but on further consideration you begin to marvel how such extraordinary small roots can ever have formed a fit pedestal for so ponderous a weight. They have literally no depth and a comparatively small spread, so that they have merely a superficial hold on the earth's surface. Yet this slight support has enabled these huge bodies to resist the wild storms of many centuries. All the big trees of the district are concentrated in two groves, namely, the little forest gem of Calaveras, and a much larger belt known as the South Park Grove, on the Stanislaus River, about six miles further. In the Calaveras grove all the Sequoias lie within an area of fifty acres, over which space altogether about one hundred lie scattered singly or in groups. Of these, twenty attain a circumference of about eighty feet near the base; and one, which is distinguished as the Father of the Forest, is found to measure one hundred and ten feet round; it now lays prostrate, and has apparently done so for many a century, for the well-nigh imperishable wood is in part decayed, and long use as a chimney had burnt out its inside and destroyed its summit ere it fell. The portion that still remains is like a long mountain, and two large archways have been cut into the side of the said mountain, in order that those whose taste lies in that line may ride into the hollow trunk and come out by the further opening. It is estimated that the tree when perfect, must have been about four hundred and fifty feet in height. Of the trees now standing, four exceed three hundred feet in height, and one measures three hundred and twenty-five. About twenty-five are said to exceed two hundred and fifty feet. One can, perhaps, better realize what these sizes mean by finding the amount of houseroom to be obtained within a hollowed tree. Several, such as "Miner's Camp" and "Pioneer's Camp," have been used as temporary homes. In the latter, fifty persons can find sitting room; others are used for stabling horses.

Ancient Earthquakes in Ischia.

The most ancient of the recorded eruptions in Ischia was that of Montagnone, to which is ascribed the origin of the vast crater of regular form that still existed before the recent earthquake, in a state of perfect preservation, in the northwestern part of Ischia. About 470 B. C., successive eruptions at Point Comacchia gave rise to the vast flows of Mancocco and Bale, which extended far into the sea and prolonged the point to the north. Numerous efforts have been made since these ancient times to plant colonies on this unstable land, even then fertile and covered with a luxuriant vegetation.

Lyell, who made a long exploration of the island in 1828, relates that first the Erythreans and afterward the Chalcideans, who had settled in the island before the Christian era, were driven away by the incessant earthquakes and the mephitic exhalations escaping from every point. At a later time, 280 B. C., Hiero, king of Syracuse, tried to found a colony there, but it was soon driven away by a formidable explosion preceding the great flows of lava which gave rise to the masses now forming the promontories of Zaro and Camso.

The same fate befel the Grecian colonies which afterward tried at different times to occupy the island. The eruption that forced the retreat of the first Grecian colony, gave rise to Monte Rosato, that cone of projections the sudden formation of which is comparable to that of Monte Nuovo. The last named mountain was raised in September, 1538, in forty-eight hours, at Puzzuoli, after a succession of formidable shocks which occasioned great disasters in the Phlegrean fields and destroyed a great number of Roman buildings. These two mountains of volcanic erection, formed under similar conditions, at two distinct epochs corresponding in each case with a period of repose in Vesuvius, and distinguished by their regular form, which may be compared with that of the classic volcanoes of the chain of the puy of Auvergne. Both, terminating in a vast crater, have emitted, like the volcanoes of Auvergne, only a single flow of lava, which seems to have exhausted all their energy. A long period of repose followed. During more than a century "Ischia the Joyous," as it was called, rested in perfect tranquillity. The pleasure-loving Romans made of it the most enchanting resort in the world; all their magnates had villas there.—Popular Science Monthly for November.

Little Things.

It is the little things in life that tell for good or evil. It is these that try our patience when they command our attention from the big things that seem worthy of our efforts. But after all, it is attention to these same petty details that tell in the end.

Few men have succeeded in business ventures without a talent of this kind of drudgery, and it is said of Wellington that his battles were won in camp, superintending the proper cooking of food that would maintain the health and spirits of his soldiers. Seemingly small business for so great a man, but when history tell us that to this one thing is due the honor he enjoyed of never having lost a battle, the end comes to justify the means, and in view of such results we wonder that any should fail to realize the importance of little things. Yet sadly inconsistent as it may seem, we go right on in the old way despising and ignoring the little things of every day life, because they seem insignificant and are so numerous and prosy.

Look into your home and observe the multitude of little things, each one too trifling to enumerate among your day's duties, yet every one demanding attention with a voice that years of experience have long since taught us to regard as imperative. For probably before you had long enjoyed the experience of being the head of an establishment, circumstances of one kind or another over which you had no control, possibly an over supply of company, may be sickness of self or friends, obliged you for a time to omit many of these minor details of housekeeping. And none that have had the experience will forget the feeling of utter discouragement that fills her soul as she returned to what had seemed the perfection of order and system, and found chaos reigning in its stead. The tarnished condition of the silver, the griminess of papers in cupboard and pantry that you did not know could look so bad, the smoky window pane and the finger marks about the door-knobs, the missing buttons, the broken stitches and the toeless socks arise before your mind's eye in such disheartening array that your impulse is to run away from it all. There are some to whom this experience has come but a few times in life, and again, there are others who seem to have started with the odds against them, and never caught up with their work.

We call to mind one home of this latter class, where the mistress is so engrossed with grand ideas for the betterment of the race that she cannot condescend to these trifles. Unfortunately for the family their means are limited, so that help cannot be provided to perform these trifling offices and the result is worse than any one could imagine that had not witnessed it in its workings. The big work is done, meals are cooked in very good style, and the floors generally pretty free from dust, and most of the duties of this class performed. But the buttons are never all on, nor the buttonholes of half worn garments ever in repair. The holes in stockings are often drawn together while the impatient owner waits to change. If the missing button should be found indispensable when the garment is put on, there is another martyrdom endured by the mother of the family and the other members while it is replaced, and the husband and child must endure the dreadful ordeal of having the button replaced while he wears the garment. The weekly mending that replaces the stitch in time is a little thing to attend to, but neglected it becomes a veritable thorn in the flesh to each member of a household. And this is but one instance of the little things in the home which if neglected mar the pleasure and the lives of all within it. And this same law of little things holds good throughout every line of business as well, and nine times out of ten failure in life is due to the neglect of it alone.—Burlington Hawkeye.

Even in the making of a will those little peculiarities present themselves: "I give and bequeath to my beloved wife Bridget the whole of my property without reserve; and to my eldest son, Patrick, one-half of the remainder; and to Dennis, my youngest son, the rest. If anything is left, it may go, together with the old cart without wheels, to my sincere and affectionate friend Terence McCarthy, in sweet Ireland."

Another illustration is afforded by the reply of a young candidate for the office of teacher. Archbishop Whately was endeavoring to elicit the candidate's idea on the market value of labor with reference to demand and supply, but being baffled, the prelate put a question in this simple form: "If there are in your village two shoemakers with just sufficient employment to enable them to live comfortably, or say tolerably, and no more, what would follow if a third shoemaker set up in the village?" "What would follow, sir?" said the candidate, "why, a fight to be sure!" which was likely enough, but it was not the reply the reverend prelate looked for.

What Shall we Do with Our Boys?

"Johnnie" writes: "Make 'chappies' of them." "Lord Mashersville" suggests: "Send the beggaws, aw, on the stage." "Oscar Wilde" ventures: "Teach them how to exist beautifully." "O'Donovan Rossa" hints: "Begorra, let 'em join the Brotherhood." "Common Sense" wants them to "join the British army, so as to swell its numbers into respectability." "Bradlaughite" asks: "What do we want with them?" "Fellow-struck" says that they should be taught how to escort a lady to the theater, and then perhaps the ladies will look after them. "Lazybone's" idea is that begging should be unpenalised; and Fun agrees with "A Father of Five Young Sons," "Give them an education and a £10 note."—From Fun.

The successful candidate is in a happy frame of mind.

The Democrats have their own in Maryland and Mississippi.

The Democrats forget Scott in New York city has produced the desired result. The big majority of last year has been frittered away.

The New York Democrats carry their state ticket with practically one exception in spite of their local quarrels, but have lost the legislature.

Mayor Low was re-elected in Brooklyn by a reduced majority, about 12,000. He run on a non-partisan platform and was endorsed by the Republicans.

Honors are easy in Detroit. The Republicans take the Mayor and the Democrats both branches of the city council. The balance of the city ticket is divided.

A singular feature of the Massachusetts election was this: The Republican gains were in the cities and the Democratic gains in the country, the reverse of what has heretofore been the case.

The contest in Virginia somewhat resembled that in Massachusetts. A hot fight was made against the Mahone republican alliance. The regular Democrats swept the state by about 20,000 majority and have secured the legislature by a strong working majority.

The fight in Massachusetts was the most remarkable ever known in that state, the total vote being 30,000 in excess of last year. Butler was snowed under by a heavy majority. He takes his defeat very philosophically, however, and announces his intention of trying it again next year.

THE MICHIGAN & OHIO.

Some Interesting Items in Regard to the Future Prospects of the Road.

When the special inspection party went over the road last Saturday, during their stop at Marshall, the representative of the Evening News had an interview with President Latcha, from which we gather the following items:

The News correspondent was presented to President Latcha by Engineer Bogh, and had an admirable chance to scan this self-made man. He presented a well proportioned figure inclined somewhat to embonpoint, and has a fine head, out of which gleamed a pair of sharp, dark blue eyes. He wears a full beard, coal black, matching the hue of his hair. A pair of glasses rather adds to the shrewdness and sagacity which characterizes him.

"Well, Mr. President," interrogated the penciller, "how are the officers pleased with the new line?"

Bracing himself against a wall hard by for support during his affliction, Mr. Latcha replied: "Why, sir, they are more than pleased with it. They think it runs through the finest farming lands in Michigan. Now, Mr. Cummings there," pointing to the capitalist, "thought my description of the country too highly colored, and was longing to take a look at it. Well, the result is that he is convinced and calls it a veritable Eden.

"How much of the line remains unballasted?"

"But a very few miles, and those will be ballasted this month."

"What point will be the western terminus?"

"Well, that is a question upon which we have not as yet decided, though it will doubtless be Allegan for the present. There is a strong probability that we shall use the Chicago & West Michigan track to Grand Haven, though there has been some talk of building an independent line from Allegan to Saugatuck. We shall have a meeting soon of the board of directors and settle the matter."

"By the way, Mr. President, you speak of the Chicago & West Michigan company. Is there any truth in the report that they have opened negotiations for the purchase of the Michigan & Ohio?"

"None whatever. We have never had even so much as a proposition from them on the subject. While we maintain friendly relations with them, it is not for the purpose of selling out."

"Would the company sell if they got a good offer?"

"It is doubtful, for we have made all arrangements to operate the line. We have contracted for the building of the requisite amount of rolling stock at works in New York state, and also with the Pullman company in Illinois. The locomotives will be turned out as speedily as possible. But then every road has its price, and if offered it a sale generally takes place."

"Has the stock been issued yet?"

"No; it will not be until after our next meeting; then it will be divided and be placed on the market. No bonds have yet been issued either, nor has a mortgage been placed on the road."

"Will your stock go as high as $10,000 to the mile?"

"Doubtless."

"Now, Mr. President, can you give us as satisfactory an answer in regard to the road north to the straits of Mackinaw from here?"

"Yes, that road will undoubtedly be built if we get the proper encouragement. Mr. Cummings is already so pleased with the idea that he has once or twice fallen into the error of calling this the branch instead of the northern extension the main one. It will run through as fine a country as does this, and think what a carrying trade we could do for those lumbermen. Yes, we shall build that line, but just when we shall commence on it I am unable to say. However, it will be just as soon as we get this to running, and settle the general details. Marshall will be right at the junction and will be a capital place for manufacturing interests to locate."

"When you come to take through freight from these Michigan towns what you be crippled by having no outlet at Toledo?"

"My dear sir, we are at that very matter now. The Pennsylvania Central, the Wheeling & Lake Erie and the Baltimore & Ohio all wish to capture our through business, and we can secure extremely favorable terms with either. It will not be decided at present, but I really must leave you and attend to business. However you have got all the information I am at liberty to give to the public, and I will bid you good evening."

And the railroader vanished.

A rather curious case is now before the Lexington, Ky., courts. Some weeks ago a capias was issued to a sheriff who was a very small man, commanding him to bring the body of a good old minister who was very large and fleshy, and weighed 250 pounds. He was found working out in the woods on a summer day. He did not want to go, and yet he was a conscientious observer of the law. So he went and lay down flat on his back in the shade and solemnly said, "In compliance with the law I hereby surrender my bod to be taken by you," and he lay there till the sheriff got tired and went away. Now the question is, did he resist an officer?

The proposals of some Lenawee county people who have actually had a commissioner appointed for the purpose to widen, deepen and straighten the river Raisin from Adrian to Lake Erie has made the up-river people prick up their ears, and if such a thing is attempted a superlative sultry time may be looked for. We have no objection to the Adrianites taking an occasional bath or indulging in a fishing party provided they come and get the same, but we don't propose to drain the lake forty miles up hill to accommodate them. From the size of the cheek displayed it seems as if Tom Navin might be behind it.—Monroe Democrat.

ESTATE OF PETER R. ADAMS.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee—ss.

At a session of the Probate Court, for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, on Wednesday, the 7th day of November, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three.

Present, Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Peter R. Adams, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Mary C. Adams Shull, a daughter and heir-at-law of said deceased alleging among other things, that although more than twenty days have elapsed since the probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, yet that the executors named therein and to whom the execution of said will was committed and the administration of said estate granted by an order of this court, made on the fifteenth day of October, 1883, have neglected to give bonds as required by law and as ordered by this court, whereby the said executors so named and appointed as aforesaid have forfeited their right to act as such executors, and praying that administration of said estate with the will annexed may be granted to Cordelia M. Adams, or to some other suitable person and that such other and further order and proceedings may be had in the premises as may be required by the statute in such case made and provided.

Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the 3d day of December next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

The pastors of the Presbyterian, Methodist and Baptist churches have reorganized the Monday morning meetings. They will be held in the study of the M. E. pastor at 10:30.

Leslie VanDorn was quite severely hurt a few days since while driving a nail. It broke, a piece hitting him in the eye. While the wound is painful, no serious results are apprehended.

Adrian Times: Ex-Gov. Croswell sits in a chair at the Lenawee county Savings bank, which has been occupied in regular succession by all the governors of Michigan down to Jerome.

Mrs. William Rickard started for Lima, N. Y. last Tuesday where she intends to remain during the winter. Miss Betsey Thompson will accompany her, and she will probably remain there several weeks.

Township treasurers will find it to their advantage to order their tax receipts at the HERALD office. We print them in any form desired, with or without stubs, bound in books, and furnish them at as low rates as can be obtained anywhere.

A war concert is on the tapis. The different choristers in town have been enlisted and Prof. Hammond is now engaged working up the details. The proceeds of the concert will be given to the High School piano fund. Fuller particulars will be presented next week.

Miss Mollie Weisinger who for the past six months has been clerking in Anderson & Co.'s dry goods store in this village has returned to Deerfield to assist her brother Fred who has just opened a similar establishment at that place. Her many Tecumseh friends regret to loose her.

An excursion train will go into Detroit to-morrow over the Wabash road.

Regular meeting of Tecumseh Lodge No. 69, F. & A. M., to morrow evening. Work in the M. M. degree.

The Detroit morning dailies—the Free Press and the Tribune—have reduced their price to 3 cents a copy.

Social at the Presbyterian church to-night, with music and recitations. Admission 10c. For the benefit of the cushion fund.

Capt. Henry Romeyn arrived in town yesterday, having been called home by the illness of his father. He will probably remain several days.

The ladies of the Episcopal church will hold their social at Bert. Anderson's, next week Wednesday, Nov. 14. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

The members of John L. Schoolcraft's class in the M. E. S. S. will give a neck tie and "mum" social at his residence next Wednesday evening.

Bert Hause left Tecumseh yesterday to join his father in Florida. The many friends whom Bert leaves behind, wish him success in his new home.

The marriages are coming thicker and faster. If they continue at the present rate, we shall be compelled to hire an extra "jour." to set up marriage notices.

A discourse on the occasion of the 400th anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther, will be delivered at the Presbyterian church next Sunday evening, at 7 o'clock.

John R. Clark is at home this week on a short respite from lecturing. He will fill an engagement next Sunday at Bay City and his time will then be taken up until the middle of January next.

Next Sunday, Nov. 11, will be the 400th anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther. The event will be duly commemorated in the M. E. church of Tecumseh, in the evening at seven o'clock by appropriate services and a sermon on "What we owe to Luther and the Reformation."

The Free Methodist Church in Ridgeway having been repaired and remodled, both inside and out, almost to the extent of a new church, will be rededicated on Nov. 25th, at 2½ o'clock P. M. Rev. Joseph Travis, of Chicago, is expected to have charge of the services. All are invited.

The freight house on the M. & O. depot grounds is now completed, and the painters are putting the finishing touches upon the passenger house. The latter is a very neat looking building, substantially built, with slate roof. It is one of the best depot buildings on the line of the new road.

The Methodist society, led by their pastor, are now raising money to put new furnaces into the church. In connection with this they also contemplate paying off the present indebtedness of about $300. We learn that they have just raised about $150 for their S. S. library. This looks like business. They evidently mean to move forward on the line of progress. All success to them and their energetic pastor.

The Adrian Times is responsible for the following:

One of our merchants recently received the following on a postal card. We suppress names, but otherwise copy it verbatim: PETERSBURG, Mich., Nov. 5, '83—Dear Sir: We going to start a Large paper here and thair a great meny people go from here to buy good at Adrian and I like to git a add from you to put in our paper we put it in very cheap so much so you will not miss it and it pay you to do so. ——— is going to advertise with us. address Jurnell. Pub. Co.

In the appropriate column will be found the marriage notice of Mr. Eugene Bryan and Miss Martha C. Vescelius. The affair was largely attended by the friends of both contracting parties, and the wedding gifts bestowed were both numerous and costly. The groom located a preemption claim in Dakota during the past summer and hence he has already started a "home of his own." We join their friends in extending hearty congratulations.

We dropped into M. P. Brown's gallery the other day and could but admire his elegant rooms and the beautiful photographs which were the result of his handiwork. After looking through his establishment we wondered how any Tecumseh resident could think of going out of town for pictures. We have heard a rumor that Mr. Brown and C. H. Hopkins contemplated forming a copartnership and moving to Detroit. The way to keep such establishments in town is to patronize them.

The business of H. Brewer & Co., having outgrown its accommodations, the firm are engaged in the erection of a large addition to their building. The new portion will be 54x80 feet in size, and two stories high adjoining the old foundry on the north side. Another addition about 15x30 north of that will be used for a blacksmith shop. A large gang of brick layers now at work on the building, which has already reached the second story, and the work will be pushed forward as rapidly as possible to completion.

FROM THE "BAPTIST ITEMS."

The Chautauqua Class have completed the reading of Uarda.

Mary Sweet has gone to Milan to take a position in a knitting factory.

Mrs. Wheeler thinks of spending the winter in Kansas with her daughter.

Mrs. Lyon, mother of Rev F. S. Lyon of Three Rivers, is visiting friends in town.

Mrs. M. N. Sears of Norwalk, Ohio, has been visiting Mrs. A. J. North of this village.

Sister Helen Swick, of Reading, has returned. She may spend the winter with us. Hope so.

Father Metler, member of the Baptist church at Flat Rock, has been in town for a few days.

Minnie Alexander is living in the family of Mr. Swartz. Mrs. S. is visiting in the state of N. Y.

Mrs. O. B. DeWolf has had about a week of quite severe sickness the past month. She has recovered.

John Cashman is stopping in Detroit. He occasionaly holds meetings at Rockwood, near Flat Rock.

Mrs. Sophia Pixley has returned from Silver City, Nevada, to Michigan. Her present home is near Petersburg

Mr. & Mrs. Betts are expected to take up their residence in Tecumseh again. Their goods arrived over a week ago.

Quinsy; ask Frank Benedict about it. A few days ago he could not have answered very well; but he can do better now.

Mrs. Vail, of Albany, N. Y., is in Tecumseh and will spend the winter with her sister, Mrs. Yawger. She is an earnest Baptist.

Mr. and Mrs. Shull have removed to Tecumseh and taken up their abode in the former residence of Mrs. S's. father, Mr. P. R. Adams.

The telegraph line has reached the residence of Mr. A. Stevens, on Logan street. His youngest son, Lincoln Stevens, is studying Telegraphy.

The Misses DeWolf have all been visiting Detroit the past month. Miss Bertha and May are home but Grace still tarries in the city of the Straits.

Rev. J. Benedict thinks of spending a part of the winter with his brother in Arkansas. He hopes to avoid some of the ice and frosts of a Michigan winter.

During the past month Bro. D. Hall and family have enjoyed a vacation visit at St. Louis, Mich. They made the journey there and back by private conveyance.

Mrs. Henry Scoffeld is in N. Y., visiting friends but is expected home soon. During her absence her place as house-keeper and S. S. teacher is filled by Miss Eva Scofield.

Mrs. P. R. Adams has gone to Delaware to visit her son, Waller. It is possible she may remain all winter. But in all probability we can look for her return long before spring.

We regret to learn of the severe and long continued illness of Miss Sophia Sheperdson. She is yet very sick. It is impossible for a well person to comprehend the aggregate of her sufferings.

Miss Hattie Prentiss, of Chicago, paid her friends in Tecumseh a visit during the month of October. It seemed like old times to see her with us again. She still remains in the family of Mrs. F. A. Wilson. Her membership is with the Second church.

Drs. Sawtelle and Brooks, of Kalamazoo, took especial pains to express to the pastor when at the convention, their high appreciation of the Tecumseh delegation to Kalamazoo College. They said, "They are a promising class of young men." Well, we knew that before.

The Pastor's and Laymen's Conference of the Lenawee Association will be held at Morenci, Nov. 13th and 14th. Pastor McLean writes, "We want to see a large delegation from Tecumseh." Just like the Morenci Baptists. They always extend a hearty welcome.

Almost everybody has heard of the Carman Family—as celebrated for their sacred songs. They are the wife and children of Rev. L. N. Carman of Portland. The committee on the Sick and Poor are negotiating with them for a benefit concert during the holidays. Whether arrangements can be made or not yet definitely known.

The Young People's Social will be held in the M. E. church next Thursday evening, Nov. 8th. A large attendance is expected and all are [illegible] come early as the society will elect officers for the ensuing year. The Young People's Society is [illegible] and to do what [illegible] time to rally [illegible] ensuing year.

[illegible] Lenawee [illegible] Tecumseh. Dr. North [illegible] W. De Puy were appointed a committee on entertainment. We expect to have a profitable time.

AUCTION SALE.

L. B. Ayers having rented his farm will sell at auction 1½ miles east of the Mills' school house in Macon, on Tuesday, Nov. 13th, at 12 o'clock, M., the following property: Span of horses, single horse, 4 cows, 2-years old steer, 2 spring calves, 6 shoats, 38 sheep, lumber wagon, top buggy, pair bobsleighs, set double harness, single harness, 15 tons hay, road scraper, steel plow, chilled plow, cultivator, iron kettle, log chain, 4 acres of corn in shock, &c. Usual terms. H. W. Stevens, auctioneer.

ORANGE BLOSSOMS.

There was a large gathering at the residence of J. H. Green, of Raisin, on the 1st inst., to witness the marriage of their daughter Alice to David E. Barker, of Wayne Co., N. Y. They were assisted in the ceremony by Alfred Bartlett, during which they were standing under an arch upon which was the inscription "In Sunshine or Rain," from which was suspended an umbrella composed of flowers, with smilax festooned from arch to floor.—We also noticed bouquets of various designs throughout the house, showing fine artistic skill, which we were informed came from Mrs. Smith, florist. of Adrian. The presents were numerous, showing fine display of tastes in their selection. It is needless to say that an elegant repast was set before the guests or that all who were present had an enjoyable time. The newly married pair will make their future home in western New York.

THE FIRST PASSENGER TRAIN.

Over the Michigan & Ohio Railway—A Tour of Inspection by the Owners and Officers.

The first through passenger train went over the M. & O. road last Saturday. It consisted of two Pullman coaches and a baggage car, and carried the Officers and Directors of the road and a number of Ohio and Michigan capitalists who have invested money in the road. The train left the T. & A. A. depot in Toledo early in the forenoon, passed Tecumseh about nine A. M. and arrived at Marshall for dinner. From there the party went to Allegan and thence to Chicago over the C. & W. M. It is rumored that the latter road will soon purchase the M. & O. but nothing is definitely known as yet on this point.—Some of the Directors of the Ohio Central have a heavy money interest in the road and hence it is quite likely that it will be operated by the Ohio Central. In either event it will prove a first-class line for the towns through which it passes. The special train—with one coach short—returned east over the road on Sunday. It is expected that regular daily trains will be running in about two weeks.

FLINT LOCKS.

About a year ago Mr. Geo. Benedict found in a recently cleared field, which had never been plowed, near his father's residence, the irons of two horse pistols. They were laying on the surface of the ground, entirely uncovered. The wooden parts are all gone and the iron much rusted. The wood was not burned off as the temper is not drawn from the springs. They were flint locks with what is known as "hook britch" with wood stock clear to the muzzle. The flints were in their places when found and both were unloaded. They are smooth bore and carried about a half ounce ball. They were just alike, and evidently mates. They have been carefully examined for dates, by filing, and what was once a date found, but it cannot be read with certainty. It looks like 1600 and something. The word 'twisted' can be made out on the barrel, and the name of the maker on the lock. We regret that we have forgotten the maker's name. Whose were they? How long did they lay where found? How and why were they left there? are questions that naturally suggest themselves, but are questions which cannot be answered at present. The day of the flint lock is long past. An early settler would not have been likely to have had kind of a weapon, and if he had a pistol would have had but one. Did some one lose a relic ten or twenty years ago? He would have had but one. The wood would not be all rotted away. Were they captured by the Indians in some war with the whites, and brought to this section and lost? In that case they would not have been apt to have been lost together. Why were they empty of balls? Did their owner die on the spot where they were found? Have they lain there for fifty or one hundred or for two hundred years? An army officer, of the time of the revolution, would likely have had such pistols. It would seem as if they must be very old. Mr. Benedict proposes to remount one of them. They are not for sale.

Measuring the Age of Trees.

The counting of the rings added by exogenous trees every year to their circumference can only, without risk of error, be applied to trees cut down in their prime, and hence is useless for the older trees which are hollow and decayed. Trees, moreover, often develop themselves so unequally from their center that, as in the case of a specimen in the museum at Kew, there may be about two hundred and fifty rings on one side to fifty on the other. Perhaps the largest number of rings that has ever been counted was in the case of an oak felled in 1812, where they amounted to [illegible] hundred and ten; but De Candolle, who mentions this, adds that three hundred years were added to this number as probably covering the remaining rings which it was no longer possible to count. This instance may be taken to illustrate how unreliable [illegible] mode of reckoning really is for all but comparatively [illegible]

[illegible] the rings measurements [illegible] reasons the best we can have, [illegible] where the [illegible] is definitely [illegible] as to argue from [illegible] specimen or from a number of specimens, not with certainty, [illegible] certain limits of variability. Yet our best guide, [illegible] the growth in succeeding [illegible] in the matter of contour. The difficulty is to reduce [illegible] quantity to the limits [illegible] for given the ascertained growth of the first century, how [illegible] the diminished growth [illegible] centuries? The best way would [illegible] to take the ascertained [illegible] first century, and then [illegible] the third of it the average growth of every century. Thus, if [illegible] take twelve feet as the [illegible] growth of an oak in its first [illegible] would be its constant [illegible] and we might conjecture [illegible] feet was a thousand [illegible] But clearly it might [illegible] the reason for taking [illegible] is not so much that it is a [illegible] average than that it [illegible] [illegible]

Boys Will Prank and "Whoppings" to Fit Them.

[illegible] whom [illegible] have windfalls and grown tame. Naughty, wilful, mischievous living light scamps. They were at times as soundly thrashed as a rather old-fashioned father would permit. For a time they would mind, but they "wouldn't stay minded," to use a common expression. Nothing seemed as terrible a method of punishment as taking away their spending money—a few pennies each day.

For some particularly grievous offence this was resorted to two or three days before the Fourth of July, and great was their grief and indignation.

Very early the next morning the father who had visited this upon them was awakened by beating them at the [illegible] door crying

"Oh, papa!"

"Boys, go back to your room."

"Oh, papa, dear papa, won't you [illegible] give us our pennies and go back the whoppings?" Boston Transcript.

Cured His Hump.

A day or two ago, as the passengers were leaving one of the ferry boats, a gentleman who stood beside a customs officer remarked:

"When I see a poor fellow like that I am consoled for not being rich."

"Who?"

"Why, that man with the hump on his back. I had rather be poor all my days than be deformed and have millions of money."

"I can cure him in about five minutes—come and see," replied the officer, as he walked towards the unfortunate and invited him to pass up stairs. There was a kick, but he had to go, and three or four minutes' time sufficed to remove his deformity, which consisted of twenty-two yards of flannel and six pairs of socks.

"Purty smart!" growled the smuggler, as he was allowed to go.

"Not so very," was the reply; "a man who carries a hump on his back should carry a stiff neck. You didn't." —Detroit Free Press.

That weak back or pain in the side or hips you will find immediately relieved when a Hop Plaster is applied. It strengthens the muscles, giving the ability to do hard work without suffering. Take none but this, 'tis sure.

HURON, N. Y., Sept. 11, 1882. Rheumatic Syrup Co.:

Gentlemen—I desire to tell you what the Rheumatic Syrup has done for me after using it for three months. For the last fifteen years I have been one of the worst of sufferers with rheumatism. My limbs, arms and hands, in fact my entire form was drawn out of shape, and I have for years been unable to do any kind of business, or to wait upon myself. I have used up nearly all of my means in doctoring, but I grew worse and worse all the time until all hope had left me, and I had fully decided to buy no more so-called remedies, but one of your company, hearing of my case, came to see me, and had so much faith in Rheumatic Syrup that he said he would cure me or furnish me the medicine free of cost. I have taken it as he directed and to-day am entirely free from all rheumatic pains, and have almost entirely regained the use of my limbs, and am able to be about and do my farm work, and I believe the Rheumatic Syrup has done what no other remedy on earth can do.

I am truly yours, Jerome McQueen.

P. S.—Please bear in mind that for the last ten years I have been unable to walk a step without my crutches, and much of the time could not move even with them; was as helpless as a child.

A Pretty Story.

"I believe in a providence," said Victor Hugo to a company gathered around him in the Rue de Clichy, "because I am a providence myself." Being asked for an explanation the poet replied: "We caught a mouse yesterday evening. His death sentence was already pronounced, when my little granddaughter, Jeanne, with eyes glistening with tears begged for the life of the gray prisoner. Her mother hesitated whether to listen to the dear little advocate or not, and in her doubt said, 'Grandfather shall decide.' So they came to me. For a moment I held the power of life and death over the diminutive creature, and I thought: 'The heavenly providence may find itself in my situation when the fate of a being of a higher order is to be determined.' Naturally I set the mouse free; for when a man undertakes the role of providence on a small scale, he should at least imitate generosity."

A Blessing To All Mankind

In these times when these newspapers are flooded with patent medicine advertisements, it is gratifying to know what to procure that will certainly cure you. If you are Bilious, blood out of order, Liver inactive, or generally debilitated, there is nothing in the world that will cure you so quickly as Electric Bitters. They are a blessing to mankind, and can be had for only fifty cents a bottle.

The Commercial Bulletin remarks that the American nose can now be wiped with an American made silk handkerchief, but no American nose can be wiped with a domestic linen handkerchief; and moreover, no American heart beats beneath a domestic linen bosom. Let linen be a little better protected and linens would be sold cheaper in price and better in quality than the imported linens at the present time. Not a yard of linen is made in the United States! And yet no country is better adapted to flax raising or manufacturing!

SCROFULA. A medicine that destroys the germs of Scrofula and has the power to root it out is appreciated by the afflicted. The remarkable cures of men, women and children as described by testimonials, prove Hoods Sarsaparilla a reliable medicine containing remedial agents which eradicate Scrofula from the blood. 100 doses $1. Sold by all dealers. C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

A building in Boston built of stone and brick 81 and 69 feet frontage with basement and seven stories above the sidewalk, was moved nearly 100 feet in order to make a change in the street. One side was supported by eight granite columns twelve feet high, the whole building weighing 5,000 tons beside the furniture. The occupants of the stores and the hotel were not disturbed in the removal.

Testimony From the Press.

To those afflicted with lung trouble, hear what V. W. Wilson, of the Ottowa (Ill.) Times says: "After being disabled for three months with a cough, and lung trouble, often spitting up blood, can testify that I am cured permanently by the use of Dr. Bigelow's Positive Cure." A free trial bottle can be had at Baker and Hall's.

POOR GIRLS. The poorest girls in the world are those who have never been taught to work. There are thousands of them. Rich parents hate petted them, they have been taught to despise labor, and depend upon others for a living, and are perfectly helpless. If misfortune comes upon their friends, as it often does, their case is hopeless. The most forlorn and miserable women upon earth belong to this class. It belongs to parents to protect their daughters from this deplorable condition. They do them a great wrong if they neglect it. Every daughter should be taught to earn her own living. The rich as well as the poor require this training. The wheel of fortune rolls swiftly around; the rich are very likely to become poor, and the poor rich. Skill to labor is no disadvantage to the rich, and as indispensable to the poor. Well-to-do parents must educate their daughters to work; no reform is more imperative than this.

"Solid comfort" can be realized by those suffering from all forms of Scrofula, if they will take Hood's Sarsaparilla and be cured.

A New York man recently dreamed that he was a Texas desperado in a town threatened by Indians, and when he woke up he found that he had crawled under the bed.

"Ish this 'er postoffice?" inquired Cauliflower, slightly disfigured after nineteen rounds of sour mash. "No, this is a butcher shop," replied the sarcastic mailing clerk, licking a faded one cent stamp. "Sho! Ish that sho! Well, give me a tender line for my muzzer."

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The greatest medical wonder of the world. Warranted to speedily cure Burns, Bruises, Cuts, Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Cancers, Piles, Chilblains, Corns, Tetter, Chapped Hands, and all skin eruptions, guaranteed to cure in every instance or money refunded. 25 cents per box.

NEW BLOOMFIELD, Miss., Jan. 2, '80.

I wish to say to you that I have been suffering for the last five years with a severe itching all over. I have heard of Hop Bitters and have tried it. I have used up four bottles, and it has done me more good than all the doctors and medicines that they could use on or with me. I am old and poor but feel to bless you for such a relief by your medicine and from torment of the doctors. I have had fifteen doctors at me. One gave me seven ounces of solution of arsenic; another took four quarts of blood from me. All they could tell was that it was skin sickness. Now, after these four bottles of your medicine, my skin is well, clean and smooth as ever.

MADE ON PURPOSE.

One of Those Mistakes Which are More Frequent than Profitable.

"Why, my child, this is not Benson's Capcine Porous Plaster," said a father to his little daughter, after examining a package she had just brought from the drug store.

"Isn't it papa? I'm sorry, but I asked the man for Benson's—I know I did, and he took the 25c you gave me to pay for it," exclaimed the child positively. "Maybe the drug man made a mistake."

"I'll go 'round and see," was the gentleman's comment, as he donned his coat and hat.

"Why didn't you send me Benson's plaster, instead of that cheap and trashy thing?"

"Why, I thought that would suit you just as well."

"You thought! you thought! What business had you to think? I don't pay you for thinking, but for filling my order," said the indignant caller, contemptuously. "There, take that thing back and give me my money. I'll go where I want elsewhere."

COMPOUND OXYGEN NOT A DRUG

A NEW TREATMENT.

For Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, Dyspepsia, Catarrh, Headache, Debility, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all Chronic and Nervous Disorders.

A CARD.

We the undersigned, having received great and permanent benefit from the use of "COMPOUND OXYGEN," prepared and administered by Drs. STARKEY & PALEN, of Philadelphia, and being satisfied that it is a new discovery in medical science, and all that is claimed for it, consider it a duty which we owe to the many thousands who are suffering from chronic and so-called incurable diseases to do all that we can to make its virtues known, and to inspire the public with confidence.

We have personal knowledge of Drs. Starkey & Palen. They are educated, intelligent and conscientious physicians, who will not, we are sure, make any statement which they do not know to believe to be true, nor publish any testimonials or reports of cases which are not genuine.

DR. B. MINCER,

Scientific Optician!

I have devoted 25 years wholly to a study of the eye, and how to aid vision properly, and I make a specialty of fitting glasses to the eyes that have been injured by cheap, inferior glasses. I manufacture every kind of glasses, and guarantee satisfaction. Read what prominent physicians of Adrian say:

Having for some time past used glasses to improve my sight, without satisfactorily gaining my object, I called on Mr. Mincer, optician, of Detroit, who readily adapted glasses to my eyes, with which I am so well pleased, that I cheerfully speak in his favor. His method of examining and his application in selecting glasses to fit the eye can only be acquired by a knowledge of the useful organ to which must be added extensive experience. He has also adapted glasses to Mrs. Baker's eyes with which she is well pleased. I recommend him to all who need glasses adapted to their wants; poor glasses are an abomination.

V. A. BAKER, M.D.

ADRIAN, Nov. 18, 1882.

I have used spectacles bought of Mr. B. Mincer for the past three months, and find them superior to any I have ever used, and can cheerfully recommend him to anyone in need of glasses, and the benefit of his experience in the science of optics to adjust proper lenses.

DANIEL TODD, M.D.

I have investigated the work of Mr. B. Mincer, optician. I have reason to believe that he understands his profession, and adjusts excellent glasses on scientific principles.

C. RYND, M.D.

REMEMBER!

I will visit every town in the county during the month.

THINK OF IT NOW!

Although much is said about the importance of a blood-purifying medicine, it may be possible that the subject has never seriously claimed your attention. Think of it now!

Almost every person has some form of scrofulous poison latent in his veins. When this develops in Scrofulous Sores, Ulcers, or Eruptions, or in the form of Rheumatism, or Organic Diseases, the suffering that ensues is terrible. Hence the gratitude of those who discover, as thousands yearly do, that will thoroughly eradicate this evil from the system.

As well expect life without air as health without pure blood. Cleanse the blood with AYER'S SARSAPARILLA.

American Booms.

The correspondent of the London Times with the Hatch party wrote that journal from Minneapolis as follows: "Boom" is one of the most expressive words of recent American coinage, and the significant meaning seems to be finding its way across the Atlantic. Originated to signify the outward and public results of the secret wire-pulling resorted to for the advancement of the fortunes of the wily politician, the word has passed into general use as a term designating the efforts made to push into notoriety anything or anybody needing it. Thus there has been in American politics the "Grant boom," there has also been and will probably continue perennially a loudly-sounded and far-reaching "Chicago boom," industriously expanded by its vigorous citizens, and there has recently arisen, and is growing to steadily larger proportions, an entiring "boom of the new northwest," which the world will hear much of in the future. The prodigious energy and fever heat with which the development of the far northwest is being pushed since the Northern Pacific railway has been constructed to open it to settlement, is something amazing to the eyes of slower going people from the seaboard or from Europe. Of much of this I have already written in chronicling the progress of this tour to the Yellowstone national park; but starting on the return journey and going back from the outposts of civilization through the new frontier towns, within a few days after having first visited them on the outward trip, has shown actual and tangible evidences of their rapid growth. Two classes of settlers go to the frontier, and start the new settlement, the hard-headed pioneers measuring them by the "go-ahead" proclivities they develop. When the white man first arrives, and shows reserve and caution, he is known as a "tenderfoot" carefully feeling his way. When he "learns the ropes," shows a reckless and daring spirit, and begins to "catch on" to the infectious and restless spirit of the "boom" that is all around him, he becomes in border phrase, a "rustler." He rushes in to get the prizes, starts new town sites, "pegs up" the quotations of eligible corner lots on the prairie, and bubbles over with sonorous adjectives in his descriptions of the new settlement's achievements, merits and prospects. The return journey after ten days spent in the park, demonstrated that the "rustler" was out in force, all along the Northern Pacific line, and had not been talking only, but was at work. In Livingston, just at the entrance of the pass leading to the park, an entire new street of good wooden houses—not very large or pretentious—had been built, and some were already occupied; all done since we were there, beside starting a new "national bank." Miles City, and several other places displayed new hôtels and "saloons." Steele had several new houses, and similar reports were made from Pyramid Park, Sanborn, Jamestown, Glendive, Fargo, and other towns. Billings was endeavoring to dot down some more buildings on its widely expanded town site. Glendive, you will be glad to hear, has done the handsome thing by starting the Times as the daily newspaper that is to take care of its "boom." "The Times Office," in large letters, adorns the front of a little cabinet-shaped, white-painted wooden house, measuring about fifteen feet each way, from which this small but very energetic newspaper is issued every morning. The editor varies the monotony of leader-writing by conducting a lively and, I hope, profitable traffic in town lots. Mandan, since our recent visit, added a large new hotel and several substantial dwellings to its domain. Bismarck, which is always displaying prodigious energy, beside many new houses, had also started a second newspaper, finding one sheet entirely inadequate to looking after all its interests. Thus is the new northwest "booming" two thousand miles and more beyond New York, while every arriving train brings more settlers to seek their fortunes in the land that ten years ago knew few inhabitants other than soldiers and Sioux. As Whittier has significantly written:

Behind the squaw's birch-bark canoe,
The steamer smokes and raves;
And city lots are staked for sale

Women in the Water.

Fragile woman, so often considered as a mere plaything for a man, has more than once both astonished man and humiliated him by her exploits of endurance in the water. It is the fact, however, that woman can float more easily in the water than a man, because she has the advantage over him in having smaller bones in proportion to her total weight than a man has, and has also a larger proportionate amount in her body of adipose matter, which is lighter in water, than man has. But nevertheless, for a fragile vessel she has performed feats on the frisky wave more marvelous even than those accomplished by her male rival, and has done them far more gracefully, for it is an undeniable fact that though women can not walk as gracefully as men, she excels him in her grace of movement in the water, and becomes in its embrace as fair a nymph indeed as ever floated in the mystic waters of Greek mythology.

A Hard Bill to Take Out in Trade.

"Doctor," said a man to his physician, who had just presented a bill of $50 for treatment during a recent illness, "I have not much ready money. Will you take this out in trade?"

"Oh, yes," cheerfully answered the doctor; "I think that we can arrange that—but what is your business?"

"I am a cornet player," was the startling reply.—Fall River (Mass.) Herald.

Caleb Stockwell, of London, Ont., was exceedingly surprised the other morning, when Mrs. Stockwell presented him with two sons and two daughters, all new. Subsequently, when asked what he'd got, he sorrowfully said: "Only two small pair."

Rheumatism, neuralgia, and catarrh, caused by impoverished blood, are cured by Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

If you are troubled with sores, aches, pains and general weakness of the various bodily functions, don't be deceived by the advertisements of bitters, kidney medicines, etc., whose certificates of pretended cures, are often paid for. Put your trust in that simple remedy called Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. It will cure you by purifying the blood and strengthening the weak portions of your body. You will also find it very refreshing to the brain and nervous system. The proprietors receive hundreds of letters bestowing upon it the highest praise.

Observe the Birthdays.

Let the birthday of each member of the family be always remembered when it comes. Let there be something a little out of the ordinary routine in the arrangement of the table; cookies fashioned as Johnny likes them best; one of Frank's favorite plum puddings, or Julia's special liking, a loaf of ginger cake; or a wonderful lemon pie, such as only mamma can make.

Then there must be presents. Sometimes people may think they cannot be afforded; but reflect. The little one needs shoes, dresses, aprons and many other things. Purchase one or more for the birthday. It will seem just as much present to the recipients as though they were not obliged to have it.

Next come school-books and story-books, a set of furs or a pair of skates, (should the birthday occur in the winter,) a pretty little dinner-basket, or, if the parents can afford it, a little gold band for one of the white fingers, a necklace, a watch with a shining chain, or the pony that has been wished for so long.

Encourage the little ones in giving to each other, and also remember father and mother's birthday; believe me, it will be bread cast on the waters; the days will only be a few ere some returns, and there will be a never-failing supply of pleasure as long as you and your children live.

The testimony of many who long suffered from ill-health, caused by an impure state of the blood, goes to prove that the best remedy for making the blood rich, red and pure, for beautifying the complexion, for curing sores, pimples and other skin diseases, for removing aches, pains, stiff joints, rheumatism, etc., for increasing the power of endurance, for giving health and strength to every weak portion of the body, is Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. Its effect pleases the user in every instance. No other remedy equals it.

THE MODEST FATHER.—"Father," began a young Detroiter the other evening, "were you in the war?"

"Yes, my son."

"Was it awful?"

"Yes."

"Lots of dead and wounded men?"

"Yes."

"Did you kill many?"

"Well, I shouldn't like to answer that question."

"Are you very modest, pa?"

"I hope I am too modest to brag."

"That was what Mr. Smith meant, then, when he was telling the men down at the drug store that you hadn't any war record to brag of."

"He did, eh? Smith is a liar!"

"That's what I thought. He told the men that you run so fast he couldn't catch you on horseback, and any boy knows that a horse can catch a man with a stiff knee."

Your cough is growing worse. That soreness and pain in the throat and lungs is increasing. Better get rid of the absurd idea that anything will cure a cough or cold, and give Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry a trial before it is too late. It never fails to check consumption, and quickly cures all coughs and colds.

A little dot of a girl coaxed two nickels from her father on Thanksgiving day, saying she would use one for candy and the other she would give to the missionaries. Before executing her expressed intentions she lost one while at play, and running to her mamma, said: "Oh, mamma, I have lost my missionary nickel."

Positive Cure for Piles.

To the people of this county we would say we have been given the agency of Dr. Marchisi's Italian Pile Ointment—emphatically guaranteed to cure or money refunded—internal, external, blind, bleeding or itching piles. Price 50 cents a box. No cure, no pay. For sale by Waldo & Doty, druggists.

The life of a true Christian is like a beautiful river; it flows on in a steady, even course, the storms of life may ruffle its surface, but the deep undercurrent moves on undisturbed.

CATARRH.—Without assuming to write out a thesis of this universal ailment, facts warrant our saying that it seems to us there never was a season when it was so prevalent as the present.

The above is preliminary to the following, viz: That Messrs. Hood & Co., of Lowell, believe that the best way to get permanent relief is through the blood. A constitutional disease requires a constitutional remedy. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a blood purifier and constitutional medicine that can be relied upon, and has cured numerous cases of catarrh in its various forms. We think this claim a reasonable one and gladly give it room in our columns.

An English writer says that the middle class Englishman, as a rule, does not buy books, except a few classics and professional treatises, but waits for his chance at the book club or circulating library. There are instances where authors are asked to lend their own copies by men of ten times their income. Wine and china may be bought, but books must be hired, for, says the writer, the English are educated to the point of reading, but not to paying for books.

A Great Discovery.

This is daily bringing joy to the homes of thousands by saving many of their dear ones from an early grave. Truly is Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis, hay fever, loss of voice, tickling in the throat, pain in side and chest, or any disease of the throat and lungs, a positive cure. Guaranteed. Trial bottles free. Large size $1.

Sold by C. A. Wright & Co.

BAD, BAD, BAD BLOOD.

Some blood is bad because it is poor and weak. Some is bad because it contains impurities. Some men have such bad blood that the wonder is it does not poison the mosquitoes who come to bite them.

The rich red color of good blood is owing to the iron which is present. Blood which has not enough iron in it is always unsatisfactory. The person in whose veins it circulates cannot be said to enjoy good health.

The efforts of expert chemists to produce a preparation of iron which can be assimilated with the blood have resulted in that perfect preparation which is an important part of Brown's Iron Bitters. It is the only one which freely enters into the blood. It is the only one which accomplishes the desired good.

Weak, poor, thin blood may be made rich and strong, and impure blood may be purified by the use of that Great Iron Medicine, Brown's Iron Bitters.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

BROOKLYN BOSH.

The chiefest of all benefactions call road officials come on men and women in an excursion. It is a cheap broken link of business cares, the jostle that exhilerates the nervous system and dispels accumulated dissatisfaction with home and its surroundings, besides improving their spiritual condition by waking a self inquiry, concerning what they shall do to be saved. Thursday's favor was duly appreciated. Some even going without breakfast: lest they should lose their last chance of seeing the vaunted art wonders of Detroit. For many weeks we have been told that 612 was smoothly painted or that 99 was a wonderful study, but, unless the canvas has worn some tint that could sprout dissension, little has been told to aid the imaginations of those not prone to get rapturous over what they do not understand. Newspapers have generalized particulars about most everything except the Nymphs so it was the Nymphs I went to see; but the picture of a boy holding a little dead bird in his hand, hung against the right hand wall, of the first room I happened into, and for a time made me forget my errand. That frame holds nothing to provoke argument. A childish grief shines in the dark eyes, that wakes memories of many a pet loveliness. A little girl called me away from a large landscape, with cattle lying on its banks, to look at a dog asleep in a basin. The spoon lay on the floor. He had evidently confiscated the bread and milk and then made himself at home. The dish was small but it was brim full of doggy expression, and two kittens just waking up for business were marvellous copies, that only a lover of animals could paint. Very small specimens to select from among so many large ones. Some may say, yes, but they bear the impress of the artist's nature, and if one is not an art critic it is easy to believe theme is of heart growth. The trial of Red Jacket is a scene of grand proportions. The famous chief seems a real coffee colored lawyer and the feather decked jury look twice as wise and intelligent as their western cousins. The picture is well nigh faultless in color and arrangement, but the riderless horse, watching vainly for his master, has a stronger claim on the sympathy of those who are not enthusiastic over the nature of poor Lo. The crowd thickened every moment and one room especially was crammed with artists. At least I supposed them such for they had eye glasses, spy glasses, and everything imaginable to steady their sight while they peeked through. Some very anxious faces, as well as that picture, were reflected by a broad expanse of miser, and one more enquirer was there in a trice.

Concluded next week.

MACON MUSIC.

Rev. J. A. De Spelder having accepted the call extended to him from the Northwestern College at Orange City, Iowa, will at the close of the pastorate year, leave our place for this new field of labor. His church regret very much his departure as they have become warmly attached to him he having been their pastor for ten years. With much reluctance our people will bid him farewell.

Miss Edith Howell is staying for some time in Lansing.

Mr. A. Smith is visiting his daughter, Mrs. Brown, at Grand Ledge.

The exercises at the concert Sunday evening will be entirely of a temperance character. It will be preceded by at least one lecture during the week.

Charles Slaight, formerly of Flint, has been engaged to teach the Darling school for the winter term.

Last Monday while helping a neighbor thresh, James Lindsley, of Saline, was quite seriously injured by being struck by a barn door blowing shut.

S. P. Morgan is confined to the house by a freak of the rheumatism.

SPRINGVILLE SNUFF.

Norman Hulbard and Frank Lowden start for Iowa this week.

R. L. Rogers has been visiting his son Ira in Rochester, N. Y., and will make a short call on relatives in Pennsylvania before returning.

Poultry is pretty well picked up. Smith & Ayres have bought about 1500 head most of which will be delivered at Brooklyn.

Miss Nellie Burchan is seriously ill. We did not learn the disease.

Henry Daniels has returned to Adrian college to spend the winter and receive instruction.

Mrs. T. H. Mosher made her parents at Milan, O., a short visit last week.

There will be a Thanksgiving party at Ayres' hall on Thursday eve., Nov. 29. Invitation extended to all.

The millwright has arrived to overhaul T. H. Mosher's mill and put in the roller system.

Railroad meeting last Tuesday. The company made the east end of the town a fair proposition, which will probably be accepted.

MACON CENTER CUTS.

Farmers are going through with the motion of husking corn.

Clover seed, small kind, very light; mammoth, good. Wheat stands in well, but light top. Potatoes light crop.

Nine parlor organs sold below the Ridge in the last few months. "There is music everywhere."

James and Anson Harmon came home from Adrian Tuesday evening feeling rather blue, from having to pay $500 bail bond of G. A. Hobbs, the paint swindler. Report says that Hobbs is now operating in Kentucky.

Andrew Kexip split his foot from the toes to the instep with an ax last Saturday, and it is feared that amputation will be necessary.

Silas Beal died Sunday evening. Funeral Wednesday, 10 A. M., at the house.

The fourth dig at the tariff question comes off at the Hall Friday evening, Nov. 25th.

Four dances last Friday evening in a radius of five miles. How's that?

Edwin Howell, our drain commissioner, is doing some good work ditching out the old farms along the west side of the Ridge road, commencing at the Macon stream on the Ira Stewart farm, thence northeasterly parallel with the Ridge road to the highway at David Boyd's, thence west, making 800 rods in all.

We have been accused of writing last week's communication to the HERALD. We have no fault to find with the communication, but plead "Not guilty." We know nothing about those Sabbath school concerts, but would advise the people of the two sections to live and dwell together in harmony. A. E.

THE STATE CHURCH.

And the Exaction of Extraordinary Tithes from English Farmers.

Our readers will doubtless remember an item in the HERALD last summer acknowledging a call from Mr. Albert Bath, of Sevenoaks, Kent co., England, who was paying his uncle, Mr. Henry Haines, a visit at that time. In a conversation held with Mr. Bath at that time, he stated the effort making to levy extraordinary tithes upon the English farmer was certain to provoke resistance. We have just received a copy of the London Standard giving a report of a sale held on Mr. Bath's farm on the 31st ult. The Kent county boys are organizing and are prepared to make it hot for the auctioneer who does that kind of work. Below is the clipping from the Standard:

A disgraceful scene was witnessed yesterday afternoon at Colgates Farm, Halstead, Kent. The occupiers of the farm are Messrs. A. and E. Bath, who are extensive fruit growers, and hold decided views against the exaction of extraordinary tithes. The rector of the parish, Rev. R. Wood, having failed to get these tithes from Messrs. Bath, had recourse to law, and seized a stack of hay their property. At the instance of the rector, Mr. C. Martin, of Sevenoaks, attended for the purpose of effecting a sale by public auction. A numerous gathering of hop and fruit growers from Kent and the adjoining county were present. At the outset the auctioneer informed those present that he was not a "Parson's man," which was met with the response, "You know better." Some one thereupon knocked the auctioneer's hat off, and this was followed by various missiles being thrown at him. One of the parties threw a small bag of soot, and his face was completely blackened. Subsequently his clothes were torn to shreds, and altogether he was severely ill-treated. In this condition he was advised to get off the farm, but he declined to do so until he had sold the hay. He was thereupon informed that he would not find a buyer, and in the end he purchased the hay himself, on behalf of the rector, for £. The distraint was for £8, 10s. The police was present, but did not interfere. The auctioneer, who is an elderly man, immediately left the grounds. Subsequently an indignation meeting was held, a wagon being utilized for the purpose, Mr. Alfred May, of Halstead, presiding.

Stayton & Kinney, of Tecumseh, keep a stock of Furniture and Undertaking that but few towns in Michigan of its size attempt to carry. At their place of business, the big store on the corner, you can find parlor suits in plush, in fine spun raw silks, &c., easy chairs in raw silk, plush, velvet, rattan, cane, carpet, splint, and in fact all kinds, besides bedsteads, bureaus, stands, picture frames, extension tables, feathers, &c. In Undertaking they carry in stock caskets, metalic, broad cloth, veneered, &c., also a full line of robes, head linings, embalming fluids, and one of the finest $1,200 hearses in the county.

MICHIGAN STATE ITEMS.

Mr. Oleman's experts say the muskrat fur denotes a mild winter.

The Michigan mutual insurance company, who declined payment of a $2,000 policy on the life of John Dyer, of Arcade township, Lapeer county, on the ground of suicide by taking carbolic acid, has compromised the matter with Geer & Williams, attorneys for the widow, by the payment of $1,600. Dyer had taken out a policy about three weeks before his death.

Searching the Scriptures.

"My dear," said Mrs. Spoopendyke, glancing up from the letter she was writing, and pressing the nib of the pen on her thumb nail to see why it didn't work any better. "Say, my dear, do you know where to find that text, 'For the unbelieving husband is sanctified in the wife?'"

"In Exodus, isn't it?" replied Mr. Spoopendyke. "It sounds like Exodus. Where's the Bible?"

"I was looking for it just before," returned Mrs. Spoopendyke, getting up and preparing for another search. "I don't think it is in Exodus, because it sounds more like Paul. I think you must have stolen the Bible, for I haven't seen it since we came from the country."

"That's kind of curious," soliloquized Mr. Spoopendyke, aforesaid, turning it in fist in the interrogative. "I don't know who would want to steal a Bible. Don't you remember where you put it? Think it's in here?" and Mr. Spoopendyke opened the book containing his wife's new hat, and then made a lunge for the fancy coal scuttle behind the stove. "You had it last, what did you do with it?"

"It wouldn't be apt to get in there, would it?" suggested Mrs. Spoopendyke, trying to divert her husband's attention by rattling the vases on the mantelpiece.

"If it's the orthodox Bible it's liable to penetrate anywhere and everywhere!" retorted Mr. Spoopendyke, abandoning the coal scuttle and making a dive for the button bag. "Strikes me that Bible's keeping pretty quiet for the Word," he muttered as he flipped the buttons out on the floor, and dived across the room to try the bureau drawers. "Be in a nice fix if a rule should happen to drop in on us and look for family worship. Have to skedaddle to go on his recollection or start a new theory of his own. And Mr. Spoopendyke pulled the shams off the bed and then got down on his hands and knees to look under it. "I'll bet a hat it's where I said it was."

"Where's what, dear?" asked Mrs. Spoopendyke, supposing he had found it.

"In Exodus," snorted Mr. Spoopendyke, wiping the ornaments off the mantel piece and looking behind the clock. "Can't you remember what I say from one moment to another? If you had any memory, with your habits of classification, you'd only need the cost of arms of all nations and a little more incoherence to make a first rate dictionary. I don't know, though," continued Mr. Spoopendyke, ruminating on this proposition while he threw the things out of the wardrobe. "I don't know but what you would have to get a new binding and have your sides marbleized. You don't suppose that Bible got lonely and went off into the country on its own hook, do you?"

"I'm sure I don't know," murmured Mrs. Spoopendyke. "I can't imagine it would do a thing like that. I think it's only mislaid. We'll find it."

"Well, I should hope so," replied Mr. Spoopendyke, without meeting the slightest encouragement. "There may be only one small fleck of the crust of the bread left, but we'll find what there is before we go to bed. Unless that Bible's gone to get Best of it, I'll be no sleep in this Spoopendyke apartments until we lay our hands holding on that dear old family Bible! Maybe it's hid under a hat!" and he capsized the waste paper basket and scattered the contents over the room.

"I don't know but what it is in Exodus," said Mrs. Spoopendyke, with her finger in her mouth. "Now I come to think it over I'm sure it's in Exodus, so you needn't look for it any more."

"I know it's in Exodus," said Mr. Spoopendyke, kicking his wife's work basket across the room and turning the contents over with the toe of his boot. "But I'm going to find out which end of Exodus it is in before I go to business again! How do you suppose any one's to know when we were married or when the baby was born or when we died if we don't have a Bible? Think I'm going through life without a Bible to refer to when I'm 'lonely' and depressed? Got some kind of notion because I'm good and pious that religion comes natural to me, haven't ye? Well, it don't. I've got to keep posted just as well as any one else! Where's that Bible?" demanded Mr. Spoopendyke, rising in wrath as the book seemed to evade his search. "What's become of the pious injunctions of my youth? How'm I going to be able to tell Solomon's wives from the rest of it's family unless I have the book before me? Where's my Maccabees and my Zaccheus? Where are the friends of my boyhood?" and Mr. Spoopendyke straightened up in the middle of the room and glared at his wife as though she had inflicted on him a mortal injury.

"They've been dull some times," replied Mrs. Spoopendyke, who always took everything literally. "Anyway, you don't care about them to-night."

"And my Abraham begat Isaac, and Isaac begat Jacob, and Jacob begat Judah and his brethren! Where are they? Suppose some fellow asks me to-morrow who Judah's brethren begat, what am I to say? What're we standing there for, looking like a hole in the fence for? Think that helps you any?"

"Say, dear," commenced Mrs. Spoopendyke. "Don't you remember the night you and Mr. Specklewottle got into a dispute as to whether the prodigal son was thrown into the pit, or was the one whose ear Peter cut off for hiding his talents in a napkin? I haven't seen the Bible since then. You had it out, and when you got through you put it in your silk hat, and here it is now," and Mrs. Spoopendyke held up the missing volume, her face wreathed in smiles of delight that things had not been any worse.

"Found it, didn't you?" growled Mr. Spoopendyke, snatching the book out of her hands. "Another time, when I get through with it, you remember what I do with it. Now, let's find that measly text you were so anxious about." And Mr. Spoopendyke pored through Exodus and then laid down the book in disgust. "There's no such thing in the Bible," he said. "I knew there wasn't all the time, but I wanted to prove it to you."

"Let me look," suggested Mrs. Spoopendyke, and, turning to 1 Corinthians, vii. 14, she found and read it to him. "I had an idea it was in some of Paul's writings," she remarked as she shut the book and put it away.

"That's what you always have!" roared Mr. Spoopendyke, enraged by his defeat. "If you should ever run short of ideas you'd be a comparatively smart woman! Some day I'm going to put a spigot in your dead gasted mouth and start a public school with you, unless I change my mind and conclude to open a branch college for the prepaties of married women for the lunatic asylum!" and immensely pleased with this business outlook Mr. Spoopendyke dropped his clothes in the middle of the floor for his wife to pick up and tumbled into bed.

"I don't care," murmured Mrs. Spoopendyke, as she hung down her black hair and screwed herself around to see if it reached up her waist. "I don't care. Nurses trained here are of two kinds—special probationers (those who are gentlewomen by birth, daughters of clergymen, officers, medical men, and others of the upper middle and middle classes) and ordinary probationers (the daughters of small farmers, tradesmen, and artisans). The former are trained to be future heads of hospitals usually. They must have a settled purpose to do the work, free from all romance and vacillation, possessed of that valuable and uncommon quality, common sense. They must come prepared to make sacrifices without thinking themselves self-sacrificing. They must come with the full intention of submitting themselves to be taught, remembering that they who learn to obey best are those who afterwards know how to rule.

These nurses must come to the hospital with the express object of entering the profession of nursing permanently. They pay $150 for the first year's training and agree to remain for two years in the hospital work after leaving the school. These can always obtain good situations, usually at $1,000 a year.

The ordinary probationers are from 35 to 36 years of age. They must remain one year, having their board given them and $61 in money and clothing. During the next three years they are required to enter into the service as hospital nurses in such situations as may from time to time be offered to them by the committee. These receive daily teachings from the "Sisters," as the special probationers are called, and, besides daily practice on the wards, they attend lectures, both in class and clinical, given by able physicians. At the close of each course a written examination is conducted by the lecturer. "They must be sober, honest, truthful, trustworthy, punctual, quiet, orderly, neat, patient, cheerful, and kindly." They must rise at 6 o'clock in the morning and be in the ward at 7; must take exercise from 11:30 till 1 o'clock, or from 3:30 till 5, in the open air, so as to be fresh for their work.

Be Happy.

It is the easiest thing in the world to be happy, if men and women could only think so. Happiness is only another name for love, for where love exists in a household there happiness must also exist, even though it has poverty, for a companion, where love exists not, even though it be with wealth, happiness can never come. Lengthening Short Women.

The London World tells of a new contrivance for making ladies taller. The woman who is to undergo this process is cased in very tight corset, and her feet are placed in shoes weighted with fifty pounds of lead each. She is then placed in a machine consisting of a ring, which encircles her waist, and is suspended from the ceiling at such a height as to prevent her feet from touching the ground. The pressure of the corset forces the upper part of her body upward, and the weight of the shoes stretches her from the waist downward. It is estimated that the extreme length to which the spine can be stretched by the process thus described is two inches, and that the knee and hip joints can be stretched an inch and a half more. Thus three inches and a half can be added to the height of almost any woman who has the courage to undergo the trouble and pain necessarily connected with a stretching process lasting, with brief intervals, during five or six months.

Another Life Saved.

Mrs. Harriet Cummings, of Cincinnati, O., writes: Early last winter my daughter was attacked with a severe cold which settled on her lungs. We tried several medicines, none of which seemed to do her any good, but she continued to get worse, and finally raised large amounts of blood from her lungs. We called in a family physician, but he failed to do her any good. We then called in a physician—a most skillful professor in one of our colleges—he said that she could not get well. At this time a friend who had been cured by Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs, advised me to give it a trial. We then got a bottle and before she had used it all up she began to improve; and by the use of three bottles was entirely cured.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting, perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 67 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me."

How Watch Cases are Made.

Imitation always follows a successful article, and imitation is one of the best proofs of real honest merit; and thus it is that the James Boss' Gold Watch Case has its imitators. Buyers can always tell the genuine by the trade-mark of a crown, from which is suspended a pair of scales. Be sure BOTH crown and TRADE MARK scales are stamped in the cap of the watch case. Jewelers are very cautious about endorsing an article unless they not only know that it is good, but that the character of the manufacturers is such that the quality of the goods will be kept fully up to standard.

The James Boss' Gold Watch Cases go like hot cakes. Each one I sell sells another. Don't need to recommend them; they sell themselves. One of my best users has had a James Boss' Gold Watch Case in use for 20 years, and it is as good as ever. With this case I do not hesitate to give my own guarantee, especially with the new and improved cases, which seem to be everlasting. JESSE T. LITTLE, Jeweler.

This gold case, No. 6666, known as the James Boss' Gold Watch Case, came into my possession about 1858, has been in use since that time, and is still in good condition. The movement is the one which was in the case when I bought it, and its condition shows that the case has really out-worn the movement, which is worn out. MARTIN A. HOWELL,

HERE WE ARE AGAIN.

The steady and continual work we gave the past season to our gigantic clearance sales left our Mammoth Outfitting Establishment in proper shape for the reception of our

Fall and Winter Stock!

To say that we were successful would not half tell the story. OUR TRADE ALMOST DOUBLED, our customers were more than pleased with the bargains we gave them, and we were highly gratified with the liberal patronage bestowed upon us, and this season we intended to strive harder than ever to merit the continuance of the same.

BOYS' & CHILDREN'S CLOTHING.

We have just opened up and put in stock all the new shapes and Styles of Little Folks' Clothing, among which may be found some pretty and attractive garments. Henceforth we shall carry a larger line of these goods than ever. Our trade in this Department has met with such a large increase that we can well afford to, and this increase of trade enables us to sell at

SMALLER MARGINS THAN EVER BEFORE.

With us [illegible]se of trade means a decrease of profit. Not only shall our prices be the lowest, but we will carry ten times as many goods as any other house in the city. Our Boys' and Children's department has become very popular, not only because it is fitted up with a view to accommodate our customers, but because the best makes, the prettiest styles and the most attractive assortment of this line of goods can always be found there.

Men's & Youths' Clothing!

We have selected the finest and most desirable goods for this department that were ever brought to the city: in fact the goods look so well as we open them up that we feel sure of selling them without much trouble. The reliable class of goods we handle, together with the uniformly low prices which are characteristic in our institution, are found to meet with public approbation. This department is crammed with new goods, ready for inspection and sale.

Gents' Fine Furnishings!

There is no more complete department of the kind in the state. We have just put in stock several cases of new goods, and are every day receiving fresh additions. It is filled to completion with all the latest styles in Gloves, Hosiery, Neckwear, Undershirts, Collars, Cuffs, Shirts, Handkerchiefs, Suspenders, &c., and everything at popular prices. Catarrh

At this season of the year everybody has a cold, and some very bad ones. By frequent exposures the membranes of the nose become very sensitive, and catarrh and influenza are epidemic. Relief may be obtained by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

For many years in succession, beginning so far back I don't remember when, I had the catarrh in my head. It consisted of an excessive flow from my nose.

Ringing and Bursting Noises

in my head. Sometimes the hearing in my left ear was affected. Five years ago, about this season of the year, I began to use Hood's Sarsaparilla. I was helped right away, but I continued to use it until I felt myself cured.—Mrs. Sarah Canfield, Lowell, Mass.

Jerome Brownell, merchant, and extensive shipper at Victor, Ontario county, N. Y., writes: I have used Hood's Sarsaparilla for my catarrh, and it has helped me. I consider Hood's Sarsaparilla one of the best remedies for blood disease and catarrh.

100 Doses One Dollar

I have been troubled with that distressing complaint, catarrh, and have been using Hood's Sarsaparilla, and find it one of the best remedies I have ever taken. My trouble has lasted ten years, and never would get any relief until I commenced to use Hood's Sarsaparilla.—Martin Smith, Chicago, Ill.

Danger from Catarrh

depends upon the amount and extent of the poisonous infection. Unquestionably many deaths from consumption can be traced to neglected catarrh. There is a violent distress, prostrating coughing spells, the eyes weep, the head discharges copiously, and the head seems about to split.

In such cases Hood's Sarsaparilla corrects the catarrh by its direct action in discharging the poison from the blood through nature's great outlets, so that healthy, sound blood reaches the membranes and is wholesome.

☞ GIVE ME A CALL. ☜

He Wanted to Know.

A well-known fellow-citizen now prowling—not to say growling—through Europe writes us the following touching experience:

I had been for about half an hour, he says, sitting on the deck of one of the miserable little "packets" that ply between Dover and Calais, and exasperating my fellow passengers by refusing to join in the carnival of sea sickness going on around me, when a ruddy-faced, white-whiskered, bluff-looking individual who had been eyeing me for some time stepped up and said:

"Beg pardon, I'm sure; but are you really the American?"

"The American," I replied, "there are several, I believe."

"Of course, to be sure. I mean the one on board. I saw George B. Blank, San Francisco, California, U. S., painted on some of the baggage, and I picked you out right away as the owner." And the stranger inspected me from head to foot with as vivid a curiosity as if I'd been a wild man of the woods.

"Well," I finally exclaimed, "I am an American. What can I do for you?"

"Well—er—nothing—that—is—no—offense, I hope, and you are a Californian, too?" he said, rubbing his hands as though he had indeed met a rara avis. "Ever been scalped by the Indians, eh?"

"I think not," I replied.

"You've scalped some of them, though, haven't you?" persisted my inquisitor.

Concluding that inasmuch as I was in for being made a side show of I might as well indulge in some of the circus poster sort of thing, I looked my questioner calmly in the eyes and replied:

"Some twenty-six or seven, I forgot which; I have the tally nicked in the handle of my other scalping knife; I carry only one bowie in this country. So seldom one runs across any fun over here you know."

"Killed many white men?" asked the stranger, who appeared to be actually quivering with excitement and curiosity.

"Only eight or ten," I replied carelessly. "You see, in California there is a sort close season now for shooting white men. 'Tain't like the good old man-for-breakfast times. A fellow is only allowed to gun around promiscuous like four months in the year. So it's hard work to keep one's hand in, don't you see?"

"Well, I declare!" said the apparently stupefied man with the chop whiskers; "now about Chinamen?"

"Oh! we kill Chinamen all the year round, when they're fat," I explained. "But, then, there is lately some sort of an ordinance making it a misdemeanor to shoot a pigtail unless he is on the shady side of the street, or gets in your way. Folks are getting too infernally particular over that, for a fact."

"Ever been divorced?" finally said the stranger, whose eyes were now sticking out like pegs on a hat rack.

"Nine times, I think," I said. "In fact, I intended to have been again when I passed Chicago on my way over, but the train only stopped eleven minutes, and there wasn't time enough to rush it through—takes twenty-two minutes, you know."

I thought this had knocked him out, but after a few minute's bewildered cogitation he returned to the charge once more.

"Is it really true that all Americans wear chest protectors and eat nothing but pie?"

"Well, you see, the fact is that Americans are, as you know, such a frightfully busy people that they have not got time to sit down and eat a square meal, like you English. They must have something portable—something they can carry about with them and nibble on the sly. Tell you, sir, it looks like business when you see forty or fifty men hanging on the strap of a street car with one hand and eating with the other."

"I should rather think so," murmured the stranger.

"As for the chest protectors," I continued, "they are really nothing more than pocket suspenders around the neck, and large enough to carry a whole pie, which it keeps warm at the same time. A good hot mince pie stowed away in this manner not only imparts a gentle and graceful warmth to the entire system, but keeps a whole day's rations always within reach of the wearer. Grand idea, isn't it?"

"Well, I'm obsessed!" said my fairly paralyzed interrogator, gazing at my childlike and ingenuous face with profound awe. "Would—er—would you oblige me with one of your cards," he said; "I want to show it to my family, or they'll never believe a word of this never. Thanks—here's mine," and, as we had landed, he walked up the gang plank and was swallowed upby the mob of insane French cabmen.

As I stepped chuckling into my own department I glanced at the card of the stranger. It read, "Julius K. Juilkins, San Francisco, Cal."

I have spent about eight hours a day looking for the man ever since. There will be blood shed out of this, yet—mark my words.—Derrick Dunn, San Francisco Post.

ESTATE OF PETER R. ADAMS.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee—ss.

At a session of the Probate Court, for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, on Wednesday, the 7th day of November, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three.

Present, Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Peter R. Adams, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Mary C. Adams Shull, a daughter and heir-at-law of said deceased, alleging, among other things, that although more than twenty days have elapsed since the probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, yet that the executors named therein and to whom the execution of said will was committed, and the administration of said estate granted by an order of this court, made on the fifteenth day of October, 1883, have neglected to give bond as required by law and as ordered by this court whereby the said executors so named and appointed as aforesaid have forfeited their right to act as such executors, and praying that administration of said estate with the will annexed may be granted to Cordelia M. Adams, or to some other suitable person and that such other and further notice and proceedings may be had in the premises as may be required by the statute in such case made and provided.

Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the 3d day of December next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be holden at the Probate office in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

HIS OWN EXECUTOR.

A Well-known Gentleman's Philanthropy and the Commotion Caused by one of his Letters.

Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

We published in our local columns yesterday morning a significant letter from a gentleman known personally or by reputation to nearly every person in the land. We have received a number of letters protesting against the use of our columns for such "palpable frauds and misrepresentations," therefore, to confirm beyond a doubt the authenticity of the letter, and the genuineness of its sentiments, a reporter of this paper was commissioned to ascertain all the possible facts in the matter. Accordingly he visited Clifton Springs, saw the author of the letter, with the following result:

Dr. Henry Foster, the gentleman in question, is 62 or 64 years of age, and has an extremely cordial manner. He presides as superintendent over the celebrated sanitarium which accommodates over 500 guests and is unquestionably the leading health resort of the country. Several years ago this benevolent man wisely determined to be his own executor, and therefore turned over this magnificent property worth $[illegible],000 as a free gift to a board of trustees, representing the principal evangelical denominations. Among the trustees are Bishop [illegible] Protestant Episcopal, Buffalo; Bishop Matthew Simpson, Philadelphia, Methodist Episcopal; President M. B. Anderson of the University of Rochester; Rev. Dr. Clark, Secretary of the A. B. C. F. M., Boston. The benevolent purpose of the founder was to provide a home for God's overworked ministers and their families, whose health has been broken in Christ's service, also of ministers of any evangelical denomination, and laymen of any church, who otherwise would be unable to secure such care and treatment. The current expenses of the institution are met by the receipts from the hundreds of distinguished and wealthy people who every year crowd its utmost capacity. Here come rich and wealthy who were once in perfect health, but neglected the first symptoms of disease. The uncertain pains they felt at first were overlooked until their health became impaired. They little realized the danger before them, nor how alarming such trifling ailments might prove. They constitute all classes, including ministers and bishops, lawyers, judges, statesmen, merchants, journalists, college professors and officials from all parts of the land.

Drawing the morning Democrat and Chronicle from his pocket, the reporter remarked: "Doctor, that letter of yours has created a good deal of talk, and many of our readers have questioned its authenticity."

"To what do you refer," remarked the doctor.

"Have you not seen the paper?"

"Yes, but I have not had time to read it yet."

The reporter thereupon showed him the letter, which was as follows:

CLIFTON SPRINGS SANITARIUM CO.
CLIFTON SPRINGS, N.Y., Oct. 11, '84.

DEAR SIR. I am using Warner's Safe Cure, and I regard it as the best remedy for some forms of kidney diseases that we have. I am watching with great care some cases I am now treating with it, and I hope for favorable results.

I wish you might come down yourself, as I would like very much to talk with you about your sterling remedy and show you over our institution.

Yours truly,
HENRY FOSTER, M.D.

"I do not see why anybody should be sceptical concerning that letter," remarked the doctor.

"Isn't it unusual for a physician of your standing and influence to commend a proprietary preparation?"

"I don't know how it may be with others, but in this institution we allow no person to dictate to us what we shall use. Our purpose is to cure the sick, and for that work we use anything we know to be valuable. Because I know Warner's Safe Cure is a very valuable preparation, I commend it. As its power is manifested under my use, so shall I add to the completeness of my commendation."

"Have you ever analyzed it, doctor?"

"We always analyze before we try any preparation of which we do not know the constituents. But analysis, you know, only gives the elements; it does not give the all important proportions. The remarkable power of Warner's Safe Cure undoubtedly consists in the proportions according to which its elements are mixed." While there may be a thousand remedies made of the same elements, unless they are put together in proper proportions they are worthless as kidney and liver preparations.

"I hope some day to meet Mr. Warner personally, and extend to him congratulations for such the excellence of his preparations. I have heard much of him as the founder of the Warner Observatory, and as a man of large benevolence. The reputed high character of the man himself gave assurance to me in the first place that he would not put a remedy upon the market that was not worthy, and it was a source of gratification to me to find by actual experiment that the remedy itself sustained my impression."

The conclusion reached by Dr. Foster is precisely the same found by Drs. Theo. Davis, Robert A. Gunn, Ex-Surgeon Gen. Gallagher and others, and proves beyond a doubt the great efficacy of the remedy which has awakened so much attention in the land and rescued so many men, women and children from disease and death.

Alva Raymond, having rented his farm, will sell at auction on the premises, in the town of Raisin, 11 miles southeast of Comfort's mill, Wednesday, Nov. 26, at 12 o'clock M. the following property: Five yr old gelding, span colts coming 3, broke; 2 cows, 1 new milch, 5 yearlings, 4 spring calves, yearling bull, 7 shoats, McCormick Reaper and Binder, 3 lumber wagons, double and single buggy, rockaway, 2 set bobs, 3 set double harness, set light harness, nearly new, single harness, combined reaper and mower, grain drill, hay tedder, sulky rake, land roller, 2 two-horse cultivators, 4 single cultivators, 1 spring tooth harrow, 2 set Scotch harrows, 10 stacks hay, 4 plows, fanning mill, scales, bag-holder, scraper, cauldron kettle, fruit dryer, etc. Usual terms of sale. [illegible] what the will [illegible] THE INDEPENDENT of New York. [illegible] purpose two fields. First, as a religious journal, it is undenominational and broader than any other. Its aim is to strengthen and extend Evangelical religion, and to defend it against the attacks of Materialism, Atheism and Infidelity. It is free to approve or criticise it any of the developments whatever it believes is designed to advance or hinder the progress of the Gospel of Christ.

Among its religious writers are Leonard W. Bacon, D.D., S. C. Bartlett, D.D., Prest. John Bascom, Bishop Thos. M. Clark, Rev. Jos. Cook, Bishop A. C. Coxe, Geo. R. Crooks, D.D., Howard Crosby, D.D., Thos. L. Cuyler, D.D., Rev. Samuel Dyke, Geo. P. Fisher, D.D., Prof. Norman Fox, Washington Gladden, D.D., Bishop F. D. Huntington, Bishop J. P. Hurst, E. H. Morris, D.D., Prest. Noah Porter, Francis L. Patton, D.D., Philip Schaff, D.D., R. S. Storrs, D.D., Wm. M. Taylor, D.D., Wm. C. Wilkinson, D.D., Prest. T. D. Woolsey.

Second. As a literary journal it stands without a peer among the weekly press. During the past year it has published articles and poems by more than three hundred of the most talented writers in this country and Europe.

Among them Amelia A. Barr, Mary Clemmer, Rose Terry Cooke, Kate Foster, Dora Reed Goodale, Rev. W. E. Griffis, "Grace Greenwood," Thomas Hill, D.D., William D. Howells, "H. H.," Sidney Lanier, Rose Hawthorne Lathrop, Louise Chandler Moulton, Joaquin Miller, R. A. Oakes, Mrs. S. M. B. Piatt, Josephine Pollard, Richard Henry Stoddard, Edmund Clarence Stedman, Mrs. Laura Thompson, J. T. Trowbridge, Celia Thaxter, John Greenleaf Whittier, Sarah C. Woolsey, Susan E. Wallace, Wm. C. Ward and Prof. Charles A. Young.

THE INDEPENDENT will within the next few months publish stories by Wm. D. Howells, author of "Their Wedding Journey," "A Modern Instance," etc.; W. E. Norris, author of "Matrimony," "No New Thing," etc.; F. Marion Crawford, author of "Mr. Isaacs," "Dr. Claudius," etc.; J. S. of Dale, author of "Queerdale;" Edward Everett Hale, author of "Ten Times One is Ten," etc.; Julia Schayer, author of "Tiger Lilly and other Stories," Rebecca Harding Davis, Sarah Orne Jewett, Fred H. Story, Kate Upson Clarke, etc., etc. It is also negotiating with other distinguished story writers of England and America, whose names it does not as yet feel at liberty to make public.

In civil and political affairs The Independent contends for sound ideas and principles. It believes in the reform of the civil service and tariff, in the purification of politics, and maintains those principles which the highest ethics and best intelligence require.

The Independent has 32 distinct departments, 32 pages in all.

THE BEST OF THE AGRICULTURAL WEEKLIES.

THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN is the leading journal of American agriculture. In amount and practical value of contents, in extent and ability of correspondence, in quality of paper and style of publication, it occupies the first rank. It is believed to have no superior in either of the three chief divisions of Farm Crops and Processes,

Horticulture & Fruit-Growing
Live Stock and Dairying;

while it also includes all minor departments of rural interest, such as the poultry yard, entomology, bee-keeping, greenhouse and grapery, veterinary replies, farm questions and answers, fireside reading, domestic economy, and a summary of the news of the week. Its market reports are unusually complete, and much attention is paid to the prospects of the crops, as throwing light upon one of the most important of all questions—When to Buy and When to Sell. It is liberally illustrated, and is intended to supply, in a continually increasing degree, and in the best sense of the term, a

LIVE AGRICULTURAL NEWSPAPER.

Although the COUNTRY GENTLEMAN has been Greatly Enlarged by increasing its size from 28 to 32 pages weekly, the terms continue as heretofore, when paid strictly in advance: One copy one year, $2.50; four copies, $10, and an additional copy for the year free to the sender of the club. Ten copies, $20, and an additional copy for the year free to the sender of the club.

All new subscribers for 1884, paying in advance now, will receive the paper weekly from receipt of remittance to January 1st, 1885, without charge.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD
AND
The Rural Home,
ONE YEAR,
For Only Two Dollars

[illegible] Rural Home, published at Rochester, N. Y., have made a club arrangement that included it in 1883. Many of the ablest Agriculturists and Horticulturists write for it; its Eight Ample Pages are always brimful of practical information, and of fresh original miscellany of the highest character. It is, in short, the model journal for those who dwell in village and country homes, and should be the first one subscribed for after your local paper.

Although THE RURAL HOME is but One Dollar a year—marvellously cheap for such a well illustrated and superbly printed sheet—we have made special arrangements whereby we can club it with this paper at a price for both materially reduced. Our patrons will be greatly profited by accepting the offer above made. Any who may have paid us for a subscription term not yet expired, and who wish to embrace this clubbing offer, can have their credit extended accordingly.

If you are not familiar with THE RURAL HOME, and desire to examine it, a sample copy will be mailed from its office of publication on postal card request.

MAGAZINE OF ART

A richly illustrated and valuable record of the Beauties of Ancient, Mediæval, and Contemporary Taste.

Price 35 cents. Monthly. $3.50 Per Year.

THE NEW VOLUME

Commences with the December Number, 1883.

In entering upon its seventh year of its publication, the publishers of THE MAGAZINE OF ART desire to state that no effort or expense will be spared on their part, to make THE MAGAZINE OF ART in the future, what it has been in the past,—the most widely esteemed magazine of its kind in existence.

The Monthly Record of American Art, which has met with such favor, not only from artists, but also from the public, will be continued. This department is in charge of Mr. S. R. Koehler, and will add to the value of the Magazine as an exponent of American Art.

The December issue, being the first number of a new volume, will contain a Beautiful Original Etching, by R. U. Macbeth, A.R.A., Entitled

"Lady Bountiful."

A prospectus giving full details of the contributions to appear in the New Volume will be sent by mail to any address on application.

BY ORDER COMMITTEE.

Mr. E. J. Hollister last week received two bunches of celery from Peter Henderson & Co., the celebrated seedsmen of New York. It was grown from a new variety of seed which produces a plant that does not need banking. We sampled a few stalks of the same, by Mr. Hollister's permission, and found it good eating.

The Prospectus of the Detroit Free Press appears in another column. The price of the daily has been reduced to three cents and the weekly to one dollar per year. At these rock bottom figures no Michigan man of Democratic proclivities has any excuse for not taking the Free Press.—In the list of Michigan newspapers the old Free Press stands at the head.

Our worthy village president, A. W. Mills, was blessed with an addition to his family last Saturday evening, when an eleven pound boy appeared on the scene. Mr. Mills has two beautiful daughters and this time it is a boy. He is the happiest man in town. Born on the 400th anniversary of Luther's birth, Martin Luther Mills let him be named, and let him be dedicated to the ministry.

The Detroit Post says: If the mania for hunting continues as at present, it will be only a very few years before the deer will be exterminated notwithstanding the laws made for their protection.

The Original Georgia Minstrels gave a fine entertainment at Coe's opera house last evening. The music was fine, and the singing and jokes equal to the best minstrel troupes.—New Haven Courier.

The war concert which is in preparation here will take place the first week in December probably. Co. C will assist in the exercises, in full uniform, and a large chorus of singers will be organized. The several choisters of the village constitute a musical committee, and the business arrangements are in charge of Prof. Hammond. No pains will be spared to make it a musical and financial success.

A little short work with a thief was accomplished Monday night. A son of J. H. Green, of Raisin, drove a horse and buggy belonging to Mr. Green over to Westgate's and while he was in he hoped some thief drove off with them. The theft was soon after discovered and chase made.—The chase was overhauled in a short time and captured by young Green while in the act of climbing over a fence to escape. He was taken to Adrian on Tuesday by Deputy Stevens where he waved examination and was bound over for trial.

THE NEW RAILROAD TIME.

A new time card goes into effect on the Lake Shore road next Sunday.—Trains are now run by Columbus time which is four minutes faster than Tecumseh true time. Under the new schedule trains will run on 90th meridian time which is twenty-eight minutes slower than Columbus time. All railroad time pieces will be set back twenty-eight minutes next Sunday, and then railroad time will be just twenty-four minutes slower than Tecumseh true time, and our village regulators will be set accordingly on that day. The morning train, south, will leave this station, at 7:20 (Lake Shore time), which will be 7:44 Tecumseh time. The Lake Shore time is fixed on the "New Standard of the 90th meridian." It is not known as yet whether the towns of the State will adopt the railroad standard. Should Detroit and a few other large towns do so the rest of the state would undoubtedly follow suit. On Monday next the trains on our Branch will run as follows:

GOING NORTH.

Freight	6:15 A. M.
Express	11:45 A. M.
Express	9:34 P. M.

GOING SOUTH.

Express	7:20 A. M.
Express	3:26 P. M.
Freight	4:02 P. M.

MURDER AT DUNDEE.

The village of Dundee was the scene of a fight and stabbing affray at 11 o'clock last Saturday night, which ended in John Garver killing Burt Rose. Saturday, during a short absence of the proprietor of Tiffany's Hotel, Garver tended bar and refused Rose a drink which greatly angered him. Early in the evening they drank from the same bottle, and appeared friendly. They attended an entertainment at the village hall, where Rose and two companions renewed their abuse of Garver, who sought another part of the hall. After the show they met in the street and a fight ensued. It is unknown who struck the first blow. Garver was rolled under and they were separated. Rose expired immediately. Garver delivered himself to Marshal Frank Smith and was taken to the Monroe jail. The instrument used was found shut in Garver's pocket. It was a three bladed pocket knife, the large blade three and one-half inches long by half an inch wide, with blood on both sides. The blade entered between the seventh and eighth ribs near the front and severed the main artery of the heart. Garver was interviewed in jail. He said he never saw Rose before. He met him with his companions, and they immediately applied vile epithets. Garver went to another part of the house. Friends told him that the Rose party would waylay him. He went to the hotel to avoid meeting them. He started home and 100 feet from the hotel was attacked by the three, knocked down and pounded and kicked. Bystanders pulled Rose off, but Garver knows nothing about the stabbing.—He says he drank two beers, but did not feel it. The others were drunk. The truth appears to be that all were somewhat under the influence of liquor. Garver is six feet and one eighth of an inch, aged 49, and has a wife. He is a laborer, quiet appearing, with the reputation of being peaceable and orderly. He came to Dundee from Indianapolis last April. Rose was a laborer living in the township of Dundee, near the Lenawee line, aged 28. He leaves a wife and child. He was quarrelsome when in liquor. The coroner's jury examined several witnesses and adjourned until the 19th. Public opinion appears to favor Garver, it being thought that Rose forced the fight, and brought on his own death.

Assistant Engineer Roeh, of the M. & O. was in town Tuesday.

Mrs. A. L. Henry, of Lansing, has been visiting among her Tecumseh friends for a few days.

Geo. E. Adamson seems to be prospering in his new South Side Jewelry Store. See his announcement on 2nd page.

S. S. Scovill arrived in town yesterday and will make Tecumseh his headquarters for a few weeks. He has some more railroad work to do in this vicinity.

The Magazine of Art is unquestionably the best publication of the kind, if we take into consideration the price. Most art publications charge double or triple as much for a year's subscription. The Magazine of Art is ably edited and is an elegant specimen of choice letter-press work. We call attention to the prospectus.

Tillottson's Golden Oil is a new medicine made by Dorr Tillottson, of Owosso, and is said to be a sure cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds Sore Throat, Asthma, Rheumatism, Severe Pains in the Back, Side or Limbs, Sprains, Bruises, Burns, Wounds, Chilblains, Inflamation and Swellings, Earache, Neuralgia and Headache. It will be kept on sale at Marks & Russel's Drug Store.

There will be a social entertainment and oyster supper at Grange Hall in Macon, on Friday, Nov. 23d., at 7 o'clock P. M. An open Grange meeting will be held at which the following will be the program.

Debate: "Free trade vs. Protective Policy." Affirmative—A. Easlick, Isaac Mills. Negative—Geo Howell, R. Hall.

Quartette—Mrs. J. Osborn.

Song—Miss Josie Clarkson.

Instrumental Music—Miss Julia Easlick.

There will be an oyster supper at the hall at which time a fee will be charged of 25cts. All and everybody are invited to attend the meeting and supper.

The North American Review for November by the fullness and the sterling worth of the articles it contains, satisfies the requirements of the most exacting reader. Senator H. B. Anthony writes of "Limited Suffrage in Rhode Island" giving incidentally a highly interesting sketch of the early constitutional history of that little Commonwealth. Dr. Norvin Green, President of the Western Union Company, in an article entitled "The Government and the Telegraph," cites the provisions of the Federal Constitution and the determinations of the Supreme Court which appear to debar the General Government from assuming the management of the telegraph lines. "Dr. Hammond's Estimate of Women" is reviewed by Mrs. Lillie Devereux Blake, Miss Nina Morais, Mrs. Sara A. Underwood and Dr. Clemence S. Lozier. Fifty cents a copy; $5 a year. Published at 30 Lafayette Place, and sold by newsdealers generally.

The new standard of railroad time adopted by the Chicago national time convention, goes into effect Sunday, November 18th, at noon. On the majority of roads where the difference in time will not exceed ten minutes clocks and watches will be altered without change of time tables. Where the difference will be more than ten minutes, or where it is desired that trains shall run at the same moment of local time as at present, it will be necessary to make the schedule as many minutes fast as the watches and clocks are made slow. At present there are fifty-three standards of railroad time in the country. Under the new order there will be but five standards; and these very simple. The basis of the new is the meridians, and the five standards will be the following: The intercolonial division, with a central meridian of 60° west of Greenwich; the Eastern, with a central meridian of 90° west; and the Pacific division, with a central meridian of 120° west. Each standard varies from its neighbor by one hour, and by a singular coincidence the termini of all the big lines of railway are at the point of transition from one meridian to another.

MICHIGAN AND OHIO ELECTION.

At a meeting held in Turners, N. Y. on Nov. 1st, the following were elected directors of the new Michigan & Ohio railroad: J. A. Latcha, C. R. Cummings, William B. Howard, W. A. Brown, George I. Seney, John T. Martin, George Ingersoll, E. R. T. Lyman, C. S. Bryce, Samuel Thomas and Daniel Ellis. The newly elected directors then chose J. A. Latcha as president. On that day the officers took possession of the road and since then the following notices have been received by employes. The first is from the contractors:

CHICAGO, ILL., Nov. 1, 1883.

The Michigan & Ohio railroad is this day delivered to the railroad company. All persons heretofore in our employ will report to the president of said company.

BROWN, HOWARD & CO.

TOLEDO, OHIO, Nov. 1.

I have this day assumed control of the Michigan & Ohio railroad and all its property. Employes heretofore in the employ of the contractors may continue in the employment of said railroad company and report to their superiors, as heretofore, until further notice.

President M. & O.

COUNTY CONDENSATIONS.

Deerfield has two street lamps. A good beginning, anyhow.

Col. Eldridge will leave home for Washington on Monday next.

The telegraph line on the M. & O. road is being rapidly pushed forward.

Sixty physicians have registered with the county clerk up to this date.

The old Exchange Hotel in Addison has been changed to the "M. & O. House."

A festive young couple over eighty years old were recently married at Addison.

There are one hundred and thirty two telephones in the Adrian local exchange.

Dogs attended a flock of sheep near Hudson last week and butchered sixteen of them.

The suit against Frank Kirchgessner, of Clinton, for selling liquor without a license was brought on last Friday and continued two weeks.

John Bonner, Jr., junior owner of the Adrian Record, was eighteen years of age last Sunday, and he received a handsome gold watch from his father in honor of the occasion.

Rev. J. A. De Spelder, of Macon, having received a second call to the principalship of the Theological Academy of Orange City, Iowa, has concluded to accept the same.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. Miles, of Petoskey, have been making their old friends in Clinton a visit. George was formerly in the Clinton News office and is now foreman of the Petoskey Record.

Morenci Observer: Peter Powers, of Chesterfield, returned last Saturday from the Dominion bringing with him a couple of Canadian ponies.—"Pete" has only 45 horses on his place now and consequently feels a little lonesome.

Morenci Observer: The sheriff of Fulton county came up on Friday week and summoned the contractors on the Bean creek ditch to appear in court to answer, the effect being to stop work until the legal questions in the case are settled.

Adrian Press: Besides canning squashes and pumpkins, and making apple jelly from all the apples they could get, Messrs. Ladd and Clement have also gone into the manufacture of Tomato Catsup, having recently made, put up and labeled about 20 barrels of the aforesaid sauce.

Clinton News: Mr. and Mrs. Leander Fisk closed their visit in Clinton Monday, and took the afternoon train for Albion where they expect to make a short visit and then go to Newton, Iowa. From the latter point they will proceed direct to their far western home in San Francisco.

Deerfield Record: The members of the old band are agitating the question of reorganization, and for that purpose held a meeting in the council room Monday evening. As the members own a set of instruments, and there are several good musicians among the number, we see no reason why such an organization would not be successful.

Hudson Gazette: The three-year-old son of Alexander Powell, of Ransom, was drowned in a cistern on Sunday last. The little unfortunate went to sit down on a plank covering the cistern, when it turned over, precipitating him into the water. The child was not missed by the parents for some time, when a search was begun and three hours later the discovery of his sad death was made.

Morenci Observer: The County Grange, which convened in this village Thursday was attended by representative men and women of the order from all over the county. The dinner which was served in the hall, was all that could be desired in that line, and did great credit to the ladies of the Morenci Grange, who had the matter in charge. Mr. Beals, of Rollin, presided at the meeting in the afternoon, and the county lecturer, Hon. T. F. Moore, presented the programme. A pretty recitation by sister May Allis, of the Madison Grange, and an exceedingly well prepared essay by Mrs. A. J. Sutton, was followed by a speech from Graves, of Palmyra, who noted in a happy way the fact that the young men were leaving the farm and engaging in other professions and the question to be solved was, how shall the farmers of the county obtain the requisite help in the future. He had sent right on to the old country and obtained excellent German help and advised others to do the same. His speech was followed by a pretty recitation by Miss Nellie Beals, of Rollin, and Mr. Streets, of Palmyra. Miss Florence Russell recited "Evening on the Farm," with decided effect, and Miss Hattie Beals recited "The Old Man Going to School" in first rate style. Mr. Moore closed with some excellent remarks, touching the aims and purposes of the order. Volunteers were called for and Elder McLean gave a good talk, which was well received by all present. The entire exercises were sandwiched by music, which made the session an exceedingly pleasant one.—The Grange then resumed work in the 5th degree.

Go and hear the minstrels next Wednesday.

District Manager Mason, of the telephone company was in town yesterday.

The Public Library will be open on Saturday from 2 to 5 and from 7 to 8 o'clock, P. M.

What Has It Done for You?

[illegible]

Irish Wit.

In repartee Irishmen have long been distinguished. The joy of retaliation is a marked characteristic of the race. On one occasion Judge Foster, a popular Irish magistrate, in pronouncing the sentence of the court, said to a notorious drunkard: "You will be confined in jail for the longest period the law will allow, and I sincerely hope you will devote some portion of the time to cursing whisky." "By the powers I will," was the answer, "and Porter, too."

A steamboat passenger not finding his handkerchief readily, somewhat suspiciously inquired of an Irishman who stood beside him if he had seen it, and insinuated a charge of theft, but afterward finding the said article in his hat, began to apologize. "Oh," said [illegible] "don't be after saying another single word. I have a more pleasing and [illegible] place for it. You took me for a thief, and I took you for a gentleman."

"I engaged," said a burly lawyer, a plaintiff's way to conduct me some few miles into the country, and I proceeded some distance, when it came to a sudden standstill at the beginning of a rather steep incline, and the coachman leaping to the ground, came to the door and opened it. "What are you at, man? What are you at, man? This is not where I ordered you to go." "Has the animal jibbed?" "What, yer honor? whist!" said Paddy in an undertone. "I'm only doasing it easy. I'm just hang the door; and the crathy old creature will think he's got rid of yer honor's presence!" [illegible] at the top of the hill in time.

The following are a few instances of amusing blunders, proverbially [illegible]

[illegible] the edge of a small river in the county of Cavan, in Ireland. There is [illegible] a sign with the following inscription cut upon it, no doubt for the information of strangers: "N. B.—When the river [illegible] is not safe to ride over."

But the above is almost if not quite eclipsed by the famous post erected at a cross road by the surveyors of the Kent roads in England. "This is the parish path of Eastcheap. If you can't read this, go and get some body to the parish road."

In a late work on [illegible] in the Irish House of Commons in 1786, on the Loyalty Fund, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir John Parnell, observed [illegible] "Mr. Vandeleur [illegible] he felt [illegible] of Ireland." [illegible] Parnell [illegible] "[illegible] made by making [illegible] of wood."

To Repair Damages.

Dear lady, there is probably no use telling you that fashionable life in a great city is a rough one on your beauty. Late hours, loss of sleep and mental excitement will leave you by and by shorn of those beautiful tresses which drew lovers around you in other years. Artificial substitutes can never pass for those rich and glossy locks. Parker's Hair Balsam will stop your hair from falling out, restore its natural color and softness, and prove cleansing and beneficial to the scalp.

A Startling Discovery.

Physicians are often startled by remarkable discoveries. The fact that Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and all throat and lung diseases is daily curing patients, that they have given up to die, is startling them to realize their sense of duty, and examine into the merits of this wonderful discovery; resulting in hundreds of our best physicians using it in their practice. Trial bottles free. Regular size $1.

Sold by C. A. Wright & Co.

A correspondent of the Ohio Farmer says that he has found by experience that six Cotswold sheep will not consume more food than a cow, and are more profitable. For a lamb of this breed, weighing 125 pounds, $5.50 is obtained. He estimates that six ewes will produce eight lambs per annum and fifty pounds of wool.

One voice all over the land goes up from mothers, that is, "My daughters are so feeble and sad, with no strength, all out of breath and life at the least exertion. What can we do for them?" The answer is simple and full of hope. One to four weeks' use of Hop Bitters will make them healthy, rosy, sprightly and cheerful.

[illegible]

A man suffering from debility and loss of appetite took two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, gained 10 pounds and got well.

Logical deduction. She was a Boston lady of culture. She stood watching a canal boat loaded with ice as it was being locked into the canal from Lake Champlain. "What is that boat loaded with?" "Ice," was the reply. "Oh, my!" she exclaimed, "if the horrid stuff should melt the water would sink the boat."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Its record of forty years is one of constant triumph over diseases of the blood.

ZOA-PHORA

To a Sovereign Remedy for all [illegible] peculiar to

WOMEN.

[illegible]

Dr. Pengelly:

[illegible] I am more than pleased with the effect of your Zoa-Phora in our daughter's case. I am surprised to see how she has improved. She is gaining in weight and color, and I think feels better than she ever did; her nerves are steady, and the distress in her chest is entirely gone. I firmly believe that Zoa-Phora is all that has saved her life. I am willing you should use my letter, for I am not afraid to tell what a wonderful cure your medicine is. Yours respectfully,

MRS. SARAH RANDOLPH.

N. B.—This was a case of suppression.

From Mrs. John Spitler.

No. 8 Wilt St., Fort Wayne, Ind.

[illegible] suffered for sixteen years with spasmodic pain in my head and general nervous debility. Recently I had a severe attack of pain in my head, caused by weakness and nervous exhaustion. I thought I should die. My husband said we would test Zoa-Phora thoroughly. He gave it to me according to directions for severe cases, and in less than [illegible] I had complete relief. I advise all ladies who suffer from nervous or sick headache, or any form of female weakness, to use Zoa-Phora. There is no medicine to compare with it.

MADE ON PURPOSE.

One of Those Mistakes Which are More Frequent than Profitable.

"Why, my child, this is not Benson's Capcine Porous Plaster," said a father to his little daughter, after examining a package she had just brought from the drug store.

"Isn't it, papa? I'm sorry, but I asked the man for Benson's. I knew I did, and he took the 25c you gave me to pay for it, while" exclaimed the child positively. "Maybe the drug man made a mistake."

"I'll go to see and see," was the stern reply. Soon the child's mother, in the doomed his coat and hat.

"Why didn't you send me Benson's plaster, instead of this cheap old trashy thing?"

"Why, I thought that would suit you just as well."

"You thought! you thought! What business had you to think? I don't pay you for thinking, but for filling my orders," said the indignant caller, contemptuously. "There, take that thing back and give me the right stuff, I'll go where I can get what I want elsewhere."

DR. B. MINCER,

Scientific Optician!

I have devoted 25 years wholly to a study of the eye, and how to aid vision properly, and I make a specialty of fitting glasses to the eyes that have been injured by cheap, inferior glasses. I manufacture every kind of glasses, and guarantee satisfaction. Read what prominent physicians of Adrian say:

Having for some time past used glasses to improve my sight, without satisfactorily gaining my object, I called on Mr. Mincer, optician, of Detroit, who readily adapted glasses to my eyes, with which I am so well pleased, that I cheerfully speak in his favor. His method of examining and his application in selecting glasses to fit the eye can only be acquired by a knowledge of the useful organ to which must be added extensive experience. He has also adapted glasses to Mrs. Baker's eyes with which she is well pleased. I recommend him to all who need glasses adapted to their wants; poor glasses are an abomination.

V. A. BAKER, M.D.

ADRIAN, Nov. 18, 1882.

I have used spectacles bought of Mr. B. Mincer for the past three months, and find them superior to any I have ever used, and can cheerfully recommend him to anyone in need of glasses, and the benefit of his experience in the science of optics to adjust proper lenses.

DANIEL TODD, M.D.

I have investigated the work of Mr. B. Mincer, optician. I have reason to believe that he understands his profession, and adjusts excellent glasses on scientific principles. C. RYND, M.D.

REMEMBER!

I will visit every town in the county during the month.

COLDS. "Orrville, Ohio, Sept. 10, 1882. "Having been subject to a bronchial affection, with frequent colds, for a number of years, I hereby certify that AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL gives me prompt relief, and is the most effective remedy I have ever tried.

JAMES A. HAMILTON, Editor of The Crescent."

COUGHS. "Mt. Gilead, Ohio, June 26, 1882. "I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL this spring for a severe cough and lung trouble with good effect, and I am pleased to recommend it to any one similarly affected.

POSTAGE STAMPS.—There are about six thousand different descriptions of postage stamps in existence. The museum of the Berlin Post Office alone contains between four and five thousand specimens, of which half are from Europe, and the remainder divided between Asia, Africa, America and Australia. What country carries off the palm for absurdity and grotesqueness of artistic design and inferiority of execution, we are not told, but if the collection is faithfully representative the variety of ugliness must be considerable. Some of the stamps, it appears, bear coats of arms, and other emblems, impartially borrowed from the heavens above, the earth beneath, and the waters under the earth—stars, eagles, lions, horses, serpents, railway trains, dolphins and other "fearful wildfowl." There are, moreover, the effigies of five emperors, eighteen kings, three queens, one grand duke, several inferior titled rulers, and many presidents. In so many countries and nationalities some really attractive specimens must have been elaborated.

Clifton Springs, N.Y., July 13, 1882.

Rheumatic Syrup Co.:

Gents—I make the following statement for the benefit of those that suffer with that terrible disease—rheumatism. I have been troubled, more or less for twelve years and at times could hardly use my arms. It was my arms and shoulders principally. I took but one bottle of your Syrup and it stopped the pain and took the soreness out, so I am feeling well. I cheerfully recommend your Syrup to any suffering from rheumatism.

G. W. Warfield.

We challenge any remedy to show an appreciation at home which has been poured upon Rheumatic Syrup. The permanent cures it has effected wherever it has been tried have made for it a reputation that no other remedy has ever been able to attain.

I remarked to an old farmer back in the country, whom I had not seen for several years, and whose farm, in the meantime, had improved wonderfully, that his place was so changed I hardly knew it. "Yes," said he, "I've been fixin' up a little. The old woman pestered me to death about the garden, and so I slicked it up a little, and fixed about the house, and it looked so nice I went at the farm fences and the brush, and saved more manure, and kept killing the weeds, and the crops got better, and so I kept going on, and things do look pretty good now. Wife takes a paper, and I take one, and I get time to read it too, and I used to think that I hadn't time for anything." And so he ran on, seemingly much pleased with what he had done, and his life and his home without doubt the happier for it. Examples of a like kind may be found all over the country.

Is Fun Better than Physic?

Fun is excellent; a hearty laugh is known the whole world over to be a health promoter; but fun does not fill the bill when a man needs physic, on the other hand people take too much physic. They would be more healthy, live longer and enjoy life thoroughly if they used Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic, which cures all blood disorders, indigestion, kidney and liver troubles, removes pimples, and is a perfect tonic. Can be taken by the most delicate. Only 50c a bottle, of Baker & Hall.

A GATE WITHOUT HINGES.—A subscriber in Pennsylvania sends a description of a gate which is without hinges. It turns upon a pin, of 1½-inch round iron, fixed in a block of wood or a stone under the heel post, and a pin bent to a proper shape, fitted in the top of the heel post. This method of hanging a gate is cheap, simple, and more secure than to use hinges.

Catarrh.

The remarkable results in a disease so universal and with such a variety of characteristics as Catarrh, prove how effectually Hood's Sarsaparilla, acting through the blood, reaches every part of the human system. A medicine, like everything else, can be fairly judged only by its results. We point with pride to the glorious record Hood's Sarsaparilla has entered upon the hearts of thousands of people it has cured of catarrh.

Give hens constant access to lime in some form. Hens must have the raw material in order to manufacture shells; they cannot make them out of nothing.

Guinea fowls will keep all bugs and insects of every discription off garden vines. They will not scratch like other fowls, or harm the most delicate plant.

That poor bedridden, invalid wife, sister, mother, or daughter, can be made the picture of health by a few bottles of Hop Bitters. Will you let them suffer when so easily cured?

Cost of Bringing up a Boy.

A clergyman who has been discoursing about boys has devoted considerable attention to the cost of these somewhat necessary individuals, and he estimates the expense of bringing a good boy, with all the advantages of city life, to the age of fifteen, at about $5,000. These figures are about doubled by the time the boy is of age, if he goes through college. A bad boy, arrived at the age mentioned, costs fully as much, even if he has not been to college, and the computation, as the reverend gentlemen suggests, does not include the value of the mother's tears and father's gray hairs. Most men who have brought up boys will agree that the estimate is not too high.

Have you taken a cold? You can cure it promptly by using Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

HOW OUR FORESTS DISAPPEAR.—The manufacture and shipment of timber is the leading industry in Washington Territory, employing a great many working men, and an immense number of large saw mills, operated by steam and water power. A large fleet of ships and some small exporting steamers convey the timber to San Francisco, East Indies, Europe, Australia, South America, Egypt, Japan and China. The timber shipped from one district in western Washington Territory in 1876, by vessels, without reckoning the home consumption, equalled 40,000 railway carloads, or 2,000 railway trains of twenty cars each, and in 1878 amounted to 250,000,000 feet. Timbered lands well situated for logging purposes sell at from eight to twelve dollars per acre. Timber miles from a river timber lands can be had from two to three dollars per acre.

Avoid cheap goods. The Hop Plaster cures pains and aches where other plasters simply relieve, 25c at all drug stores.

If you are troubled with sores, aches, pains and general weakness of the various bodily functions, don't be deceived by the advertisements of bitters, kidney medicines, etc., whose certificates of pretended cures, are often paid for. Put your trust in that simple remedy called Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. It will cure you by purifying the blood and strengthening the weak portions of your body. You will also find it very refreshing to the brain and nervous system. The proprietors receive hundreds of letters bestowing upon it the highest praise.

Canning Fruit.

In canning fruit it is wise to use a good deal of sugar. Plain canned fruit is apt to turn, and does not retain its flavor as when made a little rich. If our housekeepers would take as much pains in making preserves as the French do, they would find themselves amply rewarded when in the winter, they turn out the beautiful clear fruit, always in perfect shape. To preserve fruit in the French method, it is necessary to make a clear syrup first, which can be done by melting two pounds of the best sugar with a pint of water, using a white porcelain kettle; add the slightly beaten white of one egg before the syrup becomes hot; let it boil, and skim it until the scum ceases to appear. Then put in carefully selected fruit, a few at a time, watching carefully that they do not break, and removing one at a time as soon as they become soft. When these are put in glass jars and the syrup poured over them, the result will make glad the most stoical.

The testimony of many who long suffered from ill-health, caused by an impure state of the blood, goes to prove that the best remedy for making the blood rich, red and pure, for beautifying the complexion, for curing sores, pimples and other skin diseases, for removing aches, pains, stiff joints, rheumatism, etc., for increasing the power of endurance, for giving health and strength to every weak portion of the body, is Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. Its effect pleases the user in every instance. No other remedy equals it.

A copy of the oldest newspaper, of which anything is known was recently found in the library of the University of Heidelberg. John Carolus, of Strasburg, is thought to have printed this copy, which is in the form of a quarto volume and bears the date of 1000. Much of the contents is extremely interesting, and consists principally of letters written by correspondents. These letters, when coming from Rome, were twenty-one days on the route; from Venice, fourteen to seventeen days, and from Vienna, about eight days. When there was not sufficient matter to fill out the sheets, blank spaces were left. One of the incidents mentioned was the manufacture of a telescope, by Galileo. Some of the news was of a very bloody character, and pictures a lawless state of society, one item relating to the confession of seven criminals who acknowledged that "on the 18 of this month they threw about fourteen persons into the water, and that their band numbered eighty, who for the most part were natives of Prague."

Your cough is growing worse. That soreness and pain in the throat and lungs is increasing. Better get rid of the absurd idea that anything will cure a cough or cold, and give Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry a trial before it is too late. It never fails to check consumption, and quickly cures all coughs and colds.

It is said by a well-known Illinois educator that "The average western farmer toils hard early and late, often depriving himself of needed rest and sleep—for what? To raise corn. For what? To feed hogs. For what? To get money with which to buy more land. For what? To raise more corn. For what? To feed more hogs. For what? To buy more land. And what does he want with more land? Why he wishes to raise more corn—to feed more hogs—to buy more land—to raise more corn—to feed more hogs—and in this circle he moves until the Almighty stops his hoggish proceedings."

Thousands Say So.

Mr. T. W. Atkins, Girard, Kan., writes: "I never hesitate to recommend your Electric Bitters to my customers, they give entire satisfaction and are rapid sellers." Electric Bitters are the purest and best medicine known and will positively cure Kidney and Liver complaints. Purify the blood and regulate the bowels. No family can afford to be without them. They will save hundreds of dollars in doctor's bills every year. Sold at fifty cents a bottle.

SWISS MOUNTAIN GIRLS.—In these beautiful health-giving mountains one would expect to find the most beautiful and healthy-looking of all girls. Where only pure air is to be breathed, inspiring scenes to be witnessed, women should be as fair as daughters of the gods. But not so. The women in Switzerland have a prematurely worn and aged look; if at twenty they were robust and possessed of that attraction which good health bestows—at thirty they are faded and seem to take pleasure only in going through their dull and never-ending round of duty. For they do the greater share of the work in the field and in the house, and in addition rear large families. In fact they make up in usefulness what they lack in beauty.

The town of Dubrignolles on the Turkish side of the Adriatic Sea, at a point opposite Rome and Naples, midway between them. It is called in that quarter of the earth Dead Men's Town. About 7800 people live there, and are the effete descendants of the most formidable band of pirates that ever existed. It is a very old town. One hundred and sixty-seven years before Christ the city surrendered to the Romans, and received exemption from taxation, and its freedom. From 1500 to 1600 the pirates held full sway, and in 1718 a great battle was lost there by the Venetians.

Ministers Sound its Praise.

Rev. Mr. Greenfields, Knoxville, Tenn., writes as follows: "Samaritan Nervine permanently cured my son of epileptic fits." Here's food for thought. Sold by druggists, $1.50.

Reasons Why You Feel Badly.

Because your stomach is not doing its work properly.
Because your liver is out of order, and wants righting.
Because your blood is thin, and needs iron in it.
Because you are troubled with nervous aches and pains.
Because you are vexed with languor and debility,

All these Reasons Can be Set Aside by the Use of Brown's Iron Bitters, which will Tone up your enfeebled stomach, and help it to digest.

Refresh your wearied liver and put it in splendid order.
Enrich your watery blood, and give it a rich red color.
Calm your worried nerves, and give them restful peace.
Strengthen your whole system and drive debility and languor out.

Considering that any man who has a dollar may buy of the nearest druggist a bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters, there is no reason why people should continue to feel badly. [illegible] the fun of it.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

BROOKLYN BOSH.

It is wrong to visit art galleries, and take away more than your share of prejudice but it did seem as if some of the gentlemen there expected the ladies to be just a little bit shocked and then pass by on the other side. These last were but few in number, and had all passed. One of them called my attention so pointedly to something worthy of admiration that it was plain she did not like my prolonged investigation, and so gave a mild old gentleman a chance to speak his mind. I hope if the remains of what moral courage I have left should ever desert me, that it will be returned by the finder as soon as possible although it is of small value. Whether human or not, the Nymphs are painted in our image, and if women were always represented so truthfully and gracefully there would be less trouble in the world. I was not shocked, and did not cross over until I got ready, but I am as sorry for my unregenerate qualifications as my friends can wish.

My critics condemned the Nymphs, but were ecstatic over the twins, and Christ on the cross. The first were blessed babies, to which I agreed, but could not see why the picture of the crucifixion should be tolerated, if the other was not. My unfortunate blunder ranked next to blasphemy, for the reason that Christ had always been painted that way. It was a true copy of his position on the cross, and besides he was a perfect being, and no matter how he was portrayed, it was wrong to criticise. Perhaps so, but its queer. Guided by love is a world of beauty condensed. It represents a boy and girl seated in a boat. They are not minding their oars, but drift with the current among reeds and water lilies. A cupid wearing wings and the mantle of charity presides as helmsman for the reckless voyagers, and yet no one seemed to worry about them.

The picture of Saint Aloysius and the infant Savior is the gift from the present Pope of Rome to the Detroit Art Loan, and is accompanied by his blessing. It represents the marriage of Christ and the church. Some who had been disciplined until their fitness to receive is past questioning, disregarded the commandment card by touching the hem of the holy scene and went in peace.

SPRINGVILLE SNUFF.

Jerome Kirkby is about to put an addition on his house, a kitchen 12x14.

Poultry is all delivered for Thanksgiving. Smith & Ayres had three deck loads delivered at this place last Monday.

The Thanksgiving party is expected to be as usual, one equally as good as any ever given in the place.

The money for the depot between the Springville road and the Daniels road is guaranteed and that question will soon be settled.

FARMERS' CLUB.

The first meeting of the Farmers' Club for the present season was held at the residence of Mr. J. W. Benedict, Nov. 9th. There was about 70 persons present which showed that the interest in the club has not all died out during the long recess.

At the request of the secretary, she was relieved from the duties of such and Mr. A. G. Hall was elected Sec., pro tem. The meeting opened with music by the choir, which was followed with the following program:

Select Reading—Mrs. Jno. Gillespie.
Song—Lizzie Henderson and Ellen Fisher.
Essay—F. V. Horton.
Subject—Reminiscences.

Mr. Horton gave a short and very good description of his father's trip from his pleasant eastern home to the then territory of Michigan. He also gave a glowing description of the trials and sufferings of the early settlers and compared them with the conveniences and comforts which their children now enjoy in one of the most beautiful countries in the union. The essay was well received by all present.

Dec.—Grant Schreder.

His declamation contained good sound sense for the young farmer, but was rather rough on the young lawyer.

Inst. music—Miss Rhoda Benedict.

Question—Is it right for the people of Michigan to be taxed for the erection and support of such magnificent and expensive public institutions as the Reform School at Adrian, and like institutions intended for penal purposes. Led by R. R. Hall who spoke very much in favor of the manner in which the school was conducted. He was followed by several others, all of which thought there was a great deal of money needlessly expended to make the buildings attractive.

The next meeting will be held at the residence of Mr. George Griswold, where the following program will be carried out:

Music—Choir.
Select reading—Mrs. Geo. Griswold.
Dec.—Henry Horton.
Music—Mrs. Wm. Waldron and Miss Griswold.
Essay—Fred Henderson.
Rec.—Eva Rector.
Music.
Question—Resolved, That the farmer should ship or sell his produce without the aid of middlemen.

A. G. HALL, Sec. pro tem.

COUNTY FINANCES.

In a recent number of the Morenci Observer, appeared the following item:

The county tax to be collected this fall will be $74,000, to the minds of most people an extravagant figure.

In the last issue of that paper appears a communication from the county clerk as follows:

The figures given are correct, and the total sum is composed as follows; Contingent fund, $25,000; court-house fund, $16,666.66; poor fund, $14,000; jurors' fund for county $4,500; insane asylum fund, $5,000; salaries of county officers, $4,500; stenographer, $700; probate register, $750; court house rent, $1,200; sheriff's contingent fund, $500; school examiners, $600; night watch, $480; prosecuting attorney's contingent fund, $500. Total $74,396.66.

Out of this amount should be deducted the sum of $16,666.66, the tax for building the court house, which is an extraordinary assessment, and should be deducted from the estimates for the ordinary expenditure of the year. Deducting this amount leaves the sum of $57,730 for the usual or ordinary expenses of the county. By an examination of the record, I find that there has been assessed for the years named, for the county tax, the following amounts, viz:

1883, $57,730; 1882, $56,380; 1881, $42,780; 1880, $48,700; 1879, $45,872; 1878, $59,802.59; 1877, $55,122.91; 1876, $58,022; 1875, $47,222; 1874, $40,722.

This statement covering a period of ten years last past, will be sure to show the average county tax.

It should be remembered also that the Board of Supervisors finding that previous boards had apportioned too small a sum for contingent expenses, making it necessary to borrow quite a large sum of money to "tide over" till the taxes were paid in, has for the past two years added $7,000 each year to the contingent fund, thus obviating in a measure, the necessity of borrowing money, and with a prospect in a few years of making a rational reduction in taxes for county purposes.

THOS. M. HUNTER.

All of our readers who are interested in farm matters of any kind are asked to read on another page the announcement of the leading American country journal, the Rural New Yorker. It is the first to have established an Experiment Farm; the first to originate and distribute rare and new kinds of seeds and plants free among its subscribers. It has probably done more to create the present interest in experiment stations and an improved agriculture than all the rest put together. It is original from beginning to end. It presents over 500 original illustrations yearly of fruits, cattle, grains, house plants, etc., and combines in practice the true interests of the farm, garden and household with the editorial labor of a rural journal. Its pres'nt Free Seed Distribution comprises eight kinds of seeds, most of which are not offered for sale. These, according to the prices which seedsmen charge for novelties, are worth more than the yearly subscription price of the paper. It is a weekly of sixteen pages, printed on fine paper. It has over 600 contributors, among them the most distinguished agricultural writers of America, Canada and England. Our readers can lose nothing by sending for free specimens to the Rural New-Yorker, 34 Park Row New York. They will be cheerfully and promptly forwarded.

Adrian Record: As a general thing printers are all christians, and attend divine service regularly every Sabbath. But there is one member of the art preservative of all arts, who, we are sorry to say, is not as religiously inclined as he ought to be, and Adrian is his home. Yesterday, taking advantage of the fine weather, this unregenerate youth went to Palmyra, and in company with a gentleman living in that village, spent almost the entire day in fishing for pickerel in the river Raisin. Our friend didn't get a bite, but his companion caught two little pickerel, which he generously donated to the printer, who brought them home, intending to have fricasseed fish for breakfast. His wrath was great this morning on learning that the cat had devoured the two pickerel during the night. Our friend has promised not to fish on Sunday again.

The Adrian Press has the following. We plead guilty and ask the mercy of the court, or rather of the groom.

The TECUMSEH HERALD prints the marriage of Mrs. Geo. Graves to Miss Sowles. We are not inclined to take any stock in the correctness of that, but believe the "intelligent compositor took advantage of George's bonaymoon, and added an "s" to the "Mr.," and is now in the pangs of remorse nursing a broken head and a bruised body which he received from the HERALD club wielded by Steve the next day.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17, 1883.

The Holidays are at hand. The stores are decked out with Christmas goods, and the city is filled with buyers from all parts of the country. Captain Cannor of the St. James Hotel, told me that for over a week they have not had a spare room in the house, and at other hotels the experience is the same. Even the down town hotels which are dependent upon commercial men are filled with families. Judging from the number of Southern people at the New York Hotel, which has always been a purely Southern house, an era of prosperity prevails in that section of the country. Not for many years have those people spent so much money as this year. In the matter of toys there is no end of attractive novelties. The tendency seems to be towards scientific playthings, and it is wonderful what ingenius devices have been invented, to be operated by means of steam or electricity, and at what fabulously low prices they are to be had.

It is rumored about musical circles that Abbey is making effort to induce Patti to break her contract with Colonel Mapleson and sing at the Metropolitan Opera House. But this is not so, as I am informed by one of Mr Abbey's lieutenants. Patti to him would be a white elephant, for in the first place he would have to pay Mapleson a heavy forfeit; he would add $5,000 a performance to his already heavy salary roll, he would bring on a war between Nilsson and Patti, who, naturally are rivals, and he would have to saddle himself with that drug, Nicolini, Patti's husband. The whole trouble with Mapleson, by the way, arises solely from the fact that Mapleson refused to cast him for important parts, for which he knew him to be incompetent, but for which Nicolini, backed by Patti, thought himself eminently fitted.

Inspector Byrnes, the chief of our Detective force, is rapidly earning for himself the name of the American Vidocq, and deservedly. The manner in which he caught the gang of forgers headed by that clever criminal forger Brockaway, and thereby prevented the consummation of a swindle which would probably have enriched the sharpers by half a million of dollars, was a marvel of care, skill and astuteness. The whole plant was captured and the webb of evidence was woven so carefully and thoroughly around them that it will be a wonder if any of them escape short of life sentences. As he has been so frequently named in the dispatches, let me describe him to you. He is a man but little short of six feet, a well developed frame, a pleasant, strong characteristic face, a ruddy complexion and a remarkably clear, quick grayish blue eye. His movements are languid and his conversation is also slow. His manner is winning in the extreme; he makes friends wherever he goes; even criminals who fall victims to his skill are fond of him, and he possesses the knack of extracting statements from them which are very valuable in the interests of justice. He rarely drinks anything except a glass of claret at dinner; but he is an inveterate smoker. One can scarcely meet him without a lighted cigar in his mouth, and it is said of him that on retiring he puts a cigar in his mouth and a match at his bedside, so as not to lose any time on awakening. He is very fond of a game of poker with a few intimate friends, but he generally loses. He is also a great admirer of racing, and during the season the turf affords him his sole recreation. His judgment of horses is excellent. For trotters, or the driving of fast horses he has no fancy. He is worth probably $500,000. Most of it was made in Wall St., thanks to the points given him by Vanderbilt and Gould, both of whom have taken a fancy to him.

The preparations for the celebration of the Centennial of Evacuation Day which takes place on the 26th instant, are growing very large, and the pageant will certainly be a grand one. It is a pity that poor old David VanArsdale was not spared to live until that day. He died on Wednesday of this week, thus reducing the number of veterans of the war of 1812 to six. His father, it will be remembered, was the brave lad who climbed the greased pole at the Battery, on which the British had nailed their flag on leaving the town, tore it off and hoisted the American flag. When he died he enjoined his son to be sure and hoist the flag on the Battery on the anniversary of every Evacuation Day, and for forty years David has performed this deed of filial love and patriotism. It would have been a memorable addition to the solemnity of the centennial had David lived to hoist the flag.

How to Beautify a Home

Almost everybody knows what a pleasure to the eyes a little spray of green is in the winter. The wealthy can indulge in expensive conservatories, but those of moderate circumstances, even the very poor, can secure a pretty object at a small expense by following the direction given. To begin with, an acorn which any little urchin can procure in the woods is a pickle jar, which any housekeeper can supply. Procure a fine healthy acorn, and crochet around it a little network, taking off the cup first and serve a loop at the cotton to hang the acorn point downward in the glass. The glass must be so much water in it that the tip of the acorn scarcely touches; keep it in a dark closet until it has sprouted, and then put it in the light. A chestnut thus kept in water will sprout the same way. A sweet potato will grow luxuriantly, and may be trained around walls and picture frames. A carrot grown in sand is, if well managed, a highly ornamental object. A good-sized and healthy root must be selected, cut off quite evenly the top of the carrot, and place it on top of a small ball of sand, so that the leaves look as if they sprung from it. Moisten it well and keep it in the dark until it has begun to sprout, be careful to keep it damp, and move it into the light directly the leaves appear. If the cultivation is successful, an ornament pretty enough for any room will be the result, and which will have to the unacquainted the appearance of a pot of ferns. Another experiment may be made with a turnip, which must be as sound as possible. Clean the outside, taking care not to injure the part from whence the leaves spring. Cut a piece of the bottom and scoop out the inside, so that you have a hollow cap; fasten string or wire to it, so that it can be hung up. Fill the cavity and keep it filled with water. In a short time the leaves will begin to sprout, and will curl up around the ball of the turnip, forming a pretty little hanging basket. Children can be made to interest themselves in such experiments, which will be found an easy method of inculcating taste and refinement; besides, each and all point out their own botanical lesson, and much is to be learned by careful and patient observation and experiment.

On one occasion while the English naturalist Gould was wandering along the banks of the Thames with a party of friends, a rare laugh was created at his expense. He had climbed a tree for the purpose of exploring the contents of a nest. On suddenly looking down at a hollow formed by two branches of the tree, and which at the time contained a pool of water, he exclaimed: "As I'm a living man, if there is not a large owl here in this hole, looking straight at me." The excitement was intense, but was instantly turned to a shout of merriment, when the naturalist on putting down his hand to seize the supposed owl, discovered that it was simply the reflection of his own image in the water.

Nervous debility, indicated by loss of memory, universal lassitude, constant fatigue, vivid dreaming, unnatural excitements, fits of dizziness, etc., is quickly cured by using Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. This remedy purifies the blood, strengthens the weak portions of the body, quiets the nerves, produces dreamless slumber, and is the only remedy that permanently cures the many distressful ailments resulting from nervous debility.

Help Yourself.

People who have been bolstered up and sheltered all their lives are seldom good for anything in a crisis. When misfortune comes they look around for something to cling to or lean upon. If the prop is not there, down they go.

Once down, they are as helpless as capsized turtles, or unhorsed men in armor and cannot find their feet again without assistance.

Such silken fellows no more resemble self-made men, who have fought their way to position, making difficulties their stepping stones, and deriving determination from defeat, than vines resemble oaks, or sputtering rush-lights the stars of heaven. Efforts persisted into achievements train a man to self-reliance, and when he has proven to the world that he can trust himself the world will trust him.

It is unwise to deprive young men of the advantages which result from their own energetic action by "boosting" them over obstacles which they ought to surmount alone.

In hundreds instances where Hot Springs and other treatment failed to cure scrofula and syphilitic disorders, the sufferer has sought and found a cure in Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. It enriches the blood, strengthens the urinary and digestive organs, and quickly removes all indications of ill health and blood disease from a pimple to a running sore, from a headache to a rheumasic pain. Its superiority over all other blood purifiers and strengthening medicines is admitted by all who test its curative effect and influence.

HOW TO CURE SORE THROAT.—"One who has tried it" communicates the following seasonable item about curing sore throats to the New York Herald: "Let each one of your half million readers buy at any drug store one ounce of camphorated oil, and five cents worth of chlorate of potash. Whenever any soreness appears in the throat put the potash in half a tumbler of water, and with it gargle the throat thoroughly; then rub the neck thoroughly with the camphorate oil at night before going to bed, and also pin around the throat a small strip of woolen flannel. This is a simple, cheap and sure remedy.

Instantly Relieved.

Mrs. Ann Lacour of New Orleans, La., writes:—I have a son who has been sick for two years; he has been attended by our leading physicians but all to no purpose. This morning he had his usual spell of coughing, and was so greatly prostrated in consequence, that death seemed imminent. We had in the house a bottle of DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM for the LUNGS purchased by my husband, who noticed your advertisement yesterday. We administered it according to directions and he was instantly relieved.

Angling for Pointers.

While Lord Chief Justice Coleridge was in Chicago, a reception was given his honor by the Hon. Emery A. Storrs. During a lull in the brilliant festivities Mr. Lord Coleridge felt some one plucking at his sleeve, and upon turning around discovered a long, lank, masculine specimen of a native from the Sucker State, with an anxious look on his hatchet face, and a piece of red flannel around his throat.

"Jist step this way a minnit, Mr. Coleridge," said the apparition, "come inter this bay windy. I want ter ask yer suthin."

The astonished chief justice followed the man into the alcove, and was thus addressed:

"Judge, they tell me you are a big legal hammard over in England."

"Well—aw—I don't—really—"

"Don't be at all bashful an' diffident in my presence," said the man with the bronchial difficulties, "I know suthin' about the law bizzines myself, ef I do say it, an' I've bin elected justice of the peace down in Jo Daviss county. Now, what I want ter git onto is a few pinters on some legal matters as has puzzled me considerable since I was elected. The ole common law, ef I understand the thing right, is the same in Illinois as hit is in England, ain't hit?"

"Why—really—I believe the common law of England is not—that is—has not been greatly modified since its adoption by the United States."

"That's what I thought. Now, over in your country does the cots allow a lawyer to go on the cost bond for his client?"

"Well—really—aw—that is not the practice"—

"That's just what I tole 'em down in Jo Daviss county, an' a spike-haired shyster hit me with an' ink-bottle because I wouldn't allow no sich kind of monkey work. Did you ever marry a couple, an' did yer git yer pay in sausages, spring wheat or cash?"

"Aw—marry a couple?"

"A Dutchman come ter my house last week with a license made out in another county, an' he insisted on me hitchin' him an' his gal right then an' thar. He was so full that yer could hear the beer swash inside of him. I tole the Dutchman he couldn't git spliced on no sich a license as that. Yer can't marry an English couple in one balliwick on a license made out in another, can yer?"

"I—I—aw—you seem to"—

"A damfool of a justice, who held offiss before the citizens run me in, once give a verdict for the defendant in a suit, an' then taxed him up with the costs. I remonstrated with the old grey-headed lunatic, an' we left the matter ter the judge of the district cote, an' when we had stated the case, the jedge cocked up one eye like a game chicken an' sed, 'Wal, gentlemen, I don't know but hits all right in Jo Daviss county, an' the bull crowd snickered right out."

"I—I—aw—weally—I must be going," said the poor Lord Chief Justice, trying to edge away.

"One minnit, kernel, or jedge rather—what do yer charge fer swearing witnesses in a civil suit, ten cents or two bits?"

But the Lord Chief Justice had flown from the horrid precincts of the deep bay window.—Texas Siftings.

Rev. Father Wilds' EXPERIENCE.

The Rev. Z. P. Wilds, well-known city missionary in New York, and brother of the late eminent Judge Wilds, of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, writes as follows:

"18 E. 54th St., New York, May 16, 1882.
MESSRS. J. C. AYER & Co., Gentlemen:—
Last winter I was troubled with a most uncomfortable itching humor affecting more especially my limbs, which would so intolerably at night, and induced such restlessness, that I could scarcely bear any clothing over them. I was also a sufferer from a severe catarrh and catarrhal cough; my appetite was poor, and my system a prey to that run down. Knowing the value of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by observation of many other cases, and from personal use in former years, I began taking it for the above-named disorders. My appetite improved almost from the first dose. After a short time the fever and itching were relieved, and all signs of irritation of the skin disappeared. My catarrh and cough were also cured by the same means, and my general health greatly improved, until it is now excellent. I feel a hundred per cent stronger, and I attribute these results to the use of the SARSAPARILLA, which I recommend with all confidence as the best blood medicine ever devised. I took it in small doses three times a day, and used, in all, less than two bottles. I place these facts at your service, hoping their publication may do good.
Yours respectfully, Z. P. WILDS."

The above instance is but one of the many constantly coming to our notice, which prove the perfect adaptability of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to the cure of all things arising from impure or impoverished blood, and a weakened vitality.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla
cleanses, enriches, and strengthens the blood; stimulates the action of the stomach and bowels, and thereby enables the system to resist and overcome the attacks of all Scrofulous Diseases, Eruptions of the Skin, Dyspepsia, Catarrh, General Debility, and all disorders resulting from poor or corrupted blood and a low state of the system.

How Watch Cases are Made.

The many great improvements introduced in the manufacture of the Jas. Boss' Gold Watch Case, have led to similar improvements in the making of silver cases.

Under the old methods, each part of a silver case was made of several pieces of metal soldered together, requiring a great amount of cutting and soldering, which softened the metal and gave it the pliability of lead rather than the elasticity of silver.

Under the improved methods, each part of the Keystone Silver Watch Case is made of one solid piece of metal hammered into shape. The advantages are readily apparent, for every one knows that hammering hardens the metal while soldering softens it.

To test the superiority of the Keystone Silver Watch Case, take one of 3 oz. weight, press it squarely in the center when closed, and it will not give, while a case of same weight of any other make will give enough to break the crystal. The Keystone Silver Watch Case is made only with silver cap and gold joints.

Send 2 cent stamp to Keystone Watch Case Factories, Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome Illustrated Pamphlet showing how James Boss' and Keystone Watch Cases are made.

HERE WE ARE AGAIN.

The steady and continual work we gave the past season to our gigantic clearance sales left our Mammoth Outfitting Establishment in proper shape for the reception of our

Fall and Winter Stock!

To say that we were successful would not half tell the story. OUR TRADE ALMOST DOUBLED, our customers were more than pleased with the bargains we gave them, and we were highly gratified with the liberal patronage bestowed upon us, and this season we intended to strive hander than ever to merit the continuance of the same.

BOYS' & CHILDREN'S CLOTHING.

We have just opened up and put in stock all the new shapes and Styles of Little Folks' Clothing, among which may be found some pretty and attractive garments. Henceforth we shall carry a larger line of these goods than ever. Our trade in this Department has met with such a large increase that we can well afford to, and this increase of trade enables us to sell at

SMALLER MARGINS THAN EVER BEFORE.

With us increase of trade means a decrease of profit. Not only shall our prices be the lowest, but we will carry ten times as many goods as any other house in the city. Our Boys' and Children's department has become very popular, not only because it is fitted up with a view to accommodate our customers, but because the best makes, the prettiest styles and the most attractive assortment of this line of goods can always be found there.

Men's & Youths' Clothing!

We have selected the finest and most desirable goods for this department that were ever brought to the city; in fact the goods look so well as we open them up that we feel sure of selling them without much trouble. The reliable class of goods we handle, together with the uniformly low prices which are characteristic in our institution, are found to meet with public approbation. This department is crammed with new goods, ready for inspection and sale.

Gents' Fine Furnishings!

There is no more complete department of the kind in the state. We have just put in stock several cases of new goods, and are every day receiving fresh additions. It is filled to completion with all the latest styles in Gloves, Hosiery, Neckwear, Undershirts, Collars, Cuffs, Shirts, Handkerchiefs, Suspenders, &c., and everything at popular prices. We can guarantee to save you twenty-five cents on every dollar you spend with us in this department.

Everybody is invited to examine our Stock whether they wish to buy or not.

Catarrh

At this season of the year everybody has a cold, and some very bad ones. By frequent exposures the membranes of the nose become very sensitive, and catarrh and influenza are epidemic. Relief may be obtained by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

For many years in succession, beginning so far back I don't remember when, I had the catarrh in my head. It consisted of an excessive flow from my nose.

Ringing and Bursting Noises

in my head. Sometimes the hearing in my left ear was affected. Five years ago, about this season of the year, I began to use Hood's Sarsaparilla. I was helped right away, but I continued to use it until I felt myself cured.—Mrs. Eliza H. Chalfield, Lowell, Mass.

Jerome Brownell, merchant and extensive caller at Victor, Ontario county, N. Y., writes: "I have used Hood's Sarsaparilla for my catarrh, and it has helped me. I consider Hood's Sarsaparilla one of the best remedies for blood disease to be obtained."

100 Doses One Dollar

"I have been troubled with that distressing complaint, catarrh, and have been using Hood's Sarsaparilla, and find it one of the best remedies I have ever taken. My trouble has lasted ten years, and never could get any relief until I commenced to use Hood's Sarsaparilla.—Martin Shield, Chicago, Ill.

Danger from Catarrh

depends upon the amount and extent of the scrofulous infection. Unquestionably many deaths from consumption can be traced to neglected catarrh. There is a violent distress, prostrating coughing spells, the eyes weep, the nose discharges copiously, and the head seems about to split.

In such cases Hood's Sarsaparilla corrects the catarrh by its direct action in discharging the poison from the blood through nature's great outlets, so that healthy, sound blood reaches the membranes and is wholesome.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

NEVER FAILS.

"You claim too much for SAMARITAN NERVINE," says a skeptic. "How can one medicine be a specific for Epilepsy, Dyspepsia, Alcoholism, Opium Eating, Rheumatism, Spermatorrhœa, or Seminal Weakness, and fifty other complaints?" We claim it a specific, simply, because the virus of all diseases arises from the blood. Its Nervine, Resolvent, Alterative and Laxative properties meet all the conditions herein referred to. It's known world wide as

THE GREAT NERVE CONQUEROR

It quiets and composes the patient—not by the introduction of opiates and drastic cathartics, but by the restoration of activity to the stomach and nervous system, whereby the brain is relieved of morbid fancies, which are created by the causes above referred to.

To Clergymen, Lawyers, Literary men, Merchants, Bankers, Ladies and all those whose sedentary employment causes nervous prostration, irregularities of the blood, stomach, bowels or kidneys or who require a nerve tonic, appetizer or stimulant, SAMARITAN NERVINE is invaluable. Thousands proclaim it the most wonderful invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system. $1.50. Sold by all Druggists. (14)

GIVE ME A CALL.

City versus Country.

I have heard good people declaim against the social life of cities as if there were really something criminal in a fondness for dinner parties, receptions, and balls, and a high degree of virtue in abstaining from such pleasures by those who could not have them if they would. I have had considerable experience of life in rural towns, and so far as it informs me I am willing to maintain that life in them is no more earnest, dignified with worthy interests and aims, than life in cities, but merely a less busy and a duller thing. The frivolous city girl's day is filled with engagements from morning to night—with shopping, paying and receiving visits, driving in the park, and theater or ball going in the evening. Her mind is taken up with these things to the exclusion of anything like intellectual occupation. For novel reading does not come under that head. She is absorbed in pleasure-seeking in all its various kinds. The frivolous country girl has more time on her hands, but does she do anything better with it? She too, seeks her pleasures, as many as are to be had, and sighs that there are no more of them. She shops and pays calls, and plays tennis in the afternoon instead of driving on the avenue; wishes there was a dance for the evening, but since there is not stays at home and does some fancy-work, finishes her novel, or chats with some intimate who "drops in" on her. What real difference in her character is made by the fact that she has but one party to attend during the week, where the other girls have had six? Is worldliness worse because it is on a larger scale? Is scandal about the last elopement in fashionable society more demoralizing than gossip about one's next door neighbor's son and the attention he is paying to Miss So-and-So? The virtue of minding one's own business is not more commonly practiced in rural places than in larger ones. I know of city girls who mingle with their pleasures an active care for the poor and sick, spending as much thought and time in charitable works as those who, living in country places, have less demand upon their leisure. It is sad to see a man or woman spending life in thoughtless gayety; to me, it is equally sad to see one wasting it in simple, negatively virtuous inanity. I know certain worthy persons the mere sight of whom is depressing beyond words. The vacancy of their minds oppresses me as a suspension in a strain of music distresses the ear: the dullness of their undeveloped sensibilities, the contraction of the mental and spiritual space they are shut up in, affects me as positive pain. If it were an external necessity that compelled to this way of existence, the case would be hard enough; but being, as I know it is, the result of choice and habit, and that, again, the outcome of sluggish temperament and minds deprived of proper stimulus, the pity of it is the much the greater. Sometimes such people do suffer from this species of self-starvation, yet without knowing it, or at least without comprehension of the true cause of their dull unrest. Perhaps it is just such a one, of all persons, whom you will hear speaking in disparagement of "fashionable" society. In the name of reason, one exclaims internally, is it not better at least to enjoy one's self than to make an absolute nothing of one's life? To be pleased with trifles is at least no crime, but you would make it a virtue to be pleased with nothing.—November Atlantic.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 8, 1883.

Gents—My health has been very poor for years. I have been treated by the most skillful physicians but received but little benefit from their treatment. An acquaintance recommended the Rheumatic Syrup, but I had seen so many patent medicines advertised I had no faith in its merits until I had seen for myself what it had done for a number of acquaintances of mine, when I was compelled to believe the remedy possessed merit worthy of consideration when I at once sent for half a dozen bottles, and before I had used three of them I co'd see that it was helping me. I continued its use and to-day I am stronger than I have been in years, and it is all due to your Rheumatic Syrup.

Yours respectfully,

MRS. JAMES TIFFT.

Humor in the Stomach.

Much of the distress and sickness attributed to dyspepsia, chronic diarrhœa and other causes is occasioned by humor in the stomach. Several cases with all the characteristics of these complaints, have been cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Other cures effected by this medicine are so wonderful that the simplest statements of them affords the best proof that it combines rare curative agents and when once used secures the confidence of the people.

The Rural Home,

ONE YEAR,

For Only Two Dollars.

THE purest, brightest and most popular Weekly for the Farmer and his family is THE AMERICAN RURAL HOME, published at Rochester, N. Y., under the same management that founded it in 1870. Many of the ablest Agriculturists and Horticulturists write for it; its Eight Ample Pages are always brimful of practical information, and of fresh original miscellany of the highest character. It is, in short, the model journal for those who dwell in village and country homes, and should be the first one subscribed for after your local paper.

Although THE RURAL HOME is but One Dollar a year—marvellously cheap for such a well illustrated and superbly printed sheet—we have made special arrangements whereby we can club it with this paper at a price for both materially reduced. Our patrons will be greatly profited by accepting the offer above made. Any who may have paid us for a subscription term not yet expired, and who wish to embrace this clubbing offer, can have their credit extended accordingly.

If you are not familiar with THE RURAL HOME, and desire to examine it, a sample copy will be mailed from its office of publication on postal card request.

AND

The American Reformer,

ONE YEAR,

For Only Two Dollars.

IN these days of reformative effort, a journal devoted to all the various leading reforms is needed in every intelligent home. THE AMERICAN REFORMER just meets that need. It was started in New York City one year ago, with abundant capital, by men of long journalistic experience, who seemed to have an instinctive comprehension of the public want. Temperance, Civil Service, Prison Reform, Political Reform, Medical Reform—all these have able and brilliant treatment from the first writers; and Reform news is given in careful condensation, from all over the world. Broad, strong, clear-headed, non-partisan, in its opinions, and remarkably well edited throughout its sixteen handsome pages, THE REFORMER has taken front rank as a public educator, and is recognized as the highest exponent of radical principles. It is published fortnightly, at No. 59 Tribune Building, New York, price One Dollar a year. By special clubbing arrangements we are permitted to offer it with our own paper one year as above named. A sample copy can be had by addressing a postal card to the office of publication.

ESTATE OF PETER R. ADAMS.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee—ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, on Wednesday, the 7th day of November, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three.

Present, Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Peter R. Adams, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Mary C. Adams, child, a daughter and heir-at-law of said deceased, alleging, among other things, that although more than twelve days have elapsed since the probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, yet that the executors named therein and to whom the execution of said will was committed and the administration of said estate granted by an order of this court, made on the fifteenth day of October, 1883, have neglected to give bond as required by law, and as ordered by this court whereby the said executors so named and appointed as aforesaid have forfeited their right to act as such executors, and praying that administration of said estate with the will annexed may be granted to Cordelia M. Adams or to some other suitable person, and that such other and further order and proceedings may be had in the premises as may be required by the statute in such case made and provided.

Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the 3d day of December next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

E. M. CASEY, Proprietor.

To those who have never witnessed it, the process of cement pipe manufacture is quite interesting. A few moments' ride by Michigan avenue car from the center of the city will land one almost before the door of the above named establishment at 256 Trumbull avenue. One may see here large quantities of solid looking pipes, and upon inquiry learn that some are intended for wells, others for chimneys, sewers, drains, etc., Special attention is called to their Well pipe from 12 to 30 inches in diameter, the latter size being large enough to admit a man to work inside, thereby saving expense in excavation.

TECUMSEH, MICH. NOV. 22, 1883.

AMONG THE FARMERS.

The editor of the Michigan Farmer has been spending two or three days among the farmers of Tecumseh and vicinity, and judging from the manner in which he "writes up" his visit we should say he was well entertained. Well he would have to travel a long time before finding more hospitable farmers than he struck during his visit here. We presume our readers will be interested in his "notes by the way," and hence we take the liberty of transferring a portion of his article to our own columns.

The point we started for was the stock farm of Mr. Minor Davidson, a son of one of the pioneers of Tecumseh. At Britton station, some four miles from this farm, we met Mr. Davidson, and drove back with him.—The country improves as you go westward, and we found the Davidson farm located in a beautiful section, the land slightly rolling, the farms in nice shape, and the timber standing largely of oak and hickory. Some of the farmers have groves of young locust growing, which give a fine appearance to the country.

The Minor Davidson farm consists of 220 acres all in the block, well watered and with a very productive soil. His wheat, of which he grew 1,200 bushels the past year, averaged over 18 bushels to the acre, and he is going close to 30 bushels. His other crops, with the exception of corn, were equally good. He has a herd of about 35 head of Shorthorn cattle, a flock of high grade Merino sheep, and a bunch of Poland China hogs.

Here follows a lengthy description of the stock, which we have not room for.

Next morning Mr. Davidson drove us over to see some of the other breeders. Our first call was on Messrs. H. Wilson and W. S. Osborn, who are breeding Merino sheep. They are the parties who secured a half interest in the ram "Wreasy Bill," referred to in the last Farmer. Of course we wanted to see a sheep that had sheared 96 lbs. 4 oz. in three shearings, and all public ones.

"As soon as he was let out of his pen the visitors climbed for the back seats with great unanimity and dispatch so as to give him room. He is the most important sheep it has been our privilege to examine, and evidently regards himself as a bigger man than old Grant." The climate of Michigan seems to agree with him, judging by the manner in which he explored the barn to see if there was not a man somewhere he could reach and have a little conversation with. He soon quieted down, however, and we had an opportunity of handling him."

"The party, including Messrs. Wilson and Osborn, then started to see Mr. T. C. Payne, whose farm is a short distance west of that of Mr. Osborn. He has a 320 acre farm, and of course, a wheat grower. He said he had only got in 95 acres this season, which was not as much as he had expected, but the weather stopped him. He insisted on the party's going three miles north to another small farm he owns, where his Shorthorns were, and he had a road-cart and fine bay mare ready before any one could raise an objection."

A full description of Mr. Payne's stock is given and also that of William Witherell, where the party stopped on the return trip.

After returning to Tecumseh the editor visited the farms of E. L. Russell and B. J. Bidwell.

"The Shorthorn herd of E. L. Russell, which we visited last week in company with Mr. Minor Davidson, is only a small one, the breeding cows being only seven in number; but they have evidently been selected with care by Mr. Russell, for their quality and constitution. The cows are red, red roans, and light roan in color. The oldest cow in the herd is Ruth, bred by the late Edwin Smith, of Clinton, Lenawee Co., and not over 12 years old. From her most of the others have been bred."

In speaking of B. J. Bidwell, he says:

"We don't wonder at Mr. Bidwell's having a large herd, he seems to be able to double up on what ordinary breeders do. Next we took a drive to a lot in the village, and here were seven yearling bulls which are on sale.—Altogether there is a herd here of about 85 head, which would require a day to go over so as to understand their breeding and qualities, and this we had to defer to a more convenient season. We will give Mr. B. credit for getting over more ground in a short space of time than any man we have yet met. He has here an extensive and beautiful farm, one that has given him nearly a hundred bushels of good corn to the acre this year.—It has a fine stream running through it, and is well adapted for a stock farm. Besides cattle he keeps a large flock of Merino sheep, and farms so as to keep the land in good heart, and up to his standard of productiveness. It has grown large grain crops every year without any sign of exhaustion.

MEETING OF A FARMER'S CLUB.

"In the evening Mr. M. Davidson and his brother Frank, with their wives and the representative of the Farmer, drove over to a meeting of the Tecumseh Farmers' Social Club. We found the parlors of Mr. Benedict's residence well filled with the farmers of the neighborhood, their wives and young people. It was the opening meeting for the season, and was therefore a little late in getting started; but the President, Mr. F. C. Rector, got the crowd in order, and the Secretary, Mrs. Frank C. Rector, read the minutes of the last meeting, and the programme that had been arranged for the evening was carried out.

"In conclusion we must return thanks to Mr. M. Davidson and family for many kind attentions while on this visit. Mr. Davidson's large acquaintance with the neighborhood enabled us to see a great deal of the finest country in this section during the short time we had to stay, and we shall long remember our first visit to this part of the State."

A HUMAN FIRE.

The Phenomenon of a Burning Mine Repeated in the Physical System.

A few years ago one of the most important of the coal mines in Pennsylvania caught fire. It started slowly but soon obtained such headway that it spread through the greater portion of the entire mine. To flood it with water would extinguish the fire, but well nigh ruin the mine; and still the flames continued to increase. At that juncture a young man stepped forward and suggested that all the entrances and vent holes of the mine be covered and secured, thus shutting off the supply of air. His advice was followed and the flames were finally quelled.

To compare the condition of the mine with many phases of the human system is most natural and appropriate. "Fire in the blood" is not a mere expression, it is a most serious fact. How it originates it may be impossible to say, but that it burns and rages with an increasing fury, the one who is its victim only too painfully knows. The blood is the life. It is designed by nature to purify, strengthen and sustain the system. It is too often made the channel through which poison and death are transported.—Poisonous acids coming through the veins and arteries inflame and cause a fire just as real as the one which existed in the mine. They burn and irritate causing the brain to become weak and the nerves unstrung; they carry pains to the muscles and leave agonies in the joints; they bring destruction instead of strength; they devastate the very portions of the body that most require help, and they hasten the approach of death in its most horrible form. These things have been felt by innumerable people who have been the victims of rheumatic disorders and the agonies they have endured confirm this description.

There is but one way by which this fire in the blood can be extinguished, and that is by shutting off the supply of these poisonous acids. The lactic, lithic and uric acids come into the blood through the liver and kidneys, and they remain in solution in the blood producing inflammatory rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, neuralgia, gout and all rheumatic fevers and affections. When they are deposited as gritty chrystals in and near the joints, they cause articular rheumatism; when in the tissues covering the nerves, sciatica; when in the head, face and nerves generally, neuralgia. In every case they are painful; in most instances, dangerous. Inflammatory rheumatism is likely to locate in some joint and become chronic, or suddenly attack the brain or heart, causing apoplexy or heart disease.—The fire in the blood must be extinguished—the supply must be shut off.—This can only be done by guarding the portals to the blood—the kidneys and liver, and no means has ever been found for accomplishing this which can equal Warner's Safe Rheumatic Cure. It acts directly upon the seat of the disorder; it extinguishes the fire by controlling the supply and removing the cause.

The well known standing of H. H. Warner & Co., of Rochester, N. Y., the remarkable success which Warner's Safe Cure has achieved, being indorsed by no less a personage than Dr. Robert Gunn, Dean of the United States Medical College, New York, and the fidelity with which they have carried out all their promises to the public, should be a sufficient warrant that the above statements are true.—They, however, guarantee to cure ninety-five per cent. of all rheumatic troubles, especially acute, knowing full well that the demonstrated power of the remedy justifies them in so doing. Nothing can be fairer than this, and those who suffer in the future from rheumatism with such an offer before them, do so on their own responsibility, and can blame no one if living pain and untimely death are the results.

Make $20 for Christmas.

The publishers of Rutledge's Monthly offer twelve valuable rewards in their Monthly for December, among which is the following:

We will give $20.00 to the person telling us how many verses there are containing but three words each in the Old Testament Scriptures by Dec. 10th, 1883. Should two or more correct answers be received, the reward will be divided. The money will be forwarded to the winner Dec. 15th, 1883. Persons trying for the reward must send 20 cents in silver (no postage stamps taken) with their answer, for which they will receive the January Monthly, in which the name and address of the winner of the reward and the correct answer will be published, and in which several more valuable rewards will be offered. Address RUTLEDGE PUBLISHING COMPANY, Easton, Penn.

Col. Frederick Ingham, of whom Edward Everett Hale writes so much, is certainly a remarkable person. Mr. Hale's latest story, which will appear in the Christmas number of Harper's magazine, tells of "Col. Ingham's Journey," and how he reached the North Pole, and of how he saw his "double" there. The tale, which out Vernes Jules Verne, is founded on a theory of sleep and of dreams which will interest and pleasantly delude Mr. Hale's many readers.

ESTATE OF PETER DAVIDSON.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the city of Adrian, on Wednesday, the 21st day of November, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three.

Present, Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Peter Davidson, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Edwin B. Wood, executor of the last will and testament of said deceased, alleging that he is ready to file his account in this court, and praying for the allowance of his said account, and for such other order as may be necessary and agreeable to law.

Thereupon it is ordered, that Monday, the 24th day of December next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

NORMAN GEDDES, Judge of Probate.

The Christmas (December) Harper's Magazine, which is planned to be the most notable issue of a magazine ever published, is nevertheless, intended to be but the forerunner of a remarkable series throughout 1884. The new and novel serial, "Nature's Serial Story," by E. P. Roe, with illustrations by Gibson and Diehman, and William Black's Judith Shakespeare," with illustrations by Abbey, are only examples, in the field of serial fiction, of the scale on which the coming volumes are planned. It is intended during the coming year to make a specialty of stirring short stories.

Mr. E. R. Crossman received on Monday last the sad intelligence of the death of Rev. Geo. W. Wilson, his son-in-law, who for the past four years has been the rector of St. Peter's church at Rome, Ga. Mrs. Wilson was formerly Annette Crossman and was highly esteemed in her girlhood days, wkich were passed in this village. Mrs. Wilson is left a widow with six children to care for, by this bereavment. The deceased was sick ten weeks and during his illness he received the kindest attention from his parishioners and had the best of medical care, but without avail. He had a presentiment from the first that his last illness had come. What plan Mrs. Wilson will adopt to care for her little ones is not yet decided.

OBITUARY.

Died in Macon, Nov. 12, 1883, of heart disease, Silas Beal, aged 69 years, 11 months and 23 days.

His hands are folded, gently folded
O'er his pale and painless breast,
His eyes too, are closed forever,
But Jesus Savior knoweth best.

His heart throbs too are over,
And his pulses now are still;
While we watched around his bedside,
We felt it was God's will.

We have laid him down to rest,
Low in his low and narrow bed;
Although wild storms rage above,
Nothing disturbs the dead.

We too must shortly leave this earth,
The rolling years do tell
That we are swiftly passing on,
But trust that all is well.

Dear Savior hear my feeble cry,
And listen unto me;
That when I leave this vale of tears,
I there may dwell with thee.

MACON, Nov. 19, 1883. A. E. BEAL.

Another one of the old pioneers has gone. Mr. Hiram Adams quietly passed away on Sunday evening, Nov. 18, aged 84 years. He was born in Vermont, reinoved with his parents, while very young, to the state of New York, where he remained until the age of 31. He then removed to what was then the western wilds of Michigan, settled in Tecumseh in the portion now known as Brownville, and engaged in the manufacture of chairs. He was a man of industry and a man of more than ordinary attainments. He had a clear logical mind, and might have won distinction in any community. But he was wedded to a fault. He always underated his abilities and his efforts. He never thought that anything which he did was worthy of commendation. He was a man of meek and quiet spirit, and was a good reliable citizen. He was also a worthy christian, and was truly childlike in faith and humility. He gave no offense in word or deed. He was one of the first members of the Methodist society in this place, if not one of the organizers, and lived an honored member of that communion until his death. His house was the home of the early Methodist itinerants. He was faithful to every duty; but in the church likewise, he was modest and retiring. He never put himself forward. For twenty years he had been afflicted with a chronic disease, and in feeble health. His children and one wife preceded him to the realms of shade. He leaves behind one nephew, a daughter-in-law, a grand daughter, two brothers-in-law, and a lonely widow. Soon the last of the pioneers will have passed away. "Peace to their ashes; green be the grass above their graves."

BY ORDER COMMITTEE.

The star lecture course, of Adrian, will consist of five entertainments—all first class—and all for $1.00. The first of the season was given on Monday evening, Nov. 19th, by the New York Philharmonic Club. Tickets can be procured in Tecumseh of A. E. Kennedy, and the train will be held on the Jackson branch until the close of each entertainment.

A Surprise.

Monday evening, Nov. 19, was the occasion of a genuine surprise to our esteemed towns-people, Mr. and Mrs. James Ingersoll. It being the 15th anniversary of their wedding, their friends, under the leadership of Mr. Stephen Whittier, gathered at their residence, bringing baskets of dishes and provisions, and proceeded to take possession. Soon the house was filled with a happy company of old and young, mingling together in social conversation. After a great deal of real social enjoyment, a bountiful collation, some good singing and an appropriate prayer, the company dispersed, with many congratulations and goodwishes for the happy pair who had spent 15 years of married life so pleasantly. Such a gathering must have been very agreeable to Mr. and Mrs. Ingersoll at this time, coming as it did, an entire surprise. They have but recently moved here from Adrian, and Mr. Ingersoll having been received into the fellowship of the Methodist Episcopal Church only last Sunday, it seems a fitting welcome to our village and to our home. May they yet see many years of happy married life.

Adrian Record: "The Hudson Gazette, last week, got around to remark that it had "inadvertantly omitted to congratulate Bro. Geo. Stacy, of the Tecumseh Herald, who has just become a benedict!" Why, man, he's benedicted some time."

A year ago George Morey planted some German carp in a little artificial pond a mile from Reading. They were from two to three inches long then, but some of them taken out last week weighed from 2½ pounds up to almost three pounds—a good year's growth.

The East Tecumseh literary society will present the following program on Saturday evening, Dec. 1, 1883:

Address by the President.
Music—Frank and Rhoda Benedict.
Readings—Mrs. J. T. Boyce, Fred Goheen; A. S. Murphy.
Declamations—Sam Boyce, Grant Garlinghouse, Tom Cleveland.
Recitations—Flora Hendershot, Louisa Nobles.
Inst. Music—Rhoda Benedict.
Address—R. R. Hall, Subject, Tariff and Free Trade.
Singing by the glee club.

The Union Thanksgiving Service of the Methodist, Baptist and Presbyterian churches will be held this year in the Methodist church at half past ten A. M. The sermon will be delivered by the pastor of the Presbyterian church, Rev. Wm. H. Babbitt, the other pastor's assisting in the service. A general invitation is extended to the members of the various congregations and the public generally to be present. A collection will be taken which will be divided equally between the uniting churches for the benefit of the poor.

If you have trouble about your bread raising get some of Hecks' Patent Roller Flour and it will raise anything, even the seven sleepers—Our folks tried a sack and we never saw nicer or whiter bread. It cannot be beat in the world and the people are daily finding out that if they want good white bread it is necessary to have Heck's Patent Roller Flour. We were informed that they are trading flour for about 150 bushels of wheat each day with the farmers of this vicinity, which goes to show that the farmers of Northern Lenawee are bound to have the best the market affords. Their mill is the only all roller mill in Southern Michigan. No half way business with the Heck Brothers.

Stearns, of the Adrian Press, is responsible for the following cat story, and he tells it with as much gusto as though he were a dyed-in-the-wool Republican:

A lady in Raisin several years ago owned a big black cat, which was named "contraband." One of his peculiar freaks was an unmistakable aversion to colored people, and when a colored woman came to do the washing, contraband would fluff up his tail, hump his back, spit, yowl and leave the house, to the great amusement of the family, and to the wonder of aunt Dinah, who finally became accustomed to the evident hostility of the cat, and enjoyed his disgust as much as anyone. One morning when she came Contraband did not show up, and after a season of peering and looking, Dinah turned to her employer, with a smile and said: "Whar's dat ole dimmycrat cat dun gone to, Missus?"

SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTITUTE.

A Sunday School Institute will be held at the Baptist Church in this village next Wednesday, Nov. 28th, under the direction of the Baptist State S. S. Board. It will be the third in the series of twelve similar gatherings to be held in different portions of the state between Nov. 26th and Dec. 11. It will begin at 9:30 A. M., and continue throughout the day and evening. The following is the program:

FORENOON.

Topic—The Husbandman and his Vineyard.
9:30 Prayer Service.
10:00 The Seed, F. L. Patterson.
10:30 The Soil, L. G. North.
11:00 The Sower, C. E. Conley.
11:30 The Fruit, T. S. Wooden.

AFTERNOON.

2:00 Prayer Service.
2:30 The Field, E. D. Rundell.
3:00 The Workers, J. S. Holmes.
3:30 The Work, C. Quick.
4:00 The Harvest, W. S. Wilcox.

EVENING.

7:30 Devotional.
Addresses—L. Kirtley and M. E. Hayne.
General Conference.
Collection.
Benediction.

Discussion will follow each of the above topics.

The interest of the sessions will be greatly increased by the songs of Mrs. Carman and daughter, of the celebrated Carman family, and Mr. L. F. Hatch, the well-known revival singer, of Delevan, Wis. No commendation is needed by those who have heard these sweet singers in Israel. Their songs are expressive, spiritual, overpowering. The Baptist Church is making extensive arrangements to entertain guests from abroad. It is probable that the banquet will be spread in the chapel. While the institute will be under Baptist management, it is not desired to confine its privileges to the Baptists. A most cordial invitation is extended to all to attend all the sessions. It is only for a day. Surely every one can spare the time to be present. We would like to see every pastor, every superintendent, every adult, every pupil present. Don't fail. Be sure to come.

COM.

COUNTY CONDENSATIONS.

The Justices of Hudson get up a good head of steam and run court all night long.

Andrew Poncher, one of the oldest residents of Morenci, died recently at the advanced age of 90 years and two months.

Mr. Griffith, of North Morenci, is putting up a one hundred foot shed for the accommodation of guests at his hotel.

Deerfield Record: "A lecturer who advertised to expose spiritualism held forth at Burnham's hall, Tuesday evening. It was a complete expose of the lecturer's ignorance of the subject."

The members of the Detroit board of trade tried their hand at guessing at the number of grains in a bushel of wheat, and their guessing ranged from 30'000 to 1,500,000. The actual count made it 566,200.

The Hudson Gazette is responsible for this: "The Tecumseh Herald rises to remark: "Michigan sheep breeders should know that dogs will not molest a flock of sheep that has a pair of goats in its midst." But what protection can Stacy offer goats, since Spence Snow's "Bill" was "pizened" at Morenci?"

Morenci Observer? "While the great Manitoba wave was waiving last Thursday, a Minktown boy with cold fingers "appropriated" a pair of nice pair of gloves at Crabb's store and was discovered in the act; but in consequence of his youth and "inexperience" he was "let down" easy, and he departed a wiser if not a better boy."

Morenci Observer: "Joel Acker hitched up his fast stepper last Thursday, and forgot to buckle one of the lines and in the fierce runaway across the flats, had just about time to ejaculate his prayers before he finally reined up in front of Mr. Wakefields.—Joel now thinks it a little scary to ride after a frisky horse with only one line."

Blissfield Advance has this suggestion: "To further the interests of the base ballists of the county, we would suggest that members of associations of Tecumseh, Hudson and Adrian, meet in Blissfield Thanksgiving, and perfect arrangements for playing a series of twelve games in each place, three with each club, for the championship of the county,—something after the league style. Details could be settled at some future time."

Hudson Gazette: "The manufacturing season being over at the tub and pail factory, on Saturday evening the manager for the company, J. M. Osborn, gave the employees, to the number of 20 or 25, a complimentary oyster supper, at Lyon's Hotel. Lyman did his part finely, and the boys did the rest in a workmanlike manner, you bet. It is presumed the tables were as well cleared of viands as the factory yard is of timber. The last log has been converted into tubs, pails broom handles or wagon tongues.

Clinton News: "Last Thursday afternoon, Miss Mina Muir met with an accident which at first promised to be a very serious one, but luckily, was not. She was driving her father's horse and buggy, Mrs. David Haggart accompanying her. They were driving rapidly west and when between the two bridges west of the factory, the horse suddenly turned off to go to the slaughter house where he was accustomed to going. Miss Muir turned him so suddenly into the road that the buggy went over, throwing the young ladies out. Mina struck on her head and shoulders and was picked up insensible, and was several hours before she regained consciousness. Her injuries, however, proved to be no more than a severe shock from which she has recovered. Mrs. Haggart escaped injury. The horse ran down the bank and into the river, dragging the buggy bottom side up several rods down the stream and, of course, badly breaking it."

Blissfield Advance: "A valuable pair of horses were stolen from the barn of Leonard Kurtz, who lives about two miles south of the village, on Monday night. The barn is located on the road opposite the house, and was not kept locked. Mr. Kurtz was at work in his cider mill until 10 o'cl'k retiring shortly afterward, and heard nothing unusual during the night, although he has a good watch dog, who, however, neglected to do his duty on this occasion. Mr. Kurtz discovered his loss early Tuesday morning and lost no time in coming to the village to notify the officers, and if possible to trace his property. Sheriff Bidwell was telephoned, and a description of the horses sent through the country. It is not known which way the thieves went, some being of the opinion that they went towards Toledo, others that they went north. Dr. Parker reports meeting a team answering their description somewhat, driven by two men, about 12 o'clock Monday night near the old Mead place, going north. His attention was directed to the men by the way they had pulled their hats over their eyes and keeping their heads averted. The team was valued at $400, and together with the wagon, harness and buffalo robe, will foot up a loss of over $500, a sum Mr Kurtz can illy afford to lose.

—Drs. Flowers, of Grand Rapids, will commence a brief course of health lectures in the Universalist church, commencing Monday evening, Dec. 3. What To Do With the Boys.

The London correspondent of the Boston Advertiser calls attention to the discussion which is now going on in England of the question what to do with boys. The statements of the London Telegraph, Spectator and other papers upon the subject go to show that the English are laboring under the same difficulty that is experienced in this country, and that parents there as well as parents here are equally distressed to know what to do with their boys. So far, however, there has been no decision. The discussion is limited to complaint and a sort of hopeless regret over the situation. No practical remedy is suggested.

The burden of complaint in that country, as in this, is that the boys are brought up in contempt of any trade or calling that they will get their living by, some genteel occupation which does not involve manual labor, and whose demands are confined to the minimum amount of work of any sort. The result is that whenever a genteel vacancy occurs there are hundreds of genteel young men ready to fill it. The Telegraph gives an instance of a vacancy in a clerkship to which was attached the munificent salary of $150 per annum, for which there were over 2,100 applicants, and the same paper says: "The best positions of this kind in London, Manchester, and others of the large towns are filled not by young Englishmen, but by young Germans, who come over here in swarms every year, who are better educated than our young men, and who will work longer hours for smaller pay." It adds to the dismay of the situation that "in the towns of the Continent the younger sons and the female members of the family are generally trained to some business or other, and are ready to take any honest employment that offers, and make a living by it, if they are wanted and are worth their salt, and make a living by it genteel or not genteel." In this country, as we understand, the young men and women are not generally trained to any business, and are ready to take any honest employment that offers, and make a living by it, if they are wanted and are worth their salt, and make a living by it genteel or not genteel.

DR. B. MINCER,

Scientific Optician!

I have devoted 25 years wholly to a study of the eye, and how to aid vision properly, and I make a specialty of fitting glasses to the eyes that have been injured by cheap, inferior glasses. I manufacture every kind of glasses, and guarantee satisfaction. Read what prominent physicians of Adrian say:

Having for some time past used glasses to improve my sight, without satisfactorily gaining my object, I called on Dr. Mincer, optician, of Detroit, who readily adapted glasses to my eyes, with which I am so well pleased, that I cheerfully speak in his favor. His method of examining, and its application in selecting glasses to fit the eye can only be acquired by a knowledge of the useful organ to which must be added extensive experience. He has also adapted glasses to Mrs. Baker's eyes with which she is well pleased. I recommend him to all who need glasses adapted to their wants; poor glasses are an abomination.
V. A. BAKER, M.D.

ADRIAN, Nov. 18, 1882.

I have used spectacles bought of Mr. B. Mincer for the past three months, and find them superior to any I have ever used, and can cheerfully recommend him to anyone in need of glasses, and the benefit of his experience in the science of optics to adjust proper lenses.
DANIEL TODD, M.D.

I have investigated the work of Mr. B. Mincer, optician. I have reason to believe that he understands his profession, and adjusts excellent glasses on scientific principles. C. RYND, M.D.

REMEMBER!

I will visit every town in the county during the month.

GLEANINGS.

"Dutch Hank," a well-known gambler of Syracuse, N. Y., has died, leaving a hard-earned fortune of $200,000.

Mr. Blaine has refused an offer of $100,000 for his history "From Lincoln to Garfield," and will collect a royalty of 50 cents on each volume sold.

A young lady at Blissfield, Mich., claims to have pared a bushel of apples in three minutes. Michigan girls never lie.

A Brooklyn man has run away from his wife for the fourth time, leaving a note stating that this is positively his farewell tour.

The Earl of Cashel, the oldest member of the British House of Lords, is to marry a girl only nineteen years of age. He is ninety-two.

Mrs. Lawrence, of Dresden, Me., received a bequest of $15,000 from a relative, and, although poor, gave it to the church.

A young Austrian inherited 10,000 francs, spent all but two of them in ten days in dissipation, and then suicided.

Mrs. A. T. Stewart is eighty years old, but a correspondent who has seen her frequently this fall says she is "merry as a cricket and gay as a butterfly."

The full name of a young woman at West Fork, Iowa, is Iowa Dakota Minnesota Bennett. The truth leaked out when her young man applied for a marriage license.

After a Chinese laundryman in Philadelphia received his naturalization papers he invited the court and all the officers to take a drink. The judge alone refused.

Prominent colored citizens of San Antonio are petitioning for the removal of the colored policemen from the force, claiming that they are officious, rough and insolent.

Texas boasts of a young woman who has planted and attended an acre of cotton, which made nearly a bale, the proceeds of which she will devote to dress.

An ex-conductor of a Boston street car company has started a conscience fund by returning to the company $200 for fares that his bell-punch never registered.

Two Connecticut farmers went to law over a barrel of apples. The case has been tried five times, at an estimated cost to the litigants of $8,000, and they are still at it.

A Brooklyn merchant made his signs and windows so attractive that the gazers blocked the streets, and his competitors asked the courts to haul in his attractions, and the court actually made the order.

Over the door of a cabin in Montana, on the line of the Northern Pacific road, is written with charcoal these words: "Only nine miles to water and twenty miles from wood. No grub in the house. God bless our home."

The first Chinese child ever born in the city of Washington is the daughter of the Chinese minister. She is named Mi Ju. Mi means America, and Ju is the name of the father, although he is no Hebrew.

"There are souls in my church so small," said Mr. Talmage to a reporter, "so infinitesimal, so mean, that fifty of them could dance a schottische on the point of a cambric needle without touching each other."

The story of the suicide of a young man in an Eastern city was briefly told by the following sentence: "There was nothing in his pockets save a large number of pool tickets on horses which had lost in recent races."

At Belleville, Ont., a breach of promise suit was to have been tried, but while the judge and jury were getting ready to listen to the story of love grown cold and hearts estranged the plaintiff and defendant adjourned to a preacher's house and were married.

In Yazoo County, Miss., a party of hunters killed a deer that had a human skull impaled on a prong of his horn, supposed to be that of a negro. The prong had entered the cavity occupied in life by the eye, and had grown up around the bone, showing the skull had not been put on recently.

In the Austrian Empire the production of beer amounts to 34 quarts per inhabitant. In Great Britain each inhabitant is credited with 115 quarts of strong beer, in the United States with 40 quarts, in Denmark 122, in Belgium 71, in France 24, in the Netherlands 51, in Norway 43, in Sweden, 40, in Switzerland 39.

Dr. Ensor, district medical officer at Port Elizabeth, took an opportunity to weigh the informer Carey's brain. He reports that, in the whole of his long experience, during which he has given special attention to such subjects, he never knew a brain at once so heavy and so bulky as Carey's. It weighed sixty-one ounces.

The Omaha Indians have a curious custom. When the father dies the mother loses all right to the children. Every child, unless of very tender age, is separated from the mother, and will go into the family of some one of the father's relatives, and may be claimed as his own by the male head of the family. This separation of the mother and her offspring is permanent.

A Mormon settlement in Idaho is five miles long, extending from Clifton to Oxford. It is called Stringtown, and the homesteads are so taken up that the residences of the homesteaders are within 300 feet of each other, and the farms are mere strips of land from 250 to 300 feet in width. This land was taken up in this manner to give every settler frontage on the public road.

One hundred men of the Muskegon boom force, have been laid off for the season.

A good name at home is a tower of strength abroad. Ten times as much Hood's Sarsaparilla used in Lowell as of any other.

Hiring Out Diamonds.

"That was an expensive set of jewelry," remarked a reporter to the proprietor of a large Washington street store, alluding to a set of diamonds a young lady had just taken away with her.

"It is the most expensive set we have in the store," was the reply; "but she has only hired them."

"Is that a common thing in Boston?" asked the newspaper man.

"Most certainly. Many of our customers hire a set of jewelry for an evening and for a comparatively small price excite the envy and jealousy of their friends. I wonder you have never heard of it before. We take our costliest gems and reset them to please our customers, and then rent them. Of people whom we know we never require any security, but a stranger would, of course, have to deposit the full value of the gems. There are two of our finest sets at Swampscott now, where I understand they have been much praised and their temporary possessors congratulated.

"A funny thing happened in connection with this branch of our business. There was to be a large german, and a young lady, well known in this city, came to make arrangements about a set of diamonds. I was not in the store at the time, and knew nothing of the matter, so when I came in I let out the same set to another young belle. In the afternoon No. 1 came in and asked significantly if her diamonds had been cleaned. While she was talking No. 2 put the same question to me. The situation was very awkward, but I explained the matter, and all was finally settled in favor of No. 1, the young ladies pledging each other and me to eternal secrecy.

"I wouldn't have it get out for the world, you know," explained No. 1.

"Another branch of our business is to rent silver services. These were very well paid for. Most of the designs are antique, and some of them have figured in many Boston homes as highly-treasured heir-looms. At weddings we frequently furnish large collections of a brie-a-brac and other articles to swell the number of 'gifts,' and make a fine display. We rarely get much for this, as the jeweler's name is frequently published when there is anything particularly beautiful given as a present, and the advertising compensates us."—Boston Globe.

The Princess Louise as a Housewife.

Her Royal Highness is extremely fond of sun, and the early morning visitor is welcomed by flinging back the curtains "the first thing of the day." Every morning before breakfast the Princess takes a walk of three miles over the estate of the Government House and the road beyond, walking briskly over the snow in winter, aided by a cane and accompanied by a favorite dog. She is more fond of sketching and painting than other accomplishments, but she is what the Germans call a notable housewife, and goes into the kitchen every morning to give orders for the day. The Canadian servants did not at all like this, and rebelled, so her ladyship got out servants from "home" who were more used to the expressions of supreme wills. Like many energetic people, the Princess is hot-tempered, and the servants were disposed to think her as peremptory as the Queen in the story of "Alice in Wonderland," who ordered "heads off" at every moment. She sets an example of industry, and certainly considers life quite worth living, as she sets apart for her work or recreation specified regular hours. She has music playing in some part of the house nearly all the time, though the early morning strains are those most grateful to her husband's Scotch ear—the bagpipe. Lord Lorne has his own favorite piper with him. The Princess is a good cook, and takes pride in this accomplishment. At her dinner en famille some one pretty dish is sure to have been cooked under her own supervision or prepared by her own hands. Some time ago a young mother and her babe, who were visiting the Princess, were taken ill of scarlet fever caused by defective drainage, they say. None of the servants would go to the sick woman's room, being afraid of the infection. The Princess herself cooked all the food and carried it with her own hands to the sick visitors. She made the bed, smoothed the pillows, read and talked to the patients, and nursed the mother back to life, though the little one died and was buried in the cemetery near the hall. Montreal Cor. Scranton Republican.

How to Cure a Cold.

"I'll cure any cough you ever heard of and with one of the simplest remedies you ever saw," said a lady vocalist of considerable reputation on both sides of the Atlantic. "It's oysters. Just plain, simple, every-day raw oysters. I've sung fourteen years here and in the old country, and you may imagine that the climate has often got the better of my lungs, but I rely upon oysters, and they can be depended upon. My husband told me of this, kind of medicine, and I don't know how many years he had used them. They act just as beneficially on my children and the next time you have a cough go to the oyster bar instead of the drug store." Boston Globe.

The potato crop of the state is less than four fifths of that of 1882.

One voice all over the land goes up from mothers, that says, "My daughters are so feeble and sad, with no strength, all out of breath and life at the least exertion. What can we do for them?" The answer is simple and full of hope. One to four weeks' use of Hop Bitters will make them healthy, rosy, sprightly and cheerful.

THE MINISTER WHO FAILS to interest his congregation and build up his church is generally accused of being a poor preacher, or of not studying hard enough. That is not always where the trouble comes from. Dyspepsia and liver disorders are responsible for a dull sermon and many a vacant pulpit. When the Dominie's digestive apparatus is working wrong and his nerves are giving him pain, his brain refuses to do its duty, it is almost impossible to make or to preach a good sermon. Give your suffering minister a bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters. You will see its effect on next Sunday's preaching. The Rev. Mr. Zebring, of Codorus, Pa., was paralyzed, and could not walk except with crutches, until Brown's Iron Bitters made a new man of him. The Rev. Mr. White, of Rock Hill, S. C., says: "It restored me to strength and vigor." Brown's Iron Bitters is not only for the minister, but for all people.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

BROOKLIN BOSH.

Only a half day, passed among thousands of pictures, is a fair excuse for not knowing much but of a few. Though all may possess equal merit the Little Gamblers are not easily forgotten. They have found a secluded turn in the road, and with a way-side rock for a table, have each laid down what they called a coin and are waiting for the dice to declare the winner. It is expectation without anxiety that lends a charm to their game, but what a pity carelessness regarding decrees of chance wears out so soon. The winding yacht skims the waves through misty twilight, that is pervaded with silver of a rising moon. Pride of victory stains the sails. Farther on stood an empty cradle with a sort of wooden carriage top. It was minus the baby, but no doubt many wondered who had been rocked there, and what mother sung a lullaby. A little dress, long since discarded, hung near, and on an ancient bed, with flowered linen curtains that were draped into a flat roofed tent, lay specimens of wheel, loom and needlework of its owner. Probably the busy hands are quiet, but they have left an impress for good. Few can look upon such mementoes without paying a mental tribute of respect to usefulness.

A piano of lang syne was here. The card said do not touch but how was one to find out if it was in tune without. The keys tinkled faintley, and no wonder. They had sung a hundred years. A clock that had marked the hours just as long which showed the vast difference between striking or having some one strike you. Another, whose growth had been checked by casing in a small flat box, looked as if made for Eve to regulate the time on moving day. Old tables and mirrors, candlesticks and books that wear the seal of antiquity were not wanting, but there is or was a bible at Springville that may possibly outrank those at the Art Loan, and would be a desirable acquisition to the permanent collection. Its a ponderous old affair with unornamental cover and iron clasps. It was printed before they got the fashion of truing lines, but I guess the commandments are in just as good shape as can be expected, considering the breakage they have been subjected to since they were modeled in English. Few stopped to read the autograph letters of Aaron Burr or Washington. The vest of one and soup tureen of the other were considered good evidence that such men had lived. The great general's plan of battle was not more complicated than the meshes of a baby cap woven by his wife, and both those and the sword worn at Braddock's defeat seemed to have dropped from the portfolio of eternity by accident. Women have contributed a fair share in all kinds of art work, besides that of the needle, and to uneducated eyes there appears little difference in degress of design or finish. It is expected that women should do fancy work well and an easel elaborately carved is as nice as anything whittled by a man that I saw, though I did not stop to analyze the subject.

A home scene called "The Hunter's Return" was less difficult to read. It was a picture that must have been engraved on the engraver's memory before he could have transferred it to wood. Here, too, is an empty cradle, but the baby is jumping towards him from its mother's arms. The rifle leans carelessly against the wall. Cat and dog are getting acquainted, the tea kettle is boiling at the fireside, table spread for supper, and chairs, as well as clock, mirror and candlesticks are arranged true to usual home style. Even the crucifix and rosary are on the wall, and a copy of the holy mother hangs over the mantel. All this is carved on a block of wood scarce more than a foot square, and of a light maltese kitten color. The interior of a peasant's cottage is by the same engraver and no less a master piece besides being photographs of the inner life of the artist.

Concluded next week.

RIDGEWAY RUMBLINGS.

Rev. Alden Wickham drove out from Lima to spend Thanksgiving with his friends. He likes his appointment very much.

The Church Social will meet at the home of Mrs. G. W. Jackson, this week Friday evening. A literary program will be presented.

David Covell has begun building his new store, 18x30, on a lot west of where the tin shop now stands. In the spring the shop will be moved and another store built on the site.

George Ross has rented his blacksmith shop to a party from Saline who will take possession and begin work in a short time.

The new house on North street is receiving the finishing touches. It will be occupied in a few days, then the Sutton house will be vacated for some one desiring to rent.

The remains of Silas Beal were taken from the vault at Tecumseh Tuesday and interred in the cemetery at Franklin Centre.

Soloman Smith, aged 87 years, died at his house on the 15th inst. He was one of the oldest residents of this township. The funeral services were held on the following Sabbath at the Christian church.

The calamity which caused the death of Isaac Ballou and Henry Pocklington last Friday was received everywhere as a shocking affair. The details of the accident more properly belong to the Macon Centre correspondent, therefore that part is left for him.

Both funerals were held Sunday when a large concourse of sympathetic citizens gathered to witness the last sad rites.

SPRINGVILLE SNUFF.

Mrs. F. D. Avery has returned home from New York state, where she has been visiting relatives for the past few months.

Mrs. J. Brimley is on the sick list.

The depot question is to be settled this week.

The recent warm weather has helped Henry Mensing out with his apples, and Henry thinks he can give something for the depot. Call on him, Frank.

FARMERS' CLUB.

Friday evening, Nov. 23d, the Farmers' Social Club met at Geo. Griswold's. The night being stormy and dark, the attendance was not large.

The program was good. Mrs. Griswold read a selection entitled, Common Sense against Fashion. It contained many good points. Fred Hendershot gave a very instructive and entertaining essay.

The discussion upon the question of selling or shipping direct to the manufacturer, without the aid of middle men, was quite animated, but all regarded the middle men a necessity, and decided they could not be dispensed with.

At the next meeting will be the election of officers for the ensuing year.

The meeting will be held at John Rector's, Friday evening, Dec. 7, with the following program:

Singing.
Select reading—Mrs. John Fisher.
Song—Lizzie Henderson and Minnie Rector.
Dec.—George Henderson.
Song—Fred Hendershot.
Essay—John Benedict.
Question—Resolved, That we deem it a wanton extravagance in the expenditure of the people's money by the Board of Supervisors, when they consume three days in the election of a chairman; and, is it right that the county at large should be taxed for the maintenance of Adrian's pauper inebriates?

Discussion led by F. A. Horton.

MRS. F. C. REGOLE, Sec'y.

WIDE TIRED WAGONS.

A correspondent asks the Michigan Farmer a question, which the Farmer answers below. It is a matter of considerable interest to farmers and should be remembered by them:

"Is there a law about a reduction of the highway tax by using a broad tire on a wagon, and how wide must it be? I think it should be law if not.

Answer.—There is such a law. It was enacted last winter. The following is the statute in full:

"An act to regulate the width of wagon tires to be used with lumber wagons.

SEC. 1. The people of the State of Michigan enact. That all persons who shall have used only lumber wagons on the public highways of this state with rims not less than three and one half inches in width for hauling loads exceeding 800 pounds in weight, for the year ending on the first day of June, A. D. 1884, and each succeeding year thereafter, shall receive a rebate of one-fourth of their assessed highway taxes for the year of 1884, and in like manner each succeeding year thereafter.

SEC. 2. Any person complying with the provisions of section one of this act, who shall make and subscribe to an affidavit that he or she has for the last preceeding year of June 1st, 1884, or on the first day of June on any succeeding year thereafter, have used only such wagons with rims not less than three and one half inches in width for hauling loads exceeding 800 pounds in weight, on the public highways in this state, shall be credited by the overseer of highways of the road district in which such person resides with one-fourth of the road tax assessed and levied on the property of such person in the road district in which such person may reside. And any overseer of highways is hereby authorized to administer such oath. See Laws 1883, page 198.

A HORRIBLE SLAUGHTER

ONE OF THE MOST FIENDISH CRIMES EVER COMMITTED IN MICHIGAN

A Whole Family Murdered in their Beds and the Perpetrators of the Deed still at Large.

One of the most fiendish murders that has ever darkened the annals of this state took place in the town of Spring Arbor, in Jackson County. We gather from our exchanges the principal points connected with the affair:

"Soon after six o'clock Thursday morning, a colored boy named Geo. E. Bolles, who for the past 3 months has been at work on the farm of Joseph D. Crouch, in Spring Arbor township, seven miles southwest of Jackson, appeared at the house of Ray Clements, a neighbor, and said he feared Mr. Crouch and family "were all killed." The messenger was hatless, coatless and baretooted, and seemed laboring under the most intense excitement. His manner filled Mr. Clements with the direst forebodings, and mounting a horse he rode rapidly to the Crouch residence. Upon entering and proceeding from one sleeping apartment to another, a spectacle greeted him made his blood run cold. Upon a bed in a recess off from the sitting-room lay Mr. Crouch, motionless in death. In a couple of other bed rooms he found respectively the dead form of Moses M. Polley, a guest of the family, and the corpses of Wm. H. White, and Eunice, his wife, the latter being Mr. Crouchs youngest daughter.

Mr. Crouch slept in a curtained recess off from the sitting room. He was found lying on his left side, as he evidently lay when shot. The bullet entered the left side of his head, two inches back of the ear, and passed directly into the brain, where it remains. He died, no doubt, without a struggle as his hands and arms seemed in a natural position, half folded on his breast.

Polley slept in a small bed room off the parlor, next the stairway, on a single bed. Beside the north wall was an old-fashioned bureau, with two drawers partly out, and having an appearance as if their contents had been rummaged. A portion of the latter were hanging down trailing on the floor. The unfortunate man had been shot twice. One ball entered the right ear, and passing directly into the opening entered the brain. There were four powder marks about the ear, indicating the closeness of the weapon at the time of explosion. The second ball penetrated the right side of the chest, one inch to the right of the median line, and passed directly into the chest. Either wound would have proven fatal.

The south bed room, which also opens into the parlor, was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. White, their bed being in the northeast corner of the room. The foot was towards the south, the wife lying next the wall. Mr. White was shot twice. One ball pierced the right side of the neck, severing the carotid artery; another crashed into the upper right temple, three inches from the outer angle of the right eyebrow, and three inches above right ear, where it remains in the brain. Powder was found in the face above and below the right eye.

Mrs. White was shot several times. One entered the posterior surface of the right arm, three inches above the elbow, the ball passing upward through the muscles, making its exit on the inner surface of the arm. Another ball pierced the right arm, six inches above the elbow, on the outer surface, passing inward and upward and emerging three inches from the point of entrance. The third entered the right breast, three inches above the nipple, and passed directly into the chest. It was found a bullet had passed through the muscles directly under the chin, entering from the right and obliquely out on the left side. A fifth wound was caused by a bullet passing directly through the wrist, just above the joint. The two latter wounds may have been caused by previous instead of separate shots. The victim was killed by the shot in the chest.

It is possible that while the murderers expected to get Polley's pile, they at the same time expected to realize something from Crouch and the balance of the family. Mr. C. was wealthy and it was well known had at times large sums in his possession. When money was paid in to him he would not bring it to the city and place it in the hands of his banker, but deter that matter sometimes for days, and not until called to town by other errands would he make the deposit. Besides he often would unguardedly in the presence of others advert to large sums in his possession.

Jacob D. Crouch, at the time of his death, was but a few days from seventy four years of age. He was born in Orange county, N. Y., and in 1830 emigrated to Michigan, settling in Spring Arbor township, one mile south of his late residence. In 1840 he removed upon the place where he Wednesday night met his end. He was a man of somewhat eccentric disposition, but generous hearted, of unblemished integrity, and was never known to oppress a poor debtor, although many such were peculiarly beholden to him. He accumulated an estate of from $80,000 to $90,000 in that county, and possessed interests in Texas estimated at from $60,000 to $70,000 more. When he came to Jackson county, fifty three years ago, all his earthly effects were contained in a cotton handkerchief.

Morenci Observer: A couple of young fellows, William Walker and Asa Phetteplace, who are old enough to know better, said some very improper things in the presence of ladies on the depot last week, for which they were arrested on Saturday and fined $8.25 each.

TECUMSEH, MICHIGAN, NOVEMBER 1st, 1883.

Lost Bank Books.

A rosy-cheeked young woman, whose eyes were red from crying, went into an east side savings bank yesterday, and, between her sobs, said to the clerk:

"Sure, I've lost it. I don't know what to do."

"Your bank book, eh? What's the number?"

"I don't know, sir."

"When did you make your first deposit?"

"On the 25th of February. My month was up on the 24th, and I came down the next day and put in $7."

"What's your name?"

"Mary O'Brien, sir."

A giant ledger was swung around on a revolving stand. There was a great fluttering of its big leaves, and the clerk ran his finger down a long column of names.

"No. 9,782," he said. "Now tell me the names of your mother and father, where you were born, and your occupation."

The girl did so, and the clerk, after taking the number, told her to come back in a week.

"What are you going to do now?" the reporter inquired.

"Advertise for the bank book," said the clerk. "If it doesn't turn up at the end of a week we will give the girl a new one. The chances are about even of the old one being returned. It may be rumpled up and blew around the street until picked up by some rag-picker, or it may be found by some person who made read the advertisement of its loss. It is of no earthly use to anyone, for nobody can draw the money, as we know that the book has been lost."

"Why did you ask the young woman the names of her parents and where she was born?"

"Just to see if she was really the owner of the lost bank book. When a person opens an account with the bank, he writes his name in that big book near your elbow. Then we ask him certain questions, and note the replies. This is done as a means of identification. If the young woman who was just in had been unable to answer the questions I asked her I would have known that the book was not hers."

"Are many bank books lost?"

"We don't average more than 150 to 200 a year. Some banks lose fewer books. Where the depositors are mainly servant girls and young clerks and workingmen, such as we have here, there are more lost. It is amusing to notice the way the loss affects different people. Some come in looking as if their best friends had died; some seem frightened, and many are defiant, thinking that they have committed a crime, and have got to brazen it out."

"Does the same person ever lose more than one bank book?"

"Yes, I once knew a laboring man who lost three bank books in a year. He used to come in every Monday between 12 and 1 o'clock and deposit $3. He carried his bank book in his trousers pocket doubled in the center. He always kept the number, so it wasn't very difficult to give him a new book. We never advertised any of his books, because it was pretty certain that no one would ever pick them up."

"Do the people that find bank books ever try to draw the money?"

"Once in a while, though I do not remember of any one having done so lately. You see there are numerous safeguards to prevent the wrong person getting the money. Every depositor is warned to report to the bank as soon as he loses his book, and a list of lost books is kept handy for reference. Some of the attempts are amusing. One day a colored man came in with a bank book and wanted to close the account. He was asked to sign his name. Unfortunately for himself he could not write, and was detected. He then admitted that he had found the bank book. One day two men came in together, and one of them deposited $250. He could not write, made his 'mark' on the signature book and answered all the usual questions. It afterward appeared that this person was the man who had accompanied the depositor and had stolen the bank book."—N. Y. Sun.

Earth as Winter Protection.

A covering of earth may often be usefully employed to protect plants from severe changes of temperature during the winter. Newly planted fruit trees should have a conical mound of earth at the base, which may be a foot or a foot and a half high, and so narrow that it will shed water readily. This answers several purposes. It is well known that the portion of the tree where the roots join the stem is especially sensitive, and a covering of earth protects this. Besides, it answers better than a stake to prevent disturbance of the tree by heavy winds. Another benefit is the protection it affords against mice, often so injurious to young trees. Half hardy and doubtfully hardy plants of all kinds are better protected by a slight covering of earth than by the old method of "strawing," or surrounding them with a thick covering of straw, which often smothers them. Grapevines in severe localities, and partially tenper kinds everywhere, should be trained with a view to removing them from the trellis, and laying them flat upon the ground. When they are pegged down as flat as may be the canes are covered with an inch or two of soil. This method is the best for figs, and allows this fruit to be raised much farther north than was formerly thought possible. The trees are prepared by growing them with roots upon one side only, to allow them to be laid flat, and the branches are well covered with earth. The tender kinds of raspberries are protected in this manner on the large plantations along the Hudson River, N. Y., where many acres are annually covered. The same answers for tender roses which are successfully protected by laying them down, covering with a low mound, upon the top of which sods are neatly laid in such a manner as to shed the rain. Herbaceous plants in the flower garden, of doubtful hardiness, should have a slight mound of earth over them, first cutting back the stems. No doubt this method of protection may be applied to many tender and half-hardy shrubs and other plants which are now taken up and placed in the green-house or the cellar for the winter.—American Agriculturist.

The next day he felt sick, on Monday he was worse, on Tuesday he shook like a delirium tremens victim, and on Wednesday he took to his bed, from which at last accounts he had not been able to get up.—Hartford Post.

—The Romans under the Republic were prohibitionists after a fashion. Men of honorable family were forbidden by law to drink wine before the age of thirty, or to drink to excess; while for women of any condition, free or slave, to touch wine except on solemn occasion, as a sacrifice, was an offence visited by severe penalties. Hence originated the custom of girls kissing their parents on their lips as a means of discovery whether they had been sampling the contents of the family amphoræ. But the law, as affecting women, was in time so far modified that they were permitted to drink wine made from boiled must or raisins.

Punctuality.

Lack of punctuality on the part of farmers, as well as all other branches of industry, is the fruitful cause of much trouble, vexation, and personal difficulty. If A has an account to settle with B, or has a debt to pay, and agrees to attend to it on a certain day, it should be faithfully attended to. Or if he has a note or interest falling due on a certain day, it is probable B stays at home specially on that day so as to be certain to meet his friend. It may be A went to attend to the business a day or two before hand, and not finding B at home, he concludes to stay at home and wait for B to come to him. But B, not knowing the determination of A, stays at home to wait for him, gets out of humor at his not coming, and concludes to leave the account or note with an officer. The dander of A raises—he resists the claim in court, lawyers are employed, costs accumulate, and neighbors are alienated forever. And this all growing out of a want of punctuality. As all men, and especially farmers, have necessarily to be absent from home many days in a year, there is great necessity for them, as well as those who have dealings with them, to be exact and punctual in all of their engagements. The exact day to meet an engagement is the right one—not before, and not after. Nearly half of all financial troubles among neighbors and vexatious lawsuits, grow out of want of punctuality.

If you have promised to pay a debt, if you have interest or a note to pay, go on the day punctually, not go straying in a few days before, when the man you want to see is not expecting you, is not at home. If the man has correct notions of business himself, if debts are due him, he will stay at home on that day to receive them. And then is when the debtor should meet him. Farmers frequently have no credit at banks, owing to their loose notions of punctuality, and are consequently deprived of temporary accommodations on that account. If you can or cannot pay, go punctually and met your creditor on the day. Your punctuality will inspire confidence, increase your credit. Too many people think it is no discredit to let a note remain over-due. If it cannot be paid, honor requires that it should be renewed or amicably arranged in some way with the creditor. But be sure to go to him on the day he is expecting you and is probably waiting for you. Without punctuality all is trouble, confusion and dissatisfaction. A man who pays no attention to his note when it is due is far gone in financial honor or hopeless bankruptcy. And many a man has been financially ruined by mere neglect, when, if he had gone to his creditor promptly and fairly explained his case, might have saved his property and his credit. This is not an idle subject nor an abstract question. But it is all about us in every day's business, and deeply involving the prosperity of every community.—Iowa State Register.

Why Drivers Turn to the Right.

Major W. H. Smyth gives me the following origin of the American custom of turning to the right on the road: Our ancestors drove oxen as a usual thing. In driving an ox team the driver walks on the left of the team, so that he can handle the goad or whip with his right hand. In meeting a wagon each driver would turn to the right, so that he could be between his own oxen and those of the other wagon.—Henry Grady, in Atlanta Constitution.

How Watch Cases are Made.

In buying a silver watch case great care should be taken to secure one that is solid silver throughout. The cap of most cheap silver cases is made of a composition known as albata, which is a very poor substitute for silver, as it turns black in a short time. The backs of such cases are made much thinner than those of an all silver case, being robbed in order to make the cap thicker and get in as much as possible of the cheap metal. Another important point in a silver case is the joints or hinges, which should be made of gold. Those of most cheap cases are made of silver, which is not a suitable metal for that purpose. In a brief period it warps, bends and spreads apart, allowing the backs to become loose upon the case and admitting the dust and dirt that accummulate in the pocket. The Keystone Silver Watch Cases are only made with silver caps and gold joints.

ST. LOUIS, MO., Feb. 17, 1883.

In our long and varied experience in handling watches, we cannot but acknowledge and give our testimony that the Keystone Solid Silver Watch Cases are the best made to our knowledge. Having no soldering they remain homogeneous, harder and stiffer than they would be were they heated for soldering, and have more resisting power against pressure than any other cases in the market. Catarrh

At this season of the year everybody has a cold, and some very bad ones. By frequent exposures the membranes of the nose become very sensitive, and catarrh and influenza are epidemic. Relief may be obtained by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

For many years in succession, beginning so far back I don't remember when, I had the catarrh in my head. It consisted of an excessive flow from my nose,

Ringing and Bursting Noises

in my head. Sometimes the hearing in my left ear was affected. Five years ago, about this season of the year, I began to use Hood's Sarsaparilla. I was helped right away, but I continued to use it until I felt myself cured.—Mrs. Eliza H. Caulfield, Lowell, Mass.

Jerome Brownell, merchant and extensive miller at Victor, Ontario county, N. Y., writes: "I have used Hood's Sarsaparilla for my catarrh, and it has helped me. I consider Hood's Sarsaparilla one of the best remedies for blood diseases to be obtained."

100 Doses One Dollar

"I have been troubled with that distressing complaint, catarrh, and have been using Hood's Sarsaparilla, and find it one of the best remedies I have ever taken. My trouble has lasted ten years, and never could get any relief until I commenced to use Hood's Sarsaparilla.—Martin Schield, Chicago, Ill.

Danger from Catarrh

depends upon the amount and extent of the scrofulous infection. Unquestionably many deaths from consumption can be traced to neglected catarrh. There is a violent distress, prostrating coughing spells, the eyes weep, the nose discharges copiously, and the head seems about to split.

In such cases Hood's Sarsaparilla corrects the catarrh by its direct action in discharging the poison from the blood through nature's great outlets, so that healthy, sound blood reaches the membranes and is wholesome.

The Argentine Confederation.

The Argentine Confederation is composed of a group of fourteen states and provinces and four territories, whose population, according to the census of 1869, and estimated areas, are as follows:

Provinces.	Areas.	Population.
Buenos Ayers, on the coast	53,000	495,107
Santa Fe, on the coast	18,000	89,218
Entre Rios, on the coast	45,000	134,235
Corrientes, on the coast	54,000	129,022
Rioja, Andes	31,500	48,746
Catamarca, Andes	31,500	79,902
San Juan, Andes	23,700	60,319
Mendoza, Andes	54,000	85,413
Cordova, Central	54,000	210,508
San Luis, Central	18,900	53,294
Santiago del Estero, Central	31,500	128,980
Tucuman, Central	13,500	105,904
Salta, Northern	45,000	76,333
Jujuy, Northern	27,000	40,302
Total	515,100	1,766,022
Territories.
Gran Chaco	123,612	45,291
Missiones (1879)	23,932	32,474
Pampas	191,842	22,000
Patagonia	347,900	24,000
Total	688,786	122,765

This shows a total population in 1869 of 1,859,685. The present population is believed to be over 2,500,000. By the treaty of 1881, between the Argentine Confederation and Chili, the latter concedes to the former all the territory east of the crest of the eastern ridge of the Andes, including a small part of Terra del Fuego, and the greater part of Patagonia. The form of government is republican. The President is elected for six years by an Electoral College, composed of 183 representatives chosen by the several States. The National Congress is composed of a Senate of twenty-eight members, two from each State or province, and a house of fifty members, apportioned according to population. There are five ministers, viz., The Minister of Foreign Affairs, the Interior, Finance, War and Education. Each of the provinces has a Governor and Legislature elected by a popular vote. A large part of this vast country consists of rich, alluvial plains, called pampas, similar to the prairies of this country, with a soil four or five feet thick, formed for the most part, like our prairie soil by the decay of luxurious vegetation. Immense herds of cattle and sheep are raised on these grand prairies, furnishing the principal exports, hides, tallow, wool and canned meats. In 1881 the horned cattle were estimated at 18,000,000 head, and the sheep at 100,000,000. The exports of the country amounted to $56,497,423, and the imports to $54,029,545. Most of this trade is between Buenos Ayres—the capital, having a population of about 200,000, and European, chiefly English, ports. Twelve lines of steamers run to Europe, making the trip in an average period of twenty-nine days. The revenue for 1881 was $24,349,450, derived almost wholly from import and export duties. The expenditures amounted to $26,747,480, and the National debt has grown to $107,681,639, a considerable part of which is represented by recent public improvements: railways, bridges, roads, etc. There are now about 1,600 miles of railway and 10,000 miles of telegraph in the country. The laws recognize no difference between natives and foreigners, and of late foreign immigration, mostly from Spain and Italy, has been flowing in at a steadily increasing rate, amounting now to about 50,000 per annum.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Girl Life in India.

On the day of her marriage she is put into a palanquin, shut up tight and carried to her husband's house. Hitherto she has been the spoiled pet of her mother; now she is to be the little slave of her mother-in-law, upon whom she is to wait, whose commands she is to implicitly obey, and who teaches her what she is to do to please her husband—what dishes he likes best and how to cook them. If the mother-in-law is kind, she will let the girl go home occasionally to visit her mother.

Of her husband she sees little or nothing. She is of no more account to him than a little cat or dog would be. There is seldom or never any love between them; and no matter how cruelly she may be treated, she can never complain to her husband of anything his mother may do, for he would never take his wife's part. Her husband sends to her daily the portion of food that is to be cooked for her, himself and the children. When it is prepared she places it on one large brass platter, and it is sent to her husband's room. He eats what he wishes, and then the platter is sent back, with what is left, for her and her children. They sit together on the ground and eat the remainder, having neither knives, forks, nor spoons. While she is young she is never allowed to go anywhere.

The little girls are married as young as three years of age; and should the boy to whom such a child is married die the next day, she is called a widow, and is from henceforth doomed to perpetual widowhood she can never marry again. As a widow, she must never wear any jewelry, never dress her hair, never sleep on a bed, nothing but a piece of matting spread on the hard brick floor, and sometimes, in fact, not even that between her and the cold bricks; and, no matter how cold the night might be, she must have no other covering than the thin garment she has worn in the day.

She must eat but one meal a day, and that of the coarsest kind of food; and once in two weeks she must fast twenty-four hours. Then not a bit of food nor a drop of water or medicine must pass her lips, not even if she were dying. She must never sit down nor speak in the presence of her mother-in-law, unless they command her to do so. Her food must be cooked and eaten apart from the other women's. She is a disgraced, a degraded woman. She may never even look on at any of the marriage ceremonies or festivals. It would be an evil omen for her to do so. She may have been a high caste Brahminic woman; but on her becoming a widow, any, even the lowest servant, may order her to do what they do not like to do. No woman in the house must ever speak one word of love or pity to her, for it is supposed that, if a woman shows the slightest commiseration to a widow, she will immediately become one herself.

It is estimated that there are eighty thousand widows in India under six years of age.—Commercial Travellers' Magazine.

POSTAGE STAMPS.—There are about six thousand different descriptions of postage stamps in existence. The museum of the Berlin Post Office alone contains between four and five thousand specimens, of which half are from Europe, and the remainder divided between Asia, Africa, America and Australia. What country carries off the palm for absurdity and grotesqueness of artistic design and inferiority of execution, we are not told; but if the collection is faithfully representative, the variety of ugliness must be considerable. Some of the stamps, it appears, bear coats of arms, and other emblems, impartially borrowed from the heavens above, the earth beneath, and the waters under the earth—stars, eagles, lions, horses, serpents, railway trains, dolphins and other "fearful wildfowl." There are, moreover, the effigies of five emperors, eighteen kings, three queens, one grand duke, several inferior titled rulers, and many presidents. In so many countries and nationalities some really attractive specimens must have been elaborated.

The True Test.

If a man is hungry within an hour more or less after a meal he is a dyspeptic, it shows his stomach is not able to dispose of what he has eaten, but to eat again, and thus impose more work, is absurdity. Take Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic which cures dyspepsia, and all stomach, liver, kidney and bladder troubles. It is a perfect tonic, appetizer, blood purifier, a sure cure for ague and malaria diseases. Price 50 cents, of Baker and Hall.

The Commercial Bulletin remarks that "the American nose can now be wiped with an American made silk handkerchief, but no American nose can be wiped with a domestic linen handkerchief; and moreover, no American heart beats beneath a domestic linen bosom. Let linen be a little better protected and linens would be sold cheaper in price and better in quality than the imported linens at the present time." Not a yard of linen is made in the United States! And yet no country is better adapted to flax raising or manufacturing!

Hop Bitters Co., Toronto:

I have been sick for the past 6 years suffering from dyspepsia and general weakness. I have used three bottles of Hop Bitters, and they have done wonders for me. I am well and able to work, and eat and sleep well. I cannot say too much for Hop Bitters.

SIMON ROBBINS.

A New York man recently dreamed that he was in Texas desperado in a town threatened by Indians, and when he woke up he found that he had crawled under the bed.

"Ish this 'er postoffice?" inquired Cauliflower, slightly disfigured after nineteen rounds of sour mash. "No, this is a butcher shop," replied the sarcastic mailing clerk, licking a faded one cent stamp. "Sho! Ish that sho! Well, give me a tender loin for my muzzer."

Rheumatic Syrup Co:

I have been afflicted with rheumatism for many years past, so I could not walk without crutches. I suffered very much pain, and I was prevented from transacting my ordinary business. I tried several different kinds of medicines, but the only one that gave me permanent relief was the Rheumatic Syrup. After using the Syrup for a short time, I found I co'd handle my feet and limbs with perfect ease, and to-day I am well, and I desire to recommend this wonderful discovery to all who are suffering with rheumatism. P. J. Hapstater.

Ellis Village, Jefferson Co., Mar, 27, '82.

Rheumatism is a blood disease and cannot be cured while the blood remains impure. Rheumatic Syrup is the surest and most effective blood purifier known, and is the only remedy that goes to the very root of the disease. Try it and be convinced of its superior merits.

HOW OUR FORESTS DISAPPEAR.—The manufacture and shipment of lumber is the leading industry in Washington Territory, employing a great many workmen, and an immense number of large saw mills operated by steam and water power. A large fleet of ships and some small exporting steamers convey the lumber to San Francisco, East Indies, Europe, Australia, South America, Egypt, Japan, and China. The timber shipped from one district in western Washington Territory in 1876, by vessels, without reckoning the home consumption, equalled 40,000 railway carloads, or 2,000 railway trains of twenty cars each, and in 1878 amounted to 250,000,000 feet. Timbered land well situated for logging purposes sell at from eight to twelve dollars per acre. Three miles from a river timber lands can be had from two to three dollars per acre.

Three Particular Points.

Point the First.—BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is not an intoxicating compound. It is a tonic medicine, not a drink. It is a skillfully compounded preparation made to restore strength and health; not a beverage to be sold in bar-rooms and taverns.

Point the Second.—BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is free from everything injurious. The most delicate ladies and the most enfeebled infants may use it with perfect safety and with great advantage. While it is powerful in its remedial agency, it is gentle in its operation, restoring wasted strength and imparting robust health in the most efficient manner.

Point the Third.—BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is made by the Brown Chemical Company of Baltimore, a long-established house, whose reputation is well-known to the business world and the general community; there is no risk in buying such a medicine.

Rheumatic SYRUP.

The Greatest Blood Purifier Known!

RHEUMATISM CURED. SCROFULA CURED. NEURALGIA CURED.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Apr. 8, '83. Rheumatic Syrup Co.: Gents—I have been a great sufferer from Rheumatism for four years, with six years and healing of the skin, physicians, for scrofula, as some of Rheumatic Syrup I concluded to give it a trial in my own case, and I cheerfully say Syrup. After taking it a short time I have been greatly benefited by its use. I can walk with entire freedom from pain, few weeks, I found myself as and my general health is very well as ever. As a blood purifier, much improved. It is a splendid remedy for the blood and debilitated system.

E. CHESTER PARK, M.D.

PORT BYRON, N.Y., Feb. 20, '82. Rheumatic Syrup Co.: I had been doctoring for three different physicians, and found no relief until I commenced taking your Rheumatic Syrup. After taking it a short time I found myself free from pain, and have not had any return of the disease. I cheerfully recommend it to all suffering from Rheumatism.

MRS. WM. STRANG, Agt.

FAIRPORT, N.Y., March 2, '83. Rheumatic Syrup Co.: Gents—Since November, 1882, I have been a constant sufferer from neuralgia and have not known what it was to be free from pain until I commenced using your Rheumatic Syrup. I have tried almost every remedy I have ever heard of for the cure of rheumatism and neuralgia, but none have proved so beneficial as your Syrup.

Cement Sewer Pipe Works.

E. M. CASEY, Proprietor.

To those who have never witnessed it, the process of cement pipe manufacture is quite interesting. A few moments' ride by Michigan avenue car from the center of the city will land one almost before the door of the above named establishment at 256 Trumbull avenue. One may see here large quantities of solid looking pipes, and upon inquiry learn that some are intended for wells, others for chimneys, sewers, drains, etc., Special attention is called to their Well pipe from 12 to 30 inches in diameter, the latter size being large enough to admit a man to work inside, thereby saving expense in excavation.

HON. JOHN J. ADAM

At the [illegible] the state [illegible] Hon. John J. Adam [illegible] sketch [illegible] Mr. [illegible] Wednesday [illegible] a few extracts from a [illegible] of their [illegible] the sons of Mr. [illegible] sketch [illegible]

John Johnstone, A.M., [illegible] the city of Paisley, [illegible] Hibbert Adam, [illegible] dealer in Paisley for many years, and was a descendant of the celebrated Adam family of Edinburgh, one of whom at the same time was the architect of the college buildings of the University of Edinburgh. Robert Adam, Architect. One of the most noted of the ancestors known to the subject of this sketch was Alex. Adam, LL. D., rector of the high school of Edinburgh, and author of a book of "Roman Antiquities," of which work a copy was presented May 1, 1824, to John J. Adam as a prize for eminence in Greek scholarship by Prof. D. K. Sandford. The John Johnstone, after whom John J. A. was supposed to be named, was a minister mentioned by Froude in his life of Thomas Carlyle as the one from whom Mr. Carlyle received his first lessons in Latin, and whom Thos. Carlyle himself in his reminiscences spoke of as being the priestliest man he ever under any ecclesiastical guise was privileged to look upon.

The only recollection of his father by J. J. A. was that of being taken in when about two years old to see his father on his death bed. Some two or three years after his father's death, his mother, née Mary Crichton, a native of Dumfries-shire, removed to Closeburn parish, in that shire or county, for the purpose of having her two sons, Thomas C. and John J., educated at the celebrated Wallace Hall Academy in that parish. They remained there six or seven years, going through all studies taught there, such as were considered preparatory to a collegiate or university education.—The family then removed to Stewarton, near Glasgow, in part to send the boys to college. Thomas C. commenced the usual four years' college course some two years earlier than John J. A., and after his four years' literary course, T. C. studied Medicine and graduated as a physician and surgeon. John J. commenced the regular four years' curriculum in 1822-23, and took prizes in several of the classes, especially Greek and Logic, and had uniform good credit from all the professors. He graduated as Master of Arts in April, 1826. His diploma on vellum was presented to the library of the University of Michigan in 1877.

"It was expected by most of the relatives and friends of John J. Adam that after his going through college he would prepare for the ministry; and he did make some commencement in that direction; but his own choice was to get a commission in the British army. Upon making inquiries in that regard he found that the Duke of York, then at the head of the army, from his extravagant life and habit of raising money by the sale of army commissions, had forestalled as many future commissions as would be wanted or could be filled for six or seven years to come. The sale of army commissions has for many years past been entirely abolished by act of parliament.

"Finding that there was no prospect within any reasonable time of getting a commission in the army, he went to see a friend who had an interest in the then East India company, and who had spent some time in the East Indies, Mr. Wm. Cunningham, of Lainshaw, near Stewarton. But he rather dissuaded his young friend from trying to get into the East India service, on account of the climate and other objections; but rather advised him, if he thought of leaving Scotland, to read about America and Australia, and see which of these countries, or what part of either of them, would probably suit him best.

The result was that he concluded to go to America. Finding an American brig about to sail from Glasgow to Baltimore, he engaged passage on that vessel, a brig of a hundred and forty odd tons burthen. He left Glasgow on the 4th of July, 1826, went out by the north of Ireland, was forty-two days out of sight of land, and landed at Baltimore the forty-sixth day out. He found the consignees of the vessel very friendly and polite, and one of the clerks aided him in passing the custom-house. The firm had a ship about to sail for China, and they having spoken to the captain and mate of the brig on the subject, offered Mr. Adam the position of supercargo. But that not being consistent with the object of Mr. A. in coming to America, it was respectfully declined.

What then seemed the most desirable ground, to Mr. A., to look over with a view to settlement, was to reach Ohio by the Cumberland road, then a leading avenue for emigration west. He accordingly took passage by stage to Wheeling, taking a side cut-off to get a view of the scenery of Harper's Ferry and to see the United States foundry and arsenal there. On arriving at Wheeling he stopped there a few days, visiting several points in Ohio opposite and above Wheeling.—Having some references from Glasgow and Paisley people to acquaintances in Pittsburg, he made a trip there, and was soon introduced to the Rev. Mr. Bruce, then president of the Western University of Pennsylvania. Dr. B. had been a fellow student and intimate friend of the minister, on whose services Mr. A had generally attended in Glasgow. Dr. B. soon informed Mr. A. that he had been written to by the officers of an academy at Meadville, Pa., to see if he could send them a young man to teach Latin, Greek and Mathematics, and asked Mr. A. if he would accept the position. He did so, and remained there about a year, until he was obliged to return to Scotland to settle with his guardian, as he was out of age when he left Glasgow in July, 1826. One of Mr. Adam's pupils at Meadville was Geo. W. Cullum, who went from the academy there to West Point, graduating there with the highest honors. In November, 1862, whilst Gen. Cullum was chief of staff to Gen. Halleck, Mr. Adam received a letter from Gen. C. embracing mostly reminiscences as to his father's family, with all of whom Mr. A was well acquainted when teaching at Meadville.

CATARRH IN THE HEAD

TRADE MARK.

Can positively be cured by using DR. P. HALL'S CATARRH REMEDY. A new compound, entirely different from all other preparations. It is in the form of a fine ointment which is easily applied in the nostrils and ears, and reaches the seat of the disease by absorption. Pleasant to the smell, and most efficient in operation. For Hay Fever, also impaired Hearing, Sight, Smell and Taste, produced by Catarrhal disease, it is a positive cure. The most noted Physicians and prominent Druggists all over the land have given it their endorsement. We have the unsolicited testimonials of hundreds of prominent and reliable men, who have been permanently cured. Do not be humbugged by nostrums, prepared by the inexperienced and unreliable, but insist upon having this Excellent Remedy, compounded by a Physician who has made this disease a study for 30 years. Two to four bottles generally sufficient to effect an entire cure. Satisfaction guaranteed or Money refunded. It is a positive cure for Ear-ache. For sale by Druggists. Also sent by mail, post-paid, upon receipt of 50c. single bottle, package of four bottles $1.00. Circulars and testimonials free.

Address DR. P. HALL, Wholesale and Retail Druggist, 630 State Street, Erie, Pa.

Do not fail to witness the tableaux at the War Concert.

The new "White Mill" bridge over the Raisin at Adrian is finished.

The old war scenes will be brought out at the War Concert next Thursday evening.

The HERALD wishes all its patrons a happy Thanksgiving and a good square dinner.

The Michigan Central railroad will adopt the new standard time next Sunday, Dec. 2d.

Everybody can afford to give 25 cts. to hear the War Concert and increase the fund for the purchase of a piano for the High School.

Last Monday morning, while Wm. Buck, the manager of Stacy's farm, was at the boarding car at the M. & O. gravel pit, to deliver some turnips, he caught an Italian stealing nine head of cabbages. The woman who runs the boarding car marched down to Justice Burridge and swore out a warrant. Buck was subpoened as a witness, and Michael Cheese—which is the Italian's name in English—was put through the mill in short order.—The fine and costs amounted to $6.50, which made the nine head of cabbages rather expensive fodder.

The December number of the American Agriculturist contains about 100 engravings, which is 25 per cent. more than that of any other illustrated periodical in this or any other country. These illustrations are engraved expressly for the paper by leading artists, covering a wide variety of rural subjects as well as farm inventions and contrivances. These engravings alone in any single issue of the paper are worth far more to every farmer and housekeeper than the subscription price for five years. Notwithstanding the American Agriculturist is fully worth four dollars a year, the subscription price will continue at $1.50 during 1884.

THE M. & O. ROAD.

A train went over the M. & O. road yesterday going west, with President Latcha and other officials on board. It went through to Allegan. The train passed the Tecumseh depot about ten A. M., and was welcomed by a large crowd of spectators. A halt of ten minutes was made during which time the President shook hands with his Tecumseh acquaintances and inspected the depot grounds. It is expected that the depot in Cambridge will be located on this trip, and questions of a similar character will be settled at other points on the road.

The first train schedule has been printed and took effect at midnight last night, and the first regular trains will run to-day. There will be one train daily each way for the present, passing Tecumseh at 10:07 A. M., going west, and at 4:56 P. M., going east.—The stations on the line commencing at Allegan are as follows: Allegan, Kellogg, Monteith, Yorkville, Augusta, Battle Creek, Ceresco, Marshall, Homer, Pulaski, Hanover, Moscow, Jerome, Addison, Cambridge, Tipton, Tecumseh, Ridgeway, Britton, Dundee. From Dundee the trains will run over the T. A. A. & Gd. Trunk road to Toledo. As soon as the telegraph lines shall be finished and the station agents all appointed more trains will be added. Fifteen new locomotives and fifteen passenger coaches have already been secured.

The trial of Edward Couper, for attempted assassination of Milton Waite, at East Milan, ended in the circuit court at Monroe, the 21st, by the jury rendering a verdict of not guilty.

Clinton News: John T. Clark is becoming quite an extensive stock dealer. He has at present nearly 70 head of cattle, 28 of them being Jersey's. He has just completed a new creamery.

At the regular meeting of Tecumseh Lodge, No. 89, F. & A. M. held Friday evening, Dec. 7th the election of officers for the ensuing year will take place. A full attendance of the members is requested.

The Chicago Tribune says that Mr. Cummings, of Chicago, is the principle financial backer of the company that built the M. & O. railroad, and that the general offices and shops are to be located at Marshall.

In the obituary notice of Hiram Adams published last week, this clause occurred: He was wedded to a fault. It should have been, He was modest to a fault. The mistake occurred in the proof reading of the notice.

Water was squirted through the new Adrian water-works pipes last week for the first time, and a reporter for the Times, who astonished his stomach by taking a long, full draught of the liquid, has certified that it was really and truly water.

Marshall Statesman: The new locomotive on the M. & O. railway passed through here yesterday, and was examined by a number of the curious. They pronounce it a beauty of unusuly large size, cylinder 17x24, and one of the best ever seen. The company are evidently not sparing money in equipping the road.

Last week everyone was finding fault with our weather prophets, who have phophesied an open winter, just because we had a little cold snap accompanied by a light fall of snow.—Now we hear them say, "Well, I guess we are going to have an open winter after all." Verily, a prophet is not without honor save in his own country.

Mr. G. Price, of this village, has just returned from Canada where he purchased two stallion colts for the improvement of draught horses. One is a horse for all purposes, the other a heavy Clydesdale.

A prominent farmer in Raisin claims that he has put 21 pounds of fat pork on his lot of hogs each day during the past few weeks on some of the "poor corn" of this season. Who can beat this?

Last Monday was field day at Justice Burridge's court. In addition to the cabbage head suit against Michael Cheese, Cunningham Patterson and Jack O'Hara were arrested for drunkenness and a good legal dose administered to both defendants.

A very pleasant time was enjoyed by all who attended the dance at Tuttle's Hall, Franklin, last Friday evening. The music was excellent, as was also the supper, and everyone went away well pleased with the management and everything in general.

"Put up or Shut up!" I hereby offer to bet the price of the Evening News, and the Tecumseh Herald, for one year, that I have the larger ear of corn in Lenawee county or in Michigan, and it was raised on my farm.—For particulars address or call at the Herald office.

GEORGE HANFORD.

The clothing store of Kies Brothers was broken into last night, the large pain of glass on the east side being broken. A few articles were taken out of the show window, but the burglar does not seem to have entered the store. Sheriff Bidwell already has the matter in charge.

Hon. J. G. Wait, who has resided at Sturgis for 49 years, and who is the wealthiest and most active and influential business man of the place, as well as proprietor of Wait's furniture factory, there, celebrated his 72d birthday last week at which there were 31 present, the youngest of whom was 50 years old, and the oldest 87 years. Mr. Wait is still very active and vigorous.

A Big Newspaper Boom.

The greatest exhibition of newspaper enterprise ever chronicled in the way of pushing circulation, is that of The American Rural Home, published at Rochester, N. Y., which we offer with this journal at a reduced rate. Two Million Sample Copies are actually being mailed to separate addresses, and the first issue for 1884 (Volume 14) will number as announced, four hundred thousand. Publishers can realize better than any other class of people the enormous outlay necessary to such results, but how it can be afforded, in the case of so good and cheap a weekly as The Rural Home, even we do not understand. There is not another farm and family paper at once so handsome, so excellent and so low-priced; and we suppose its proprietors desire simply to show this fact through The Rural Home itself, assured of what will follow. For if you see a copy, you will certainly subscribe. Better write for one by postal at once, and then send us your name and money for a year.

CHURCH FAIR.

At the opera house this afternoon and evening the ladies of St. Peter's church will hold their annual fair. This afternoon large quantities of useful and ornamental articles will be sold at prices to suit everyone. This evening will be presented the beautiful fairy play, "Prince Nysee Nosey," with the following characters:

Prince Nysee Nosey—An amiable sovereign who longs to be changed.

Ali Sherbet The court physician attached to his sovereign for Feesible reasons.

Hassan Ben Fussy—A cheerful follower of the prophet, but given to whine when nobody's nigh.

Silver Star, Queen of the Fairies—A brilliant blaze of bewildering brightness.

Rosabella and Flirtanna—Two Fairy Bell e s ready to respond to the first offer made to ring them.

Darlinetta—A particularly pretty portrait of a perfect fairy.

Nobles of the court, Fairy's Sylphs.

Scene—Partly in the Pelican Islands, a portion of the Persian Empire not yet discovered, and partly in the well-known regions of Fairy Land. Time—Somewhere between the past and the future. Costumes of the same period.

Song in costume—George Waldron.

Company C will appear in full dress uniform at the War Concert.

Blissfield Advance: The Petersburg Journal, a new paper, came to hand this week. It reminds us of the primitive days of the Advance, when we tried to print a paper with old worn out material, the same material now being used on the Journal.

The Hudson Gazette offers this suggestion: "If the new style of enumerating time is to come into vogue why not drop the awkward word "o'clock" and substitute the word hour, or time? We should then read, It is 17th hour, or 17:30 time, which would be just as proper and rather shorter and easier than the old disyllable."

Blissfield Advance: At the last session of the board of supervisors a resolution was passed that all outstanding county drain orders be handed in to the board that some action might be taken to have them paid. All persons holding such orders will please hand them to the supervisor of their respective townships.

Clinton News: A pocketbook containing a thimble, four hickory nuts, a lot of edging, a shirt button and eight pennies has been left at this office. If not called for within ten days, the hickory nuts will be eaten by our devil, the money squandered for chewing gum, the shirt button given to the sewing society, and the remaining articles sold at Auction.

Morenci Observer: In taking some medicine last Sunday, Uncle Benjamin Hornbeck, who resides a mile west of the village, by mistake took down the wrong bottle and imbibed a dose of belladona liniment, and shortly after things began to be like an impending funeral, but prompt medical aid brought him out of his stupor and he is apparently all right again.

The Chicago Daily News issues a handsome little pamphlet on advertising giving three points on the question. The above paper is abou he cheapest published, the price being two cents, and the paper just full of crisp news items and live editorial.—Its average daily circulation is over 100,000 copies, and its immense sale is the result of publishing a first class daily at low prices.

One day last week, James Burdett and John Day, of Macon, fell the timber, and cut eighty-eight rail-cuts inside of ten hours. Will Avery went along with a team with the intention of skidding a portion of these logs.—With considerable energy he skidded not only the eighty eight rail-cuts, but also twelve saw logs in addition, making in all one hundred logs in less than ten hours. Who can beat the above?

Those who don't believe in advertising can learn a lesson contained in the statement of one of our merchants, who says his sales increased just tenfold the week after he put an attractive and sensible advertisement in the HERALD. Those who think people know where their place of business is anyway, and advertising does no good, will find their trade going to those who do advertise what they have and what bargains they can make.

Sojourner Truth, the famous lecturer and colored reformer, died at her home on College street, in Battle Creek at 3 o'clock on the morning of Nov. 26, after a long and painful illness. She was 108 years old, according to the best data that herself and friends co'd obtain. The immediate cause of her last illness was an ulcer on one of her lower limbs, and she had been unconscious for a number of days. She leaves three daughters living, viz: Mrs. Diana Corbin, Mrs. Elizabeth Boyd and Mrs. Sophia Schuyler.—Much genuine grief is felt on account of her death, both among the white and the black people.

SUFFOCATED IN A WELL.

A Terrible Accident by which two Macon Residents met a Sad Death.

Last Friday a terrible affair occurred on the farm of Byron Beals, in the town of Macon. Mr. Beals had been having a new well dug, and Henry Pocklington and Isaac Ballou were engaged with other workmen in brickling it up. The brick work had been completed and the men were then boring at the bottom of the will. Natural gas had been escaping from the well for some time in large quantities, and the gas was the cause of the accident. Henry Pocklington went to the bottom of the well—about thirty feet—to work there. He had been there but a short time when the assistant at the top noticed him fall over into the water. Isaac Ballou put his foot in the noose of a rope and was lowered down, saying as he went down, "now when I get hold of him draw us up quick." Wm. Swick and Wm. Emmons drew the two men about half way up when they both fell back to the bottom of the well. The neighbors were summoned and the bodies were finally recovered, but life had fled long before the bodies could be taken out. Both the victims were married men and leave families, and the sad affair has thrown a deep gloom over the entire community. The two men were buried on Sunday last, and the funeral services were very largely attended.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

VILLAGE OF TECUMSEH,
Council Room, Nov. 5 1883.

At this regular session council convened at the usual hour.

Present, Messrs. Mills, Heesen, Bresie, Smith, Sparks, Steinhoff and the Recorder.

Minutes of last regular session and of special session held Oct. 15, 1883, read and approved.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

On Finance:

Report in writing, and recommend the payment of the following claims out of the contingent fund.

J. R. Dowling	$23 63
John Canhon	3 08
L. J. Rose	7 50
Sidney Powell	3 75
Henry Brown	5 70
Robt. Magill	9 00

Dell Hubbard	6 00
W. Owen	1 00
W. Osborne	20 17
J. W. Cole	13 50
Geo. Heesen	12 32

On motion the report was accepted and adopted, and orders directed to be drawn for the respective bills.

On Streets:

Report in writing on the petition of W. T. Owen, Wm. Hayden, Wm. Ide, and others, submitted at last meeting of Council, and recommend that the prayer of the petitioners be granted, as far as it relates to the construction of a sidewalk on the east side of Manree street, from the south line of Logan street to the north line of the Michigan & Ohio Railway, and on the west side of the same street from the south side of Kilbuck street, southward to the north line of the M. & O. Railway. That such walks to wit: on the east side of Maunee street from Logan street southward to the M. & O. Railway, and on the west side thereof from Kilbuck street to said Railway, be constructed four feet wide, of sound pine plank, not less than one and a-half inches thick, and not more than six inches wide, to be laid lengthwise and well spiked down on good white oak stringers, not less than 2x4 inches in size, and not more than 2 ft. apart, the same to be completed and ready for acceptance on or before the first day of December next. Such sidewalk as is now laid along the lines above mentioned, and in accordance with these specifications, to be accepted as part of the walk hereby required to be constructed.

By resolution of Council, the report of the committee was accepted and adopted.

The same committee report in writing on the remonstrance presented to council at the last special meeting thereof, by Geo. Price, H. C. Conkling, O. W. Bean and others, and recommend that the prayer of the remonstrants be granted.

On motion the report is accepted and adopted.

REPORTS OF OFFICERS.

The Marshall presents his monthly report which is accepted and placed on file.

It appearing from the report that the team belonging to the village does not work every day, the Street Commissioner is instructed to see that the team is kept at work all the time when the weather will permit.

NEW BUSINESS.

Mr. Smith made some explanation in regard to the block of stone taken by Mr. Stevens, and referred to at last meeting of Council. He thought that the price then asked for the stone was more than its real market value, and suggested that Council accept a smaller price.

On motion the Marshall is directed to accept from Mr. Stevens $5 in full for the stone.

A committee from the Tecumseh Hall Association, consisting of Messrs. Adams, Sutton and Shull, came before the Council, and each member of the committee addressed the Council on the subject of the high license charged for entertainments in the opera house and the heavy burden thus imposed on the stockholders of such association.

On motion the matter is referred to the committee on ordinances with instructions to report at the next meeting.

J. R. Hialey and W. W. Marsh each propose to purchase a street lamp and erect them in front of their respective places of business if the Council will take care of such lamps and light them the same as the other lamps on the streets.

On motion the Council accepted of the proposition.

W. W. Marsh asks for permission to build a cross-walk in front of his meat market.

On motion the matter is referred to the committee on streets.

On motion the Street Commissioner is instructed to erect two new street lamp, one at or near the cemetery gate, and the other at the west end of Burt street.

On motion the Marshall is instructed to notify all parties to have their side walks built or repaired within fifteen days from this date.

It appearing that those who use water from the water pipes of the Village have neglected to pay for the same for the past two years, the Recorder is instructed to collect such unpaid water tax as soon as convenient.

The president makes a proposition in writing to Council in regard to the construction of a drainage well on Chicago street, which on motion is accepted.

Council then adjourned.

P. S. MCKINNON, Recorder.

The Rev. I. M. Frey, formerly an Episcopal clergyman at Clinton then a Congregational minister at Lamont and who later still officiated at Valley City, Dakota, is a fugitive, with $200 reward offered for his arrest. He has debts to the amount of several thousand dollars, and it is claimed that he has squandered the fortune which he received from his wife.

No intelligent reader can fail to be interested in the contents of North American Review for December. The question of the telegraph has the place of honor in the number, Gardiner G. Hubbard pointing out the great advantages that would result from the proposed "Government control of the Telegraph," and showing from the experience of several European countries the benefits to be derived from the incorporation of the telegraphic with the postal service. Prof. J. Laurence Laughlin, of Harvard University, shows the "Uses of the Sub Treasury System," in its absorbing and withholding from circulation the specie that is constantly needed to insure stability in the world of finance, are among the leading articles. System.

Could we all, in ordering our homes, but develop that degree of system and order that characterized the affairs of every successful business man we would do away with much of the worry and vexation of life. But for various reasons the majority fail here, some from one cause and some from another, but the result is very detrimental to the children reared in such homes, and unless possessed naturally of an unusual degree of order, they go out into the world poorly fitted for any kind of life, no matter how much of other preparation they may have had for it.

As we have said, there are reasons for this flaw in our domestic arrangements, some of which are unavoidable, while many are but the result of carelessness and lack of management. For instance, we have little or no conception of the vast amount of valuable time we squander in changing from one occupation to another. Many of us who work faithfully and well while we do work, seem to feel that we are entitled to a rest when the task is complete, and sit complacently down to breathe awhile before taking up the next thing, and the probabilities are that the while will be allowed to grow into a big one before we realize what we are about. Now, these resting spells after hard work are good for the body and the time they take would not be missed if, while we were employing these, we would but improve the time by using the mind, which usually at such times is not tired, but more active than usual, and ready for almost anything we may require of it. And if work is pressing, we may often save more time than we take for our rest by planning for the rest of the day. But how often we allow the mind to go "wool-gathering," and the time is wasted that might have been turned to account. Again, many of us are not as prompt as we might be in preparing meals, and one, two, three, or possibly six or eight individuals are thus robbed of a half hour each, and we are the criminals. This fault also reacts on the housekeeper herself, so that instead of being through with her work, with her house in order and herself tastefully dressed at the proper time of day, she is probably obliged to keep her friend waiting another dreary while in the parlor while she completes her toilet before she can see her. And unless dealt with severely, this same habit of being always a little behind time proves a most powerful enemy to domestic happiness.

Various causes in the way of petty hindrances may operate to produce this delay, aside from the final decision to wait awhile before performing a task, so we may enumerate procrastination as another of the sins that beset us as housekeepers, although the effect is much the same whatever the cause of tardiness. Then there is a tendency in many of us to put off time about our work. We do not work with the purpose in view of getting done, but more like a laggard working by the day, to put in the time. These defects, taken with numerous other failings of home, produce disorder and confusion, and to the development of proper habits in the young; and if neglected till maturity there is not a chance in a thousand that the individual will acquire this talent for systematizing and reducing work to a method, even when he realizes his inability to compete with men of inferior ability, but who have acquired this. Barrington Hawkeye.

Recreations in Science.

"The sun is 15,000,000 years old, and will live 15,000,000 years longer." This fact will quiet a great deal of anxiety and alarm. An impression had got abroad that the sun would only last 15,000,000 years longer. The sun holds its age well. Older inhabitants say that it does not look a day older than it did ten years ago. [illegible] The temperature of the moon is at least 200 degrees below zero, and it is highly entertaining to mingle among the oldest inhabitants who congregate around the village freeroom stove in midwinter and listen to their fears about the cold January of 10,781 years B. C., when water froze while boiling on the stove. The hope exists, however, that the temperature of the moon is 200 degrees below zero is a false one. If the funds were available the United States Government would have sent an exploring expedition there to ascertain the facts. Some stars are so far away that their light, moving at a velocity of 186,000 miles a second, [illegible] a dark room in a big [illegible] [illegible] a uniform temperature of 18 degrees. [illegible] [illegible] long years. A [illegible] said on the board of [illegible] and been deposited [illegible] Kindt's accounts, he found it safer to trust to that good enough, and the result was that he got sentenced to a year's imprisonment to his great surprise. Depositors and borrowers do not commit their securities to a cashier whose name is unknown in Tecumseh, but to directors whose names are figured on prospectuses, and who seem to offer guarantees for good management. This is a point which directors too frequently overlook. Lawton Graphic.

Eighty thousand children in the North of England form the "Dickey Bird Societies." They are pledged to protect birds, never to destroy a nest, and to feed birds in winter. It would not be a bad organization for this country. In combined voice and plumage our American birds of the woods and fields are equal to any in the world. It was a sorry piece of work to import such useless vagrants as English sparrows to take their places.

Disease comes in by hundredweights and goes out by ounces.

In hundreds instances where Hot Springs and other treatment failed to cure scrofula and syphilitic disorders, the sufferer has sought and found a cure in Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. It enriches the blood, strengthens the urinary and digestive organs, and quickly removes all indications of ill health and blood disease from a pimple to a running sore, from a headache to a rheumatic pain. Its superiority over all other blood purifiers and strengthening medicines is admitted by all who test its curative effect and influence.

I remarked to an old farmer back in the country, whom I had not seen for several years, and whose farm, in the meantime, had improved wonderfully, that his place was so changed I hardly knew it. "Yes," said he, "I've been fixin' up a little." The old woman pestered me to death about the garden, and so I slicked it up a little, and fixed about the house, and it looked so nice I went at the farm fences and the brush, and saved more manure, and kept killing the weeds, and the crops got better, and so I kept going on, and things do look pretty good now. Wife takes a paper, and I take one, and I get time to read it too, and I used to think that I hadn't time for anything." And so he ran on, seemingly much pleased with what he had done, and his life and his home without doubt the happier for it. Examples of a like kind may be found all over the country.

Nervous debility, indicated by loss of memory, universal lassitude, constant fatigue, vivid dreaming, unnatural excitements, fits of dizziness, etc., is quickly cured by using Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. This remedy purifies the blood, strengthens the weak portions of the body, quiets the nerves, produces dreamless slumber, and is the only remedy that permanently cures the many distressful ailments resulting from nervous debility.

Cost of Bringing up a Boy.

A clergyman who has been discoursing on boys has devoted considerable attention to the cost of these somewhat necessary adjuncts and he estimates the expense of bringing a good boy, with all the advantages of city life, to the age of fifteen, at $5,000. These figures are about [illegible] the time the boy is of age, if he has gone through college. A bad boy arrived at the age mentioned costs fully as much, [illegible] he has not been to college, and the [illegible] as the reverend gentleman suggests, does not include the value of the [illegible] and father's gray hairs. Most [illegible] brought up boys will agree that the cost [illegible] is not big enough.

The blessings of life are many.—Live long and be happy. Don't neglect a cough or cold. Keep yourself well clothed in changeable weather, and always keep a bottle of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry in the household. A single spoonful will cure an ordinary cough or cold. Its continued use will cure consumption.

The town of Dunglas lies on the Clyde [illegible] Adrian [illegible] a pleasant [illegible] within sight of the [illegible] that quarter of the earth [illegible] About 5,000 people live there, and [illegible] the effete descendants of the most formidable band of pirates that ever existed. It is a very old town. One hundred and sixty-seven years before Christ the city surrendered to the Romans, and received exemption from taxation, and its freedom. From 1500 to 1600 the pirates held full sway, and in 1718 a great battle was fought there [illegible]

To Repair Damages.

Dear lady, there is probably no use telling you that fashionable life in a great city is a rough one on your beauty. Late hours, loss of sleep and mental excitement will leave you by and by shorn of those beautiful tresses which drew lovers around you in other years. Artificial substitutes can never pass for those rich and glossy locks. Parker's Hair Balsam will stop your hair from falling out, restore its natural color and softness, and prove cleansing and beneficial to the scalp.

It is said by a well-known Illinois educator that "The average western farmer toils hard early and late, often depriving himself of good rest and sleep, for what? To raise corn. For what? To feed hogs. For what? To get money with which to buy more land. For what? To raise more corn. For what? To feed more hogs. For what? To buy more land. And what then? Go with the herd. Why be [illegible] more land to feed more [illegible] hogs and a thousand [illegible] the slaughter stops his squealing."

These are Solid Facts.

The best blood purifier and system regulator ever placed within the reach of suffering humanity, truly is Electric Bitters. Inactivity of the liver, biliousness, jaundice, constipation, weak kidneys, or any disease of the urinary organs, or whoever requires an appetizer, tonic or mild stimulant, will always find Electric Bitters the best and only certain cure known. They act surely and quickly, every bottle guaranteed to give entire satisfaction or money refunded. Sold at 50 cents a bottle.

Compare the dose and quantity of Hood's Sarsaparilla and you have conclusive proof of its superior strength and cheapness. Try it.

A little tot of a girl coaxed two nickels from her father on Thanksgiving day, saying she would use one for candy and the other she would give to the missionaries. Before executing her expressed intentions she lost one while at play, and running to her mamma said: "Oh, mamma, I have lost my missionary nickel."

"My system seemed saturated with scrofula," said Mr. Selby Carter, Nashville, Tenn., "but Ayer's Sarsaparilla cured me."

WOMEN.

DR. PENGELLY:
Dear Sir: "Overwork has [illegible] me, as it does by many. [illegible] I add my testimony to the value of Zoa-Phora. For five years I suffered greatly with Prolapsus [illegible] to use a supporter during all that painful period, but, thanks to your medicine, I never felt more than [illegible] after taking the first bottle. I am not well, but I work all the time, and am better than I have expected to be. You may use my letter, and if any one wishes to write me for more information, give them my full address. Yours, &c.
JERSEYVILLE, Ill., April 25, 1882.

DR. PENGELLY:
Dear Sir: "I am more than pleased with the effect of your Zoa-Phora in our daughter's case. I am surprised to see how she has improved. She is gaining in weight and color, and I think feels better than she ever did. Her nerves are steady, and the distress in her chest is entirely gone. I firmly believe that Zoa-Phora is all that has saved her life. I am willing you should use my letter, for I am not afraid to tell what a wonderful cure your medicine is. Yours respectfully,
MRS. SARAH RANDOLPH.
N. B.—This was a case of suppression.
From Mrs. John Spitler,
No. 28 Witt St., Fort Wayne, Ind.
"I have suffered for sixteen years with spasmodic pain in my head and general nervous debility. Recently I had a severe attack of pain in my head, caused by weakness and nervous exhaustion. I thought I should die. My husband said we would test Zoa-Phora thoroughly. He gave it to me according to directions for severe cases, and in less than 24 hours I had complete relief. I advise all women who suffer from nervous or sick headache, or any form of female weakness, to use Zoa-Phora. There is no medicine to compare with it."

DR. A. FRASER'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.
It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.
The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.
All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.
It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years,
This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.
Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

COMPOUND OXYGEN NOT A DRUG

A NEW TREATMENT.
For Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, Dyspepsia, Catarrh, Headache, Debility, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all chronic and Nervous Disorders.

A CARD:
We the undersigned, having received great and permanent benefit from the use of "COMPOUND OXYGEN," prepared and administered by Drs. STARKEY & PALEN, of Philadelphia, and being satisfied that it is a new discovery in medical science, and all that is claimed for it, consider it a duty which we owe to the many thousands who are suffering from chronic and so-called incurable diseases, to do all that we can to make its virtues known, that to deprive the public with confidence.
We have personal knowledge of Drs. Starkey & Palen. They are educated, intelligent and scientific physicians, who will not, we are sure, make any statement which they do not know or believe to be true, nor publish any testimonials or reports of cases, which are not genuine.

DR. B. MINCER,

Scientific Optician!

I have devoted 25 years wholly to a study of the eye, and how to aid vision properly, and I make a specialty of fitting glasses to the eyes that have been injured by cheap, inferior glasses. I manufacture every kind of glasses, and guarantee satisfaction. Read what prominent physicians of Adrian say:

Having for some time past used glasses to improve my sight, without satisfactorily gaining my object, I called on Mr. Mincer, optician, of Detroit, who readily adapted glasses to my eyes, with which I am so well pleased, that I cheerfully speak in his favor. His method of examining and its application in selecting glasses to fit the eye can only be acquired by a knowledge of the useful organ to which must be added extensive experience. He has also adapted glasses to Mrs. Baker's eyes with which she is well pleased. I recommend him to all who need glasses adapted to their wants; poor glasses are an abomination.

V. A. BAKER, M.D.

ADRIAN, Nov. 18, 1882.

I have used spectacles bought of Mr. B. Mincer for the past three months, and find them superior to any I have ever used, and can cheerfully recommend him to anyone in need of glasses, and the benefit of his experience in the science of optics to adjust proper lenses.

DANIEL TODD, M.D.

I have investigated the work of Mr. B. Mincer, optician. I have reason to believe that he understands his profession, and adjusts excellent glasses on scientific principles.

C. BYND, M.D.

I will visit every town in the county during the month.

TIRED OUT.

The distressing feeling of weariness, of exhaustion without effort, which makes life a burden to so many people, is due to the fact that the blood is poor, and the vitality consequently feeble. If you are suffering from such feelings,

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—The Dakota lands set apart for educational purposes are valued at $82,900,000.

—There are more Baptist churches in East Tennessee than post-offices or grist mills.—N. Y. Sun.

—An English clergyman writes that there are 4,000 unemployed clergymen in the Church of England, many of whom are both able and willing to work, but who cannot find anything to do.

—Mrs. Florence E. Cory, who is a practical carpet designer, has opened in New York a large school for women desirous of learning practical designing and of earning their own living.—N. Y. Times.

—President Robinson, of Brown University, has had his office furnished with a massive desk and chair made from solid oak timbers which had done 100 years' service in old University Hall.

—Among the amendments made in the Episcopal prayer-book, the words "Lord, save our rulers" are to be changed to "O, Lord, bless and preserve these United States.—Chicago Times.

—The Telegraph, of Macon, Ga., says: "Every week there are additional evidences of the need for technical schools. A gentleman engaged in manufacturing said in our office that he had vacancies in his business that paid from $1,500 to $3,500 a year that he could not find the men in the State to fill."

—The Amherst Senate is composed of four seniors, three juniors, two sophomores and one freshman, chosen by ballot. This body has entire jurisdiction in all questions of discipline. They even overrule former decisions of the Faculty, and the President holds that they have thus far exercised their power wisely. The Senate recently decided in favor of permitting the students to engage in inter-collegiate sports, which the faculty had interdicted.—N. Y. Examiner.

—A school for teaching foreigners the English language has been opened in New York in the Five Points House of Industry by the Young Men's Hebrew Association. The school will be open five evenings in the week, and the system employed will be simply to make the pupils speak English by allowing them to speak nothing else. Not word of a foreign language will be tolerated in school hours, and when a man fails to understand a sentence spoken to him, he must find it out by instinct or by persistent questioning. Over two hundred names are enrolled on the list of members.—N. Y. Tribune.

—The last paragraph of the will of the late Rev. Dr. William Shelton, of Buffalo, touchingly says: "I will also (in taking leave of life) add that my parishioners have ever been kind and considerate of my welfare; and, through the period of more than half a century in which I have most imperfectly served them, they have been respectful and dutiful. For all which I can only add my hearty thanks, asking their forgiveness for my neglects, and giving my final benediction. God bless, preserve and keep you and yours, and may you always be preserved in the unity of the church, which has ever been one, figured by the ark of the flood."

PUNGENT PARAGRAPHS.

—Most people are perfectly willing to be good when they get too old to be bad any longer.—N. Y. Herald.

—Oscar Wilde has received many thanks from Mary Anderson for writing a play for her. They reach him in this shape: "Declined, with many thanks."

—"I hev allus noticed," observes Aunt Tabetha, "that the boy who lets his mother bring in all the kindlin' wood and build the kitchen fire is the mourner that bellers loudest at her funeral." And then she added thoughtfully: "Mebbe as not it is because he misses her the most."—Boston Post.

—Elder sister: Geraldine, why did you take so much trouble to snub that handsome, manly young fellow we just met? Geraldine: O, that's Harry Hardlines. He hasn't a cent to his name, and he's got a mother to support; and that sort of thing isn't good form, you know, nowadays."—Boston Post.

—The father's prayer:

"I cannot sing the old songs,"
She raspingly did toot,
While at an asthmal organ
Her fingers she did shoot.
"Thank heaven!" growled the parent,
With manifest ado,
"An' prig they'll fix the new ones
Just so you cannot, too."

—Yonkers Gazette.

—A trade circular, under the title, "What will the Coming Girl Wear?" contains a description of the articles likely to constitute the wardrobe of the future. It is a description sufficient to convince anybody that what the coming girl will chiefly wear is a hole in the pocket-book of the man who supports her.—Brooklyn Eagle.

—There is a pertinent German story of recovery from a trance. A man died, as it appeared. He was about to be buried when he came to life and burst the lid of his coffin. He was hastily removed from the grave and rapidly recovered health. During his seeming death he heard all that was said about him. He changed his will.

—"Good morning. Is Mr. Black in?" "No, sah, he's gone to his business, sah." "Well, is Mrs. Black in?" "Dat depends, sah. What does ye want wid her?" "Why, here's a milk bill of thirty-two dollars I'd like her to settle." "She am not in, sah." "But I know she is in." "Can't help it, sah. De orders am dat she am never in fur milk and meat bills and sich. Good mornin'; I has to go; she am callin' me."—Kentucky State Journal.

—"I see you are growing a mustache, George," said she, as she caressed the lappel of his coat. "Yes," stammered George, blushing furiously, "I—I am trying to cultivate one, Arabella." "Don't it feel funny on your lip," she asked. "Well—no," he laughed, regaining his composure, "it seems to be quite natural." "I wonder how a mustache would feel on my lip," she said, with a far-away, absent look in her eyes. "You needn't wonder long, then," said George, as he bent down. "O, you forward thing!" she exclaimed; "I've a good mind to make you take that back again." And he did.—Chicago Herald.

REMARKABLE ESCAPE.

John Kuhn, of Lafayette, Ind., had a very narrow escape from death. This is his own story: "One year ago I was in the last stages of consumption.—Our best physicians gave my case up. I finally got so low that our doctor said I could not live twenty-four hours. My friends then purchased a bottle of Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs which benefitted me. I continued until I took nine bottles. I am now in perfect health, having used no other medicine.

A hotel in Boston built of stone and brick 96 and 69 feet frontage with basement and seven stories above the sidewalk, was moved nearly 100 feet in order to make a change in the street. One side was supported by eight granite columns twelve feet high, the whole building weighing 5,000 tons beside the furniture. The occupants of the stores and the hotel were not disturbed in the removal.

Canning Fruit.

In canning fruit it is wise to use a good deal of sugar. Plain canned fruit is apt to turn, and does not retain its flavor as when made a little rich. If our housekeepers would take as much pains in making preserves as the French do, they would find themselves amply rewarded when, in the winter, they turn out the beautiful clear fruit, always in perfect shape. To preserve fruit in the French method it is necessary to make a clear syrup first, which can be done by melting two pounds of the best sugar with a pint of water, using a white porcelain kettle; add the slightly beaten white of one egg before the syrup becomes hot: let it boil, and skim it until the scum ceases to appear. Then put in carefully selected fruit, a few at a time, watching carefully that they do not break, and removing one at a time as soon as they become soft. When these are put in glass jars and the syrup poured over them, the result will make glad the most stoical heart.

Nearer to Nature.

Nature has made her laws with us, which we must obey or suffer the penalty. This penalty is often lung or throat trouble, which leads on to consumption. Every man believes consumption incurable. People have been educated to this belief which is proven incorrect by Dr. Bigelow's Positive Cure, which is nature's great helpmate, and it cures consumption and all throat and lung diseases speedily and permanently. Trial bottles free, of Baker and Hall.

An English writer says that the middle class Englishman, as a rule, does not buy books, except a few classics and professional treatises, but waits for his chance at the book club or circulating library. There are instances where authors are asked to lend their own copies by men of ten times their income. Wine and china may be bought, but books must be hired for, says the writer, the English are educated to the point of reading, but not to paying for books.

Paralysis, Nine Years.

"After having suffered for 9 years with paralysis," says Mr. Joseph Yates of Patterson, N. Jersey, "I was cured by Samaritan Nervine." Mr. Yates authorizes this statement. Your druggist keeps it, $1.50.

Logical deduction: She was a Boston lady of culture. She stood watching a canal boat loaded with ice, as it was being locked into the canal from Lake Champlain. "What is that boat loaded with?" "Ice," was the reply. "Oh, my!" she exclaimed, "if the horrid stuff should melt the water would sink the boat."

A GOOD INVESEMENT.—One of our prominent business men said to us the other day: "In the spring my wife got all run down and could not eat anything; passing your store I saw a pile of Hood's Sarsaprilla in the window and I got a bottle. After she had taken it a week she had a rousing appetite, and did everything. She took three bottles, and it was the best three dollars I ever invested. C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

"The bullet went in here," he said, touching the hole. "I don't feel any pain, and must be bleeding inwardly if at all, I think."

"It will soon be twenty years since the war closed."

Under the hot sun of August, 1882, the village of Dover, N. J., lay still as the sphinx in Egypt, while Elijah Sharp, of that place, slowly and softly spoke of the past. "Yes," he said, "I was in the army and saw many of the sights of those fearful years. I was finally discharged from disability, resulting from sunstroke. I came home miserable in health and spirits; so enfeebled that I took cold on the slightest exposure. Life seemed worthless to me; I lived only in memory."

"That was sad enough," I said dividing my last two cigars.

"That's so," responded Mr. Sharp; "but I got over it. Outgrew it? Not exactly. When in that condition I began taking Parker's Tonic, and my health commenced to improve right away. I was astonished at it and so was my wife. I piled on the flesh and could eat anything. My ambition blazed up. I could attend to business, and now—excepting that I have to take care about exposing myself to the hot sun—I am as well as I was the day I enlisted. What a difference there are in things—guns and bayonets kill; Parker's Tonic saves."

This preparation which has been known as Parker's Ginger Tonic, will hereafter be advertised and sold simply under the name of Parker's Tonic—omitting the word "ginger." Hiscox & Co. are induced to make this change by the action of unprincipled dealers who have for years deceived their customers by substituting liquors or preparations under the name of ginger. We drop the misleading word all the more willingly, as ginger is an unimportant flavoring ingredient in our Tonic.

There is no change however in the preparation itself, and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers, wrapped under the name of Parker's Ginger Tonic contain the genuine medicine if the fac simile signature of Hiscox & Co., is at the bottom of the outside wrapper.

CHAPTER I.

"I was taken sick a year ago
With billious fever."

"My doctor pronounced me cured, but I got sick again with terrible pains in my back and sides, and I got so bad I

Could not move!
I shrunk!

From 228 lbs. to 120! I had been doctoring for my liver, but it did me no good. I did not expect to live more than three months. I began to use Hop Bitters. Directly my appetite returned, my pains left me, my entire system seemed renewed as if by magic, and after using several bottles I am not only as sound as a sovereign but weigh more than I did before. To Hop Bitters I owe my life."

Dublin, June 6, '81. R. Fitzpatrick.

How to Get Sick.—Expose yourself day and night; eat too much without exercise; work too hard without rest; doctor all the time; take all the vile nostrums advertised, and then you will want to know how to get well, which is answered in three words—Take Hop Bitters!

ESTATE OF PETER R. ADAMS.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee—ss.

At a session of the Probate Court, for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, on Wednesday, the 7th day of November, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three.

Present, Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Peter R. Adams, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Mary C. Adams Shull, a daughter and heir-at-law of said deceased, alleging, among other things, that although more than twenty days have elapsed since the probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, yet that the executors named therein and to whom the execution of said will was committed and the administration of said estate granted by an order of this court, made on the fifteenth day of October, 1881, have neglected to give bond as required by law, and as ordered by this court, whereby the said executors so named and appointed as aforesaid have forfeited their right to act as such executors, and praying that administration of said estate with the will annexed may be granted to Cordelia M. Adams or to some other suitable person, and that such other and further order and proceedings may be had in the premises as may be required by the statute in such case made and provided:

Thereupon it is ordered That Monday, the 3rd day of December next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

ESTATE OF PETER DAVIDSON.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the city of Adrian, on Wednesday, the 21st day of November, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three.

Present Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Peter Davidson, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Edwin B. Wood, executor of the last will and testament of said deceased, alleging that he is ready to file his account in this court, and praying for the allowance of his said account, and for such other order as may be necessary and agreeable to law.

Thereupon it is ordered that Monday the 24th day of December next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

The American Reformer,

ONE YEAR,

For Only [illegible] Dollars.

IN these days of reformative effort a journal devoted to all the various leading reforms is needed in every intelligent home. THE AMERICAN REFORMER just meets that need. It was started in New York City one year ago, with abundant capital, by men of long journalistic experience, who seemed to have an instinctive comprehension of the public want. Temperance, Civil Service, Prison Reform, Political Reform, Medical Reform—all these have able and brilliant treatment from the best writers; and Reform news is given in careful condensation, from all over the world. Broad, strong, clear-headed, non-partisan, in its opinions, and remarkably well edited throughout, its sixteen handsome pages. THE REFORMER has taken rank as a public educator, and is recognized as the highest exponent of reform principles. It is published fortnightly at No. 287 Canal Street, New York, at the price of One Dollar per year. But by the kindness of the publishers we are enabled to offer it with our own paper one year as announced. SIGNAL CORPS REMINISCENCES

Perhaps it is not generally known in our community that the genial clerk of the Lilley House is an old U. S. Navy officer. Such however is the fact. The following letter was lately received from Elisha N. Pierce, of Waverly, Mass., enclosing a sketch formerly written by him for a local paper. We take pleasure in giving them both a place in our columns, believing they will be read with interest by those who take an interest in personal reminiences of the late war.

WAVERLY, Middlesex Co., Mass.

Editor Herald: You may perhaps remember that some weeks since, I called at your office and inquired for a Boston paper, at the same time mentioning that I had discovered in the clerk of the Lilley House an old friend of the late war, Mr. Amos P. Foster, late Lieut. Commander, U. S. Navy, a brave and gallant officer, who deserves well of his country, and though fame has not named him in her list of heroes, and he is now earning his bread by the sweat of his brow, I find him still the warm-hearted friend and courteous gentleman that he was in 1865, when, in command of the U. S. S. "Commodore Perry," he safely performed the dangerous task of clearing the James river of obstructions, fishing up the torpedoes and making a safe passage for the fleet to follow, being the first to arrive with his vessel at Richmond, and in time for a parting shot at Lee's retreating army.

I send herewith a sketch written by me and published in one of our local papers several years ago. At that time I never anticipated that it would be my good fortune to meet Captain Foster again, and did not intend him as the hero of the tale as I designed to take that role myself, the Capt. being incidentally mentioned. The story is true in every particular.

Truly yours,

ELISHA N. PEIRCE.

"Editor Free Press:

Dear Sir:—I have been penned up in the house for over six weeks; had what Dr. Willis calls pneumonia. I have got through the first act, and am now enjoying the afterpiece, which may be called oldmonia.

In this melancholy state of affairs I saw in the Free Press a request from Capt. Keyser for articles used in the war of the rebellion to exhibit as relies. I immediately opened communication with the captain, and offered to supply large quantities of relics for the object in view. I received a very guarded reply: evidently the captain did not take much stock in my relics; however, I forced a few on him, among which was an old diary, in which was the following:

"Ordered to report with two flag men on board the U. S. steamer Delaware for signal duty."

Whereby hangs a tale, the telling of which will amuse the writer, and use up some of the time, which for once in my life I have more than I know what to do with, and though the story itself may not be very thrilling, I trust for interest it will compare favorably with many articles published in your valuable paper, relating to patent medicines and miraculous cures, and will possess the merit of not having been copied from other papers.

The U. S. steamer Delaware's armament consisted of four guns of large calibre, one long rifle canon amidship, and a crew of about two hundred men. She was commanded by Capt. Amos Foster, who, though a volunteer officer, was no slouch, having been twice promoted for gallant conduct in action, and loosing two steamers while engaging the rebel batteries on the James river, in each case receiving a promotion and a finer vessel than the one he lost. I was somewhat acquainted with Capt. Foster, having several times loaned him a horse and rode with him outside the line.

A short time before this a U. S. Gun boat had fired upon troops on shore, supposed to be the enemy, but who proved to be our own men, some of whom were killed and wounded. In order to prevent the repetition of this error, all land forces near the coast and all gunboats running near the shore on special service, were provided with signal officers, whose duty it was to signal all troops seen on shore before opening fire. They failing to answer, or answering wrongly, were to be declared enemies. Each signal officer was furnished with the list of signals a week in advance. The signals were of the simplest kind. For Monday, 1142 was flagged from the vessel, and 222 answered from the shore; for Tuesday, 2311 from vessel, answer 143. A red flag with white centre was used in transmitting messages at sea, that color being more plainly seen than any other on the water. A white flag with red centre was used on land, where the back ground was forest, hills or building, and a black flag with white centre was used on a signal station on a house, or the top of a tree where the back ground was the sky.

These explanations are made partly to fill up space, but more to enable the reader to understand how a chain of circumstance connected with signalling, operated very favorably to a part of the crew of the Delaware on this cruise. This expedition occurred just before Maj. Gen. Butler didn't take Fort Fisher, and its object was to steam down the coast to the vicinity of Wilmington, run near the land in the night, and send boats with press gangs on shore to kidnap fishermen or pilots, in order to obtain if possible some information in regard to the torpedoes planted in the channel. The boats that went on shore every night with muffled oars, returned every night unsuccessful.

During the day the Delaware ran down the coast to be out of sight, and one day we discovered on shore off S. Carolina, a large herd of cattle feeding on the marsh. Two boats were immediately lowered and started for fresh beef. I went in the Lieutenant's boat, which made for a point about a mile above the herd; the other boat, under command of the gunner, was ordered to land about a mile below the herd; both boat's crews were then to deploy, surround and carefully approach them from all sides, keeping out of sight, which was easily done in the long sedge or reeds, as fifes charge called, which reached beside to the cattle's back. This order was executed by the sailors to perfection, and when the herd took flight by our near approach and attempted to escape the men arose with a shout and I was surprised to see how completely the cattle were surrounded. There appeared to be no chance for their escape. But the run commenced, when the sailors opened fire, and the gunner, "Deliver me from my friend," would have been very appropriate. Jack Tar seemed wild with excitement; his war whoop was terrific; no pretence was made of taking aim; muskets were discharged without bringing the piece to the shoulder; the bullets buzzed about our ears "right smart."—Tennyson's description of the "charge at Balaklava" seemed to me dwarfed by comparison. But fortunately no one was injured, not even a cow, and when the animals found they could not escape by land, "the whole herd ran violently down a steep place into the sea," and were not choked but swam boldly out to an island half a mile distant. A calf that lagged behind was killed, and one of my flag men wounded a young bull in the water, which was also obtained.

We returned on board with our game. The beef which is termed "reed beef," from its peculiar flavor, being deemed too strong for the stomach of a gunboat officer, was turned over to the sailors. The ward-room officers however managed to worry down a breakfast of fried liver and onions next morning, without producing any ill effects.

"The object of the expedition having been accomplished," which is a military way of speaking of a failure, the Delaware started on her return trip. When opposite Swanborough the masts of two schooners were discovered sticking up above the woods behind the Island. The Captain went into the rigging himself with a glass and after a short examination the steamer was headed towards shore, two quartermasters took their position, one on each side of the vessel and began "heaving the lead" and calling out the soundings. A boat with an officer was sent on ahead to buoy out a channel, and the steamer slowly approached the shore. The boatswain "called away" the crews of the 2nd cutter and the launch, the arm chests were opened and the men began to buckle on the cutlasses. The officers talked about cutting out the cotton schooners, and the men about prize money. The Delaware soon came to anchor and the boats were lowered, muskets were put into them and the men took their places. The Captain himself took command, going in the cutter. The launch, a very large boat containing I should think at least forty men was in charge of the first officer. Mr. Lawrence wanted to see the fun, the Captain consented but objected to Lawrence's plug hat, and loaned him one of his own caps and a uniform coat. Any one who knows how much gold lace the navy department manages to load up their officers, can imagine the fine effect our cutter made with two captains in the stern and a signal officer in the bow.

As we approached Swanborough, not knowing the proper channel, the launch which drew much more water than the cutter, was continually getting aground, and our advance was very slow. As we approached the town it seemed deserted, but examining it through a binocular glass I observed what might be men dodging from behind a building on the wharf to another large storehouse nearer the water. I reported what I had seen to the Captain, but it didn't seem to scare him very badly. We got on very slowly, for the launch seemed to be aground about all the time, though the cutter was continually forging about trying to find deeper water. At last when we got nearly within musket shot of the shore the women seemed to have "accomplished the object of the expedition," she got aground as if she intended to stay. The more they tried to get her off the more she seemed to stick. To add to the unpleasantness of the situation, we were greeted with that high vocal achievement with which Johnny Reb was wont to announce his presence to the Boys in Blue. The men I had seen dodging behind the building now showed themselves, and dragging a howitzer down to the wharf, leisurely proceeded to train it upon the grounded launch. This change of program did not seem to please the Captain, who ordered the men to drop the oars and pick up the muskets. What he was going to do with the muskets I have no idea, without he thought of shooting the crew of the launch and thereby deprive the Johnnies of the pleasure of doing it, for we were not within range of the enemy. If we had been I don't think they would have been in much danger, judging from the marksmanship exhibited in our late bull hunt. The Captain appeared to realize this for he didn't order the men to fire, but exclaimed in language more forcible than polite, "that if they did not blow us all into a place of which some people pretend to doubt even the existence of, they were a set of blasted lubbers."

When the Captain ordered the men to take up the muskets I called to my flagman to show the flag. The signal for that day chanced to be 14324, in signaling all odd numbers are made by waving the flag to the left hand, and all even numbers by waving it to the right, so this signal was made by simply swinging the flag back and forward three times and then a pause. The flagman had made a mistake and brought from the ship a white flag instead of a red one. When the signal was flagged, it seemed to have a strange effect on the shore party. They appeared to suspend their hostile preparations and soon showed a white pocket handkerchief as the sun of a corn stalk. This again changed the situation, Johnny had mistaken the white signal flag and waving motion of the call, for a flag of truce, and by showing a white flag himself had signaled his willingness to communicate with us.

The Captain ordered the men in the launch to get overboard to lighten the boat, and fall back as rapidly as possible, while the cutter slowly advanced to meet the flag of truce, which was coming towards us borne by an officer in a dug-out—a small canoe made by hollowing out the trunk of a tree, and will spit out a Yankee as fast as he can get into it. The officer sat on a board that extended several feet each side of the canoe; his feet as far apart as possible, his knees close together and as high as his breast, his body bent forward, and grasping the cornstalk and handkerchief with both hands, he looked like a toad on a shovel, or as a sailor remarked, like a "land-lubber." The private who sat in the bottom of the canoe and acted as motive power, showed by the way he handled the paddle and managed the boat that he was no novice in canoeing.

When the flags met and the ordinary courtesies had been passed, Capt. Foster, whose imagination was as lively as his courage was unquestioned, addressed the confederate officer as follows:

"Sir, I have been ordered by the U. S. navy department to visit the coast of North Carolina and open communication with the Confederates in regard the officers and crew of the steamer Alice, captured near this place about two weeks ago. I have money for the officers and clothing for the men, and wish to know if it is possible to get it to them."

The Confederate officer said, he knew nothing about the Alice, had never heard of her or any other steamer captured about there by the confederates.

"In that case," says the Captain, "our business ends here, and I have the honor, sir, to wish you good afternoon."

The rebel officer glanced at the arms lying in the boat and the large crew in the launch slowly falling back, and remarked, "is it customary for your government to send a large armed force with a flag of truce?" The Captain replied, "our flags of truce have sometimes been fired on, doubtless by irregular troops, but I always obey my orders, and have opened communication even if I had to fight to do so, and what is more, Major," said he as he observed the ridiculous look on the confederate's face, "the Delaware is in position to shell your town and the officer in charge has orders to open fire on the first demonstration on your part." The rebel made no reply.

Both took off their caps, and we followed slowly after the launch. The troops at Swansborough I think must have been home-guards, for it is hard to believe that old troops would have mistaken a signal flag for a flag of truce, or would have recognized a flag of truce borne by two boats of armed men. However disappointed we might have felt about the prize money we should have received for the schooner, we all agreed that the lucky number and the waving flag had been instrumental in getting us out of what might have been a bad scrape.

That fine Primrose & West's Minstrels, the finest organization of the kind traveling in this country, will appear at the Adrian opera house Friday evening, Dec. 14th. In order to secure them the local management is obliged to guarantee of five hundred dollars. Already nearly 300 reserved seats have been sold in Adrian by subscription for this entertainment at $1 each. For the benefit of Tecumseh people who desire to attend the performance a subscription list will be in charge of Geo. N. Stacy, after Monday, December 10th. Those who people desire to attend will leave their names with Mr. Stacy, together with the number of tickets they desire, good reserved seats will be secured for them. The price of admission to this fine attraction is $1 for reserved seats, and 75 and 50 cents to other parts of the opera house. If a party of twenty five can be organized the night train from Adrian to Tecumseh will be held until the conclusion of the entertainment.

A little incident in the life of Uncle John Sampsel has been of interest to his many friends. On his 80th birthday he was getting shaved at Vet Erskine's barber shop in Tecumseh. Vet and Uncle John made this bargain. He was to get one shave a week at Vet's shop for ten cents a shave until he was 90 years old and after that time Vet was to shave him once a week without charge. The ten years rolled round and Vet was obliged to shave Uncle John several months after he reached his 90th birth day. But with Vet it was a labor of love, and after he sold his shop he paid for Uncle John's shaves for some time at another shop. This arrangement, however, was not congenial to the old gentleman's sense of fairness and so he voluntarily released Vet from his engagement.

The public schools of Adrian commenced last Monday's session on Standard time.

A Few Bank-Note Stories.

On one occasion the Bank of England proved much too accommodating for its own interests. Somewhere about the year 1840 one of its own Directors, a man of wealth and of unimpeachable honor, bought an estate for £30,000, and for convenience sake obtained a note for that amount. On returning home, just as he was about to put it under lock and key, he was called out of the room, and placed the note on the mantel-piece. On coming back, a few minutes later, no note was to be seen. No one had entered the room in his absence, and, after an anxious search, he came to the conclusion that the precious bit of paper had fallen into the fire and been consumed. Hurrying off to Threadneedle Street he told his colleagues what had happened, and they gave him a second note upon his undertaking to restore the lost one if it should come again into his hands, and, in case of its being presented by anybody else, repay the amount to the bank.

Thirty years afterward, when he had long been dead and his estate distributed among his heirs, the supposed non-existent note turned up at the bank counter, where it was presented for payment. All explanation of the circumstances connected with it were lost upon the presentee—the note had come to him from abroad in the course of business, and it must be honored without delay. There being no help for it, he was paid the £30,000. Application was made to the representatives of the defunct Director to refund the money, but they promptly disclaimed their liability, and the bank perforce had to put up with the loss. The story goes that it was discovered (how or when we are not informed) that the builder employed to pull down the dead man's house, preparatory to rearing a new one on the site had found the note in a crevice of the chimney, and kept it and his own counsel until he thought it was safe to reap the reward of his patience and unscrupulousness, and so become a rich man at a stroke.

The executors of Sir Robert Burdett found no less than £270,000 worth of bank notes scattered here and there about his house, some slipped into bundles of old papers, some between the leaves of books, without a memorandum anywhere to appraise them of the existence of such valuables, much less of their whereabouts. A little better advised were the executors of the gentleman who left behind him a scrap of paper marked, "Seven hundred pounds in Till," although they failed to interpret its meaning until they had disposed of all the dead man's belongings. Then one of them recollected that his library had contained a folio edition of Tillotson's Sermons, and wondered if "Till" had any reference to it. The books had been sold to a bookseller, who luckily had not found a customer for them, although he had sent them on approval to a gentleman at Cambridge, who had returned them as not answering his expectations. The executor bought the Tillotson back again, and going carefully through the volume, recovered notes to the amount of $2,500.

The watchman of a factory at New Haven, America, afforded the administrators of his estate no clew whatever as to the hiding-place of the savings of which they believed him to have died possessed. Overhauling his clothes preparatory to selling them by auction, one of them threw an old overcoat aside, when a dirty piece of cloth dropped out of one of the pockets. On examination this was found to be wrapped around a large cartridge-shell within which lay notes of $1,800 value, which, but for a mere chance, might unexpectedly have enriched a purchaser of second-hand clothing.

Some sixty years since a Bank of England £5 note was paid into a Liverpool merchant's office in the ordinary course of business. On holding it up to the light to test its genuineness the cashier saw some faint red marks upon it. Examining them closely, he traced some half-effaced words between the printed lines and upon the margin of the note, written apparently with blood. After a long and minute scrutiny he made out the words: "If this note should fall into the hands of John Dean, of Longhill, near Carlisle, he will learn hereby that his brother is languishing a prisoner in Algiers." The merchant immediately communicated with Mr. Dean, and he lost no time in bringing the matter before the Government. Inquiries were set on foot, and the unfortunate man discovered and ransomed. He had been a slave to the Dey of Algiers for eleven years when the message he had traced with a splinter of wood dipped in his own blood reached the Liverpool counting-house. Liberty, however, came too late; the privations and hardships of the galleys had sapped his strength, and although he was brought home to England, it was but to die.—All the Year Round.

—A curious story comes from Brentford, England. A servant of Dr. Terry was sent out to carry a message. She was short-sighted, and failing to return it was feared she had fallen into the canal. It was dragged, but without success. Several days later an old barge woman suggested that a loaf of bread, in which some quicksilver had been placed, should be floated on the water. This was done and the loaf became stationary at a certain point. The dragging was resumed at this point and the body found. The superstition is said to be centuries old, but no one had seen it tried there for many a year.

—After twenty-two years of exile at Siberia the Russian writer, Tchernischefski, has been allowed to return to his home to "husband out life's taper in its close." The poor man is now sixty years of age, but it is hardly necessary to say that his long years of exile have made him look more like a centenarian than anything else. He is hardly able to walk and scarcely weighs a hundred pounds. Tchernischefski was exiled during the riots of 1862.

—Some girls can't catch on to the fashionable walk. Why, girls, that's easily done, when you know how. Just walk along slow and lazy like; give a little shove to the right and left at each step; act as if you had no elasticity in your step, as if each foot were held back by stiff mud, and the wind was kind of blowing you back at each step; and you have got it.—Newport Journal.

The Bride Who Didn't Die in an Old Chest.

The fair Imogene D'Eustis had been wedded to the knightly Sam Higgins. The clergyman had been handed two dollars in cash to pay for the splicing, the guests were filling themselves up with eatables, and everything was sliding along as smoothly as a cider-mill sailing down on a spring freshet, when all at once the bride was missing.

Her newly-found husband looked under the table, but she was not there.

The guests separated to search. Some looked down the well—others down cellar—others in the hen-coop and smoke-house and behind the pig-pen. No Imogene.

Then some said that she had been abducted, while others scoffed at the idea of a girl weighing 196 pounds and having a scream which could be heard two miles, being carried off in broad daylight.

A detective was called in. He looked at her old shawl, measured the length of her shoes, and decided that it was a mysterious affair. He would take the case if desired, but would not promise any satisfactory solution under a year and a half.

The fair Imogene's father hadn't betrayed much excitement up to this point. The wedding feast was the first square meal he had tackled for six months, and he wanted to fill up before giving way to emotion. He was now full. He turned around upon the excited and distressed guests, commanded them to hush their hullaballo and disappeared up stairs.

When the coy Imogene slipped away from the feast it was to see if her husband would miss and follow her. She slid up stairs, mounted to the garret, and after brushing the cobwebs off her nose she advanced to the big blue chest in the corner. This chest had been made to hold her father's Government bonds and was hooped with iron and provided with a spring lock, which never cost less than a dollar. Her mission was to hide in the chest and see if her husband would be soft enough to climb up there and throw up the lid and call peek-a-boo. As the reader knows, he wasn't the man to catch on.

The old man D'Eustis walked up stairs and made his way to the garret through the same trap-door the bride had used. He thought she might be up there to take a last farewell look at the bunches of catnip, moldy school books and broken spinning-wheels. He could not see her. He called aloud, but the whistle of the tug on the river was the only answer. He turned to go, but something whispered to him that perhaps he might find a plug of tobacco or a bottle of stomach bitters in the old chest. He advanced with beating heart and threw up the lid.

"Why, pop, is this you?" cried the fair Imogene, as she sprang up and ripped her bridal dress clear down the back.

"Yes, this is me!" growled the old man, "and what the jimcracks are you doing here?"

"Hiding from Sam."

"I'm a tarnal mind to box your ears, big as you are! Here you've raised a regular city convention all over the house, spoilt a dress which cost me fourteen dollars with the making, upset your mother, and scart old Mrs. Spigot into a fit!"

"Please, pop, I——"

"You git! Drap yourself through that trap-hole, skip down there and tell the crowd that you don't know beans when the bag's untied."

And the bride got. And her husband was so mad that he burned up a free railroad pass to Chicago, and her mother cried, and her father went off down town to play poker, and taken all in all, the coy bride and the old chest and the spring lock business didn't pay ten cents on the dollar.—Detroit Free Press.

The Pleasure of "Picking Up" Things.

"Why do you practice shoplifting? Surely the profits are seldom large compared to the risk you run."

"Right you are," was the answer. "'Tain't what we get on the 'make' by it, but the 'racket' of it fetches us. Why, sometimes I don't 'flush' birds enough to pay me for my 'go.' Yet it's jolly, and I like it for the excitement. Playing euchre's nowhere to it."

"Where does the pleasure come in?"

"Well, women naturally like shopping. They have fun going about the big stores and looking at things. I like that kind of thing, too, but besides that I get anything I like for nothing, and that's more fun. There is the racket of watching the 'lah-de-dah' clerks and the 'dizzy' floor-walkers. I wait until they are looking another way and calling out 'Cash, cash,' to the hungry little girls and then I slyly slip something I think would look much better in a pawn-shop under my cloak and all's serene."

"Isn't the risk very great?"

"Of course it is. But there's where the pleasure is. There is the same sort of risk in gambling, and I have a passion for it. When I get what I aim for I'm just as happy and contented as a clam in high water. O, it's an immense racket—if you ain't caught," and the shoplifter sank back to think over her probable term of imprisonment.—N. Y. Truth.

Just Too Utterly Too, Too.

A consumptive man, knowing that his life was rapidly drawing to a close, called his wife to him and said:

"Madeline, you know that I am about to die; shall you ever think of me when I am gone?"

"O yes, darling," sobbed his wife. "I never can forget you, and I will ever see that your grave is kept green."

"Yes, my dear, I know you will; but I have one last request."

"What is it, darling?"

"Do not keep it that vulgar, low-down, common green, like Simpson's grave, which is so distasteful to the eye. Keep it a rich, delicate olive green."—Texas Siftings.

—Another writer rises to remark that there are more lawyers and physicians than are needed in this country. Those professions would not be overcrowded if parents did not push sons into them who have not the requisite qualifications necessary for success.—N. Y. Times.

Woman's best friend for relieving the many pains and weaknesses that are incidental to female life, and one that gives rosy cheeks, brightens the eyes, check every unnatural drain and creates a perfect picture of health and beauty, is Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. It purifies the blood strengthens the female system, and removes all feeling of languor, distress, pimples, sores and weakness, producing dreamless slumber and painless regularity of natural functions.

What Common Sense Does.

Common sense is symmetry of mind, character, and of purpose in the individual combined. It represents man in completeness, harmony, and equipoise. It clothes him with dignity, invests him with power, and stamps him with superiority. It is not genius, for that is often erratic; nor cunning, in its sinuous course; nor craft, with its decline into trickery. Common sense is the embodiment of true manhood. It confers a patent of royalty, though birth be plebian, and exalts men from their lowliest spheres to the highest stations. Not by sudden freaks of fortune or a train of adventitious circumstances are they thus dignified; but step by step, through obstacle and hindrance, they overcome by force of character and the proper force of will power. Common sense is a tremendous force in this lower world. Its power is felt and acknowledged through all the ramifications of governments, society, business, finance, science and commerce. In fact it is the history as well as the true philosophy of the ages. It is the salt that has saved humanity from barbarism, and the moving power that has propelled the race onward in its march of progress and civilization.

Many who long suffered from urinary and digestive diseases, causing nervousness, weakness and debility, after trying bitters, kidney medicines, iron medicines, etc., without benefit, have found permanent relief in from one to three bottles of Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla, the only perfect blood purifier and strengthener. Hundreds of letters to the proprietors have testified to its superiority over the many pretended cures so largely advertised by means of bogus certificates that are bought and paid for.

A Rare Talent.

The faculty of drawing out of persons with whom one is conversing the best there is in them—brighter things even than they suppose themselves capable of—is the rare gift with which Nature has endowed some women. George Eliot was a most charming person in conversation, though she was a woman of few words, because of her intuitive insight into the thoughts of others. A few words would put her in possession, not of what they said, but of what they would fain have said, and she would so improve upon it that ordinary people went away charmed with her who had made them for once at least feel themselves to be wise. Long afterward, perhaps, she would call to their remembrance the wise or witty things which they could hardly believe themselves to have said, and which they assuredly never would have said but for her quickening influence.

The fault with most all cough preparations is that they contain morphia, and are absolutely injurious to the stomach and nerves. That simple preparation of wild cherry bark, called Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, contains no morphia and yet will cure a cough or cold in less time than any other compound. It is the only reliable cure for consumption.

Home Politeness.

A boy who is polite to his father and mother is likely to be polite to every one else. A boy lacking politeness to his parents may have the semblance of courtesy in society, but is never truly polite in spirit, and is in danger, as he becomes familiar, of betraying his real want of courtesy. We are all in danger of living too much for the outside world, for the impression which we make in society, coveting the good opinions of those who are in a sense a part of ourselves, and who will continue to sustain and be interested in us, notwithstanding these defects of deportment and character. We say to every boy and to every girl, cultivate the habits of courtesy and propriety at home—in the sitting room and the kitchen, as well as in the parlor—and you will be sure in other places to deport yourself in a becoming and attractive manner. When one has a pleasant smile and a graceful demeanor, it is a satisfaction to know these are not put on, but that they belong to the character, and are manifest at all times and under all circumstances.

If you have failed to receive benefit from other preparations, try Hood's Sarsaparilla; it is the strongest, the purest, the best, the cheapest.

I have found nothing yet which requires more courage and independence to rise even a little, but decidedly above the par of the religious world around us. Surely the way in which we commonly go on is not the way of self-denial and sacrifice and cross-bearing which the New Testament talks of.—Dr. J. W. Alexander.

Grave Robbers.

Of all classes of people the professional grave robbers are the most despised. He robs us of our dear friends for a few dollars. How different is this new grave robber, Dr. Bigelow's Positive Cure, which robs graves of thousands of consumptives. This unequalled remedy for coughs, colds and consumption, whooping cough, croup and all throat and lung diseases, subdues and conquers these troubles speedily, safely and thoroughly. Trial bottles free, of Baker & Hall.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs; none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proved its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1861 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 67 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me.

HORACE FAIRBROTHER."

Roxbingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,

MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."

159 West 126th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."

Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."

Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."

Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

How Watch Cases are Made.

Most persons have an ambition to own a gold watch case, and yet few people know how a watch case is made, or the difference in the quality of them. In a SOLID GOLD WATCH CASE, aside from the necessary thickness for engraving and polishing, a large proportion of the metal is used only to stiffen and hold the engraved portions in place, and supply strength. This surplus is not only needless, but undesirable, because gold is a soft metal and cannot furnish the stiffness, strength and elasticity necessary to make the case permanently strong and close-fitting. The perfect watch case must combine gold with some metal that will supply that in which the gold is deficient. This has been accomplished by the James Boss' Gold Watch Case TRADE MARK which saves the WASTE of needless gold, and INCREASES the SOLIDITY and STRENGTH of the case, and at the same time reduces the cost ONE HALF.

Catarrh

At this season of the year everybody has a cold, and some very bad ones. By frequent exposures the membranes of the nose become very sensitive, and catarrh and influenza are epidemic. Relief may be obtained by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

For many years in succession, beginning so far back I don't remember when, I had the catarrh in my head. It consisted of an excessive flow from my nose.

Ringing and Bursting Noises

in my head. Sometimes the hearing in my left ear was affected. Five years ago, about this season of the year, I began to use Hood's Sarsaparilla. I was helped right away, but I continued to use it until I felt myself cured.—Mrs. Etta H. Campbell, Lowell, Mass.

Jerome Brownell, merchant and extensive miller at Victor, Ontario county, N. Y., writes: "I have used Hood's Sarsaparilla for my catarrh, and it has helped me. I consider Hood's Sarsaparilla one of the best remedies for blood disease to be obtained."

100 Doses One Dollar

"I have been troubled with that distressing complaint, catarrh, and have been using Hood's Sarsaparilla, and find it one of the best remedies I have ever taken. My trouble has lasted ten years, and never could get any relief until I commenced to use Hood's Sarsaparilla.—Martin Shield, Chicago, Ill.

Danger from Catarrh

depends upon the amount and extent of the scrofulous infection. Unquestionably many deaths from consumption can be traced to neglected catarrh. There is a violent distress, prostrated coughing spells, the eyes weep, the nose discharges copiously, and the head seems about to split.

In such cases Hood's Sarsaparilla corrects the catarrh by its direct action in discharging the poison from the blood through nature's great outlets, so that healthy, sound blood reaches the membranes and is wholesome.

This porous plaster is absolutely the best ever made, combining the virtues of hops with gums, balsams and extracts. Its power is wonderful in curing diseases where other plasters simply relieve. The Fashions.

Paris affects English fashions at the moment.

Blouse effects on tight waists remain in favor.

Steel soutache appears among metalic braids.

Steel soutache on gray velvet is considered very chic.

Silk costumes are relegated to house and carriage wear.

Russian green combines with black, gray or deep red.

Silk flounces are vandyked, scalloped, and sometimes pinked.

Basques, as a rule, are short and are pointed, both back and front.

The shape Fedora is given to a very handsome new long pelisse.

Black stockings remain the first favorites of fashionable women.

Balmoral skirts are wider, but the yoke about the hips is invariable.

The silks, satins and brocades of this season are dazzlingly beautiful.

It is again fashionable to wear a fancy pin in the bonnet bow under the chin.

The Parisian costume of pigeon gray is trimmed with the plumage of the blue jay.

Of all the forms of the feminine waistcoat that of fur bids fair to be most popular.

Velveteen is an exploded name; all velvet pile stuffs take the general name of velvet.

The sabot sleeve, full its whole length, and so popular in England, is gaining favor here.

Colored flannel skirts edged with woolen lace are preferred to white ones or balmorals.

Parisian dressmakers discard all sleeves except the close coat sleeve for street costumes.

Waistcoats of all kinds, superimposed on the bodice or corsage, grow more and more popular.

Tucks are used to excess by some dressmakers, even velvet flounces being trimmed with two or three tucks.

All, or nearly all, basques have waistcoats. These are of soft silk or satin on heavy cloth and velvet costumes.

Some of the new greens combine beautifully with other colors, and are becoming alike to the dark and the fair.

Velvet flounces have deep hems, which are so heavily stitched as to be plainly visible even when the flounces are thickly plaited.

Velvet dresses are full, but in the more elegant costumes they are made so by extra breadths of the material, and not by flounces.

Imported cloth suits are elaborately made of several contrasting materials, such as cloth and velvet, cloth and satin, or Sicilienne.

Flat gold braid, put on in embroidery or in rows, forms the decorative effect on many handsome tailor-made cloth and velvet dresses.—Albany Argus.

The Beauty Which Survives.

There is no denying the power of beauty, and the person who is insensible to its charm is either an idiot or deficient in the higher mental qualities of a well-balanced mind. A beautiful face—who has not one treasured away in the storehouse of memory? Such a face may live in the actual realities of the present, or among the dreams of the past, a pale phantom called up now and then in the thinking, reflective moments of life. Yes, every man and woman have their ideals of beauty, or have had them. Beautiful faces and beautiful forms have led men to make all sacrifices. To win them they have dared death at the cannon's mouth, have sought for wealth in the dens and caves of earth and sea, and have essayed to become heroes in a thousand ways. Beauty, to the eyes of many men, is the most potent of all talismen. It lures and attracts when all other charms are lost sight of. There is a magic in the brilliant eye, a rapture about the vermillion cheek, a captivation in golden or auburn or raven ringlets, which to the superficial gaze of wife-hunters outshine the hidden glories of mind or soul. Many a man has risked his happiness for life on the fair features of a lovely woman, and many have realized when too late that nature has bestowed other gifts which are even more essential to happiness than the mere glare of personal charms. For after all that can be said of beauty in its myriad forms, man realizes its intensest glow in the face of woman. The beauties of art may charm for the moment, but for continual and lasting solace man turns to woman. Woman well understands the secret of her power, and courts beauty, if it comes not naturally, by a thousand little devices known to the sex. She would rather have been born beautiful than rich, since to man beauty has more attraction than money. However, as all women are not blessed with beauty, does not nature offer them compensation for its loss? Is there not a beauty of mind and heart which will survive the withered rose on the cheek, the lustre of the eye or the symmetry and grace of mere physical attraction? It may be true that many beautiful women do combine the higher graces of mind and soul, but not always. The beauty of the human countenance fades away with a few years of strife and trouble, but mental and spiritual beauties live on to the end. While many a man has led a miserable life by coveting and winning a beautiful face, it is rarely, if ever, the case that the matrimonial existence is embittered by highly developed intellectual and heart graces. The woman who has the beauty of mind and heart as her portion need not envy the more attractive of her sisters who have nothing else to recommend them to masculine favor except mere charms of person. She may not find so many admirers, but they are apt to be of a better and more appreciative class. There is a beauty which may be acquired. The mind may be polished and the heart trained to high and holy thoughts and purposes. And the polish of mind and soul will make even a homely face seem attractive to those who can distinguish between external and internal charms. So nature is just in its compensations, for while beauty of person may be denied to some, they may possess the higher and more durable attractiveness of a mental and spiritual sort.—Columbus Sun.

Fourteen Wonders of the World.

The seven wonders of the world, in ancient times, were the pyramids of Egypt, the Pharos of Alexandria, the walls and hanging gardens of Babylon, the temple of Diana, the statue of the Olympic Jupiter, the Mausoleum of Artemesia, and the Colossus of Rhodes.

The seven wonders of the world in modern times are the printing press, the steam engine, the telegraph, the daguerreotype, the telephone, the phonograph, and the electric light.

The so-called "Seven Wonders" of the ancients were mere trifles compared with those of the present time. The Brooklyn bridge, for example, would make the hanging gardens of Babylon a mere toy, while the whole seven wonders put together would sink into insignificance could the builders have seen a lightning express train at full speed.

Ruin Wrought in the Forest.

How depressing it is to see acres of trees cut down in the midst of a noble forest. How saddening it is also to see that thin spot in the midst of your otherwise abundant hair. Stop it at once by the use of Parker's Hair Balsam. For actual efficiency this famous article stands at the head of its class. Elegant for the toilet, delicious in odor, and restores the original color to gray or faded hair. Economical, as a slight occasional application keeps the hair and scalp in perfect order.

Long visits, long stories, long essays, long exhortations, and long prayers, seldom profit those who have to do with them. Life is short. Time is short. Moments are precious. Learn to condense, abridge, and intensify. We can bear things that are dull if they are only short. We can endure many an ache and ill if it is over soon, while even pleasures grow insipid, and pain intolerable, if they be protracted beyond the limits of reason and convenience. Learn to be short. Lop off branches; stick to the main facts in your case. If you pray, ask for what you would receive, and get through; if you speak, tell your message and hold your peace; boil down two words into one, and three into two. Always learn to be short.

If you are a frequenter or a resident of a miasmatic district, barricade your system against the scourge of all new countries—ague, billious and intermittent fevers—by the use of Hop Bitters.

Ludington, Mich., Feb. 2, 1880.
I have sold Hop Bitters for 4 years and there is no medicine that surpasses them for billious attacks, kidney complaints and many diseases incident to this malarial climate.
H. T. ALEXANDER.

Without waiting for the smoke to clear away, Stanton rushed forward and found the savage just gasping in his death struggle, while little Annie lay screaming by his side. He soon pacified the child, who he found was uninjured. Then he reloaded his rifle and made a hasty examination of the fallen Indian. The settler did not recognize him, but from his dress and ornaments he judged he was a warrior of some note.

Leaving him where he had fallen, Stanton took his child in his arms and wended his way homeward. It was quite dusk when he reached there, and he found his wife waiting for him nearly crazed with grief. The mother's strength returned when she saw her child, and after the congratulations of the hour, Mrs. Stanton told her story.

MEDICAL ADVICE.

Take the open air, the more you take the better:
Follow nature's laws to the very letter:
Let the physic go to the bay of Biscay:
Let alone the gin, the brandy and the whisky.

Freely exercise, keep your spirits cheerful:
Let no dreams of sickness make you ever fearful.
Eat the simplest food, drink the pure cold water:
Then you will be well, or at least you ought to.

It is beyond question that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has done and is doing vast good, and is worthy of the place of honor it holds at the head of all remedies for diseases of the throat and lungs.

Useful Recipes.

Rye Breakfast Cakes.—Two cups of rye meal, one-half cup of sweet milk, one teaspoonful of soda, and a little salt. Bake at once in gem pans.

Lemon Butter for Tarts.—Lemon butter is excellent for tarts. It is made as follows: One pound pulverized white sugar, whites of six eggs and yolks of two, three lemons, including grated rind and the juice. Cook twenty minutes over a slow fire, stirring all the while.

Parsley Sauce.—Wash a bunch of parsley in cold water, then boil it for six or seven minutes in salt and water; drain it, cut the leaves from the stalk and chop them fine. Have ready some melted butter and stir in the parsley; allow two small tablespoonfuls of leaves to one-half pint of butter. Serve with fish and with boiled fowls.

Baked Apple Pudding.—Six apples well stewed, quarter of a pound of butter, half of it stirred into the apples while hot; add sugar to taste; when cold add six eggs well beaten to the apples. Pound and sift six crackers, butter your dish and put in a layer of cracker and a layer of the prepared apple, and thus until you have filled your dish; let the cracker be the upper layer and put the remainder of your butter in small bits upon it. Bake half an hour.

Sauce Tartare.—Mix the following ingredients with a pint of good mayonnaise, and keep the sauce cool until wanted for use: One teaspoonful of chopped shallot or white onion, one tablespoonful each of finely chopped capers, parsley, and pickled gherkins; in the spring and summer add one tablespoonful of chopped green tarragon; in the winter substitute the sprig of tarragon which is always placed in the bottles containing capers, and which, of course, must be finely chopped.

Beef a la Mode.—Take ten or twelve pounds of beef, (rump,) and lard the meat through with ten long pieces of fat bacon; then put it into a long earthen pan with a calf's foot, four onions, two carrots, (if large cut in slices,) a bunch of parsley, two bay leaves, two sprigs of thyme, two cloves stuck into one of the onions, half a teaspoonful of pepper, one of salt, four wine-glasses of sherry, four wine-glasses of water, and a pound of steaked bacon cut in squares; put a cover over the pan, and make it air-tight with a paste of flour and water around the edges; place it in a moderate oven for four hours; then take it out of the pan and dress it upon a dish with vegetables; pass the gravy through a hair sieve and pour it over the meat and serve. This dish is the best eaten cold, when it should not be taken from the pan, or the pan opened until nearly so.

How to Beautify a Home.

Almost everybody knows what a relief to the eyes a little spray of green is in winter. The wealthy can indulge in expensive conservatories, but those of moderate circumstances, even the very poor, can secure a pretty object at a small expense by following the directions. To begin with, an acorn, which any urchin can procure in the woods, and a pickle jar, which any housekeeper can supply. Procure a fine healthy acorn and crochet around it a little network rest. Take off the cup first and tie a loop of the cotton to hang the acorn point downward in the glass. The glass must have so much water in it that the tip of the acorn scarcely touches; keep it in a dark closet until it has sprouted, and then put it in the light. A chestnut the same way. A sweet potato will grow luxuriantly, and may be trained around walls and picture frames. A carrot grown in sand is, if well managed, a highly ornamental object. A good and healthy root must be selected, cut off quite evenly the top of the carrot, and place it on top of a jar full of sand, so that the leaves look as if they spring from it. Moisten it well and keep it in the dark until it has begun to sprout, be careful to keep it damp, and move it into the light directly the leaves appear. If the cultivation is successful, an ornament pretty enough for any room will be the result, and which will have to the unacquainted the appearance of a pot of ferns. Another experiment may be made with a turnip, which must be as sound as possible. Clean the outside, taking care not to injure the part from whence the leaves spring. Cut a piece of the bottom and scoop out the inside, so that you have a hollow cap; fasten string or wire to it, so that it can be hung up. Fill the cavity and keep it filled with water. In a short time the leaves will begin to sprout, and will curl up around the ball of the turnip, forming a pretty little hanging basket. Children can be made to interest themselves in such experiments, which will be found an easy method of inculating taste and refinement; besides, each and all point out their own botanical lesson, and much is to be learned by careful and patient observation and experiment.

Shoulder of Veal Baked.

Buy a shoulder of veal, which, according to the locality of your butcher, will cost you from eight to fourteen cents a pound. And let us say just here, that on account of the quantities of immature veal thrown on the market, you had better be sure of your butcher and pay fourteen cents than to buy a suspicious article for eight. Untrimmed it will weigh seven or eight pounds. Have every bit of bone taken out and put them aside for stock. Make a pint bowl full of dressing, flavoring according to taste, but not strongly with any one condiment. Insert this in the pocket made by the butcher. Dot it all over with pieces of butter as large as a hickory nut. About two ounces will be sufficient, and season with pepper and salt. Bits of very nice dripping may be placed in the four corners of the pan. Dredge thoroughly with flour, and place in a good oven. Baste occasionally with the gravy made by the butter, but add no water until the meat is well browned. This will be from half to three quarters of an hour, when you may add a large cupful of boiling water. Baste every fifteen minutes until done. It will require about two hours. Carve down straight through the middle and cut to both ends; serve with spinach. This is a most economical and delicious dish. What is left may be sliced and heated in the sauce, or minced and used for a salad.

What Dyspepsia Does.

It causes grievous pains by day and frightful dreams by night.
It destroys the pleasure of a good dinner.
It sours the disposition and makes its victim cross and petulant.
It makes the breath bad, the eyes leaden, and the skin sallow.
It makes the appetite capricious and unreasonable.
It causes constant grumbling and complaining.

What "Brown's Iron Bitters" Does.

It invigorates the weakened stomach, and enables it to digest.
It promotes the enjoyment of a hearty meal.
It enriches the blood, improves the liver, and cheers the mind.
It purifies the breath, clears the eyesight, and makes the skin natural.
It brings a regular and healthy desire for food at proper times.

Franklin as a Writer

His pen was as ready as his purse in the service of all human kindness." And what a pen it was! It could discourse metaphysics so clearly and lucidly as to make them seem plain moralizing. It could tear a sophism to pieces by a mere query. It could make a simple tale read like a subtile argument. He could be grave and he could be gay in a breath. He could spend as much wit and humor on a "Craven Street Gazette"—which was meant only to amuse an old landlady, away from home, and probably out of joint before her return from Rochester—as on a State paper designed to fire America and sting England. In another tone, he translates into human language, for the amusement of a court, lady, the reflections, in the garden of her house, of a gray-headed philosopher, full seven hundred on the vanity of all things. His "Position of the Left Hand," might have been composed by Addison. In it, the left hand bewails the partiality which educates the right hand exclusively, those of Franklin's fables and tales have been so absorbed into the thought of the world that their source is absolutely forgotten. Only in this way can we account for what was doubtless an unconscious plagiarism by an eminent sanitary authority, last year, of Franklin's "Economical project for Diminishing the cost of Light." The economy consisted simply in rising at six o'clock instead of nine or ten. Ideas such as Franklin's never become superannuated. Not every one who uses the expression, "to pay dear for one's whistle," knows that the dear whistle was a purchase made by Franklin, when seven years old, with a pocketful of pence. Franklin's store was too abundant for him to mind, though some of his fame went astray. "You know," he tells his daughter, "everything makes one recollect some story." But it was not recollection so much as fancy. His fancy clothed every idea in circumstances. When the illustration had served its turn, he was indifferent what became of it. Franklin did injustice to himself when he fancied he wanted any such mechanical aid. His English had been learned from the "Pilgrim's Progress," and the "Spectator." It had the force of Bunyan without his ruggedness. It had the serene light of Addison with tenfold his raciness and vigor. It sparkled with sarcasms as cutting as Voltaire's, but all sweetened with humanity. Many of his inventions or adaptions—such as "colonize"—have been stamped, long since, as current English. But he did not covet the fame of an inventor, whether in language, in morals, or in politics. In language, he was even declared a foe to innovation. Writing to Noah Webster, in 1789, he protests against the new verbs "notice," "advocate," and "progress." He had as little ambition to be classic as to be an innovator in English. He wrote because he had something at the moment to say, with a view to procuring that something should at the moment be done.—Edinburgh Review.

How they Meet and Part.

A gentleman lately took down verbatim the conversation of two fashionable ladies during a morning call—viz: "How do you do, dear?" "Pretty well, thank you." (They kiss.) "How have you been this age?" "Pretty well. How have you been?" "Very well, thank you." "Pleasant to-day." "Yes, very bright, but had a shower yesterday." "All your family quite well?" "Quite well, thanks. How is yours?" "Oh, very well, thank you." "Have you seen Mary B. lately?" "No, but I have seen Susan C." "You don't say so! Is she quite well?" "Yes, very well, I believe." (Rising.) "Must you go?" "Yes, indeed. I have seven calls to make." "Do call again soon." "Thank you, but you don't come near me once in a year." "Oh, you shouldn't say so, dear; I'm sure I'm very good." "Good bye." "Good bye, dear." Exchange.

"Dale Forest" gives the following pat reply to the above:

"Yes! and after writing that the gentleman discovered the strain upon his mental faculties had been so severe, he went out to 'bruce up.' Just as he reached his destination, met a friend from out of town, when the following conversation was overheard and taken down by the writer, as an example for women, of men's "wit and humor." "Hello! old fellow, how are you?" "Just tight. How are you?" "Just tight." "When did you get in?" "Just now." "Have something?" (significantly.) "Yes, don't care if I do." They step into a saloon, after cautiously looking around to make sure no outsiders are about, as they are breaking their pledge. As they emerge, innocently wiping their mouths, before putting into them the lighted cigars, and being "primed," they shake. "How's yer folks?" "All well; how's yours?" "All flourishing—now; the good boy had diphtheria, but all right now. Crops good up your way?" "Well, pretty fair." "How do politics look?" "Why, we had all drained up our big democratic majority." "Takes out watch. "Thunder! ten minutes to 12. I'm off; got to see a man at 2." "Can't you come up to the house and take dinner?" "No, guess not to-day; got several pressing business engagements." "Good-bye." They again shake hands, and then [illegible] and another hour.

Canning Fruit.

In canning fruit it is wise to use a good deal of sugar. Plain canned fruit is apt to turn, and does not retain its flavor as when made a little rich. If our housekeepers would take as much pains in making preserves as the French do, they would find themselves amply rewarded when, in the winter, they turn out the beautiful clear fruit, always in perfect shape. To preserve fruit in the French method it is necessary to make a clear syrup first, which can be done by melting two pounds of the best sugar with a pint of water, using a white porcelain kettle; add the slightly beaten white of one egg before the syrup becomes hot; let it boil, and skim it until the scum ceases to appear. Then put in carefully selected fruit, a few at a time, watching carefully that they do not break, and removing one at a time as soon as they become soft. When these are put in glass jars and the syrup poured over them, the result will make glad the most stoical cook.

It is said, by a well-known Illinois educator that "The average western farmer toils hard early and late, often depriving himself of needed rest and sleep—for what? To raise corn. For what? To feed hogs. For what? To get money with which to buy more land. For what? To raise more corn. For what? To feed more hogs. For what? To buy more land. And what does he want with more land? Why he wishes to raise more corn—to feed more hogs—to buy more land—to raise more corn—to feed more hogs—and in this circle he moves until the Almighty stops his hoggish proceedings.

The Art of Advertising.

The time has come when a knowledge of this art is an essential part of the education of every business man. To be successful in business they should understand how to advertise. It is only necessary, in order to illustrate the truth of this statement, to call attention to the most successful merchants and manufacturers of any large city, or small village, in the United States. They know just what to say to the public, when to say it, how to say it, and the medium to employ in saying it. They have made the same careful study of this as of any other branch of their business. They don't insert a single meagerly little 'ad' in an obscure corner of some paper, out of favor to the publisher, to support a party organ, and then endeavor to make the proprietor of the paper sensible of the value of their patronage, by growling when asked to pay for the advertisement, and saying that it never did them any good, but was just put in out of charity. They are not content with an old stale advertisement that repeats the same old story at all seasons of the year, offering the same bargains, and the same full supply of goods "just received" at all times of the year—when their stocks have run so low that they are scarcely able to fill the orders of a single customer, as when their houses are filled with the most seasonable and attractive commodities. They never allow the public to remain in ignorance of the fact that they have a good thing to sell. They know how to make their constant appeals in a manner that will prove attractive. They are always devising new and striking methods for presenting their wares to the public notice, by the use of printer's ink. They are always careful to advertise what they have—not what they had last Winter, nor what some one else has now. They advertise honestly as well as liberally, and their customers learn to believe the promises publicly made through the newspapers. Their advertisements are studied with interest by every one who expects to become a purchaser. It is as important that a man about to engage in mercantile pursuits should know how to advertise, as to know how to buy judiciously, or to sell at a living profit.

Does Farming Pay?

An impression somewhat general seems to prevail that farming is not as profitable as other vocations; that more money can be earned in almost any other vocation with less labor; hence the farmer's son abandons the farm, where he is a success, for the uncertain gains of town.

This impression, it seems to me, is very far from the truth. Take the farmers in any state in the West; most of them commenced life poor; if they have strictly adhered to legitimate farming and avoided speculation, in most cases they are well situated, and are far more comfortable than an equal number of associates who chose the town. Facts sustain us in the assertion that out of one hundred young men who leave the country for the town or city no more than one becomes wealthy; perhaps one-tenth obtained a competency, and nine-tenths barely make a living. Out of one hundred young men who remain on the farm, possibly not one becomes wealthy, but more than fifty per cent have substantial possessions and good homes, while most of the remainder make a good living for their respectable families. The point impressed is that average young men are more likely to succeed on the farm than in the town, although they may not actually make more money. One thing that has allured many from the farm is society, and schools may be added. In these particulars a marked difference can be observed within a few years to the credit of the country. Farm houses and surroundings are more beautiful; the sons are more intelligent and the daughters are accomplished in the elegant as well as the useful; society in the country is no longer crude, it lacks some of the graces of society, this is more than compensated by solid respectable goods and an honest welcome, characteristic of a high bred people. The turning point has undoubtedly been passed and the future great men of our nation will be farmers.—Knapp.

Visiting—Hired Girls.

Once on a time I was to spend the afternoon with a neighbor friend, and my visit turned out nothing but apologies, with now and then something said between. She said she had put off baking, on account of some sewing she wanted to finish, and thought she would bake in the afternoon. She had to chase the hens and search the barn to get some eggs to bake a cake, as the day before she had sent all she had to market. And then all her wood was outdoors in the rain and snow, and was slow to burn; consequently the cake got sad before it was baked. Her knives and forks she had laid aside in the morning; they then had to be scoured, and then, as soon as it got a little dark, she thought of her lamp, which had to take its share, etc. But, farmer sisters, let me say that if ever I am dead in such a fix, I will make the best of it, and let visitors eat the same as I do, and try to visit one-half the time any way. I think the better way is to do all necessary work in the morning, and let sewing go until afternoon, as nine-tenths of the visiting people would rather have their chat, and partake of a cup of good hot coffee, and plain bread and butter, than to have nick-nacks.

I always have thought that housewives needed help just as much as the men, and think so yet. Let a man get in a hurry and his first thought is, hire a man to help him out, and it is all right. And how many are the times that his worked-down wife is hurried and worried and no help ever thought of for her; and if she should speak of hiring a girl at two dollars or one and a half a week, the man will say, "This girl business counts up like Sam Hill." All this time he keeps his men week in and week out, costing him from five to six dollars a week, and only works from sun to sun, while a girl works from sun until sen at night.—Genesee Rebel.

I remarked to an old farmer back in the country, whom I had not seen for several years, and whose farm, in the meantime, had improved wonderfully, that his place was so changed I hardly knew it. "Yes," said he, "I've been fixin' up a little. The old woman pestered me to death about the garden, and so I slicked it up a little, and fixed about the house, and it looked so nice I went at the farm fences and the brush, and saved more manure, and kept killing the weeds, and the crops got better, and so I kept going on, and things do look pretty good now. Wife takes a paper, and I take one, and I get time to read it too, and I used to think that I hadn't time for anything." And so he ran on, seemingly much pleased with what he had done, and his life and his home without doubt the happier for it. Examples of a like kind may be found all over the country.

We Mean What We Say.

A Kanaka Kills a Shark in a Hand-to-Mouth Encounter.

Every soul on board crowded to the side to witness the duel. It was bound to be war to the death. One or both of the combatants must die. The brute was what is known as a right shark, and was about thirteen feet long. His black and shining back, set with sharp fins, made me shudder and grow deathly sick.

Ubukia met the first rush of the monster by darting aside and letting the huge hulk go by him. He made a lunge with his sword at the rail as it whisked past, and a thin line of blood on the clear water told that his aim had been a good one. While the shark was mens he swam with half his body out of the water, taking good care that his legs were never much below the surface, but when it were in he dropped to the neck and looked up at us with a grin on his coffee-colored face.

"Me kill um!" he shouted.

The next rush was similar to the first, but this time, when the white belly showed itself, Ubukia was beside it. We saw the point of his sword-blade enter its right eye, and then the native dived, coming up thirty yards away.

I began to breathe easier now. The fellow carried himself in the water with as much ease as the fish itself, and his sword gave him an advantage, while the shark's inability to use its jaws without turning over was another point in his favor.

The fish seemed to be fairly maddened by the last wound, and we could see its dorsal fin ripping through the water for a second, and then it went down out of sight, leaving nothing but the Kanaka visible on the wide stretch of water. If the sight of the monster was horrible, how much worse was its disappearance. We did not know now upon what side of the devoted swimmer it would come up and we held our breath, waiting as one waits when a diver has been under water for a long time and every minute seems an hour.

The grin had left the native's face and he kept whirling about like a tee-to-tum, ready to meet the attack at any point.

After the lapse of a few minutes the familiar fin came into sight again, and Ubukia's body rested with his eyes on the enemy. There was no rushing on the shark's part now. It advanced slowly, ready to swerve with the slightest motion of the native. It seemed determined to approach him so slowly that its momentum could not possibly carry it past him. He waited until its muzzle was not ten feet from him, and then, assuming the aggressive, he darted forward, buried his blade to the hilt in its eye, and then swam leisurly to the ship.

For ten minutes the water within a radius of many yards was lashed into a white foam by the dying struggles of the monster. At times he would throw himself completely out of water, showing us the whole of his round, tapering body and ugly mouth. Finally, however, he rested belly upward without a motion, and Ubukia's face glistened with pride.

"Good," said he, climbing into his canoe; "me kill um."—Cor. Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Romantic Story Told by Louis Kossuth.

The Vienna German Zeitung has published a letter from Kossuth, addressed to Dr. Cotuos, about his brilliant defense of the Jews in the Tizla Eszlar affair. After congratulating the advocate, the old dictator related an incident that happened some thirty years ago in the Neutrar-Comitat.

"An individual named Bardos Saudos, who hated the Jews," writes Kossuth, "had become enamored of a beautiful young Jewess called Julia Weiss. He desired to convert her and then take her into his service.

"Julia Weiss repulsed the man and would listen to nothing he said. Some time later Julia Berees, a young Christian girl, one of Julia Weiss' best friends, disappeared. The Jewess was inconsolable. Saudos had her brought before him, and violently apostrophizing her, demanded to know the whereabouts of Julia Berees.

"'How should I know?' replied the Jewess.

"'Where have you taken her?'

"'I?' said Julia, astonished.

"'Yes, you. And since you dare not avow it, I'll tell you. Julia Berees is lying yonder by the stone bridge, dead. 'Twas you who struck her to death with a poniard!'

"'O! She was my intimate friend!'

"'Be silent. A Christian cannot be friends with a Jew, and to follow the closer the prescriptions of your Talmud you have washed your hands in the blood of a Christian, thinking thereby to become still more beautiful.'

"In vain the poor girl pleaded that she knew nothing of the Talmud, or scarcely how to read or write. She was thrown into prison, passed before the Assizes, and was condemned to death. By reason of her youth her punishment was commuted to hard labor for life.

"Two years had passed, and the poor girl could not comprehend why she was so tortured. One day she was taken before the directrice of the prison, who received her with great kindness and the startling intelligence that she was to be immediately set free. At the same time she was presented with a purse of twenty-five ducats as a gift from the Emperor.

"At the prison gate Julia Weiss embraced her family, who were awaiting her there. 'Twas then they told her that three weeks previously her persecutor, Bartos Saudos, had been found dead, and that in his pocket was discovered a written confession, in which he acknowledged having killed Julia Berees and having falsely accused the young Jewess. He proclaimed Julia Weiss' innocence, and begged her to pray for him. He also left his fortune in legacy to her. Julia Weiss refused that fortune.

"From the lips of the young girl herself," continues Kossuth, "I heard this story."

—Denver, Col., contains more Chinese women than any other American city outside of California. They appear on the street clad in wide, loose trousers, gayly bedecked in gaudy colors, and always carrying an immense red or silk handkerchief in one hand and a parasol in the other.—Chicago Journal.

Then and Now.

Looking over some old papers in the pension office the other day, the difference between the old-time and present methods of granting aid to soldiers became very noticeable. Now, almost any old soldier easily obtains relief, then it was a matter involving the clearest proofs. In some cases even abject poverty seemed necessary before Government interposed to give relief. One case, from the long correspondence and interesting character of the claimant, is a sample of many. The papers are very voluminous. They begin in 1819, when Colonel Paul Dudley Sargent, of Sullivan, Maine, asked for a pension. His memorial showed that in 1772 he lived in Gloucester, Mass., where he organized a body of minute-men. From his forwardness in the independent cause he was blacklisted and compelled to flee to Amherst, N. H. Here he organized a regiment of militia, and so ready was he that, before daylight on April 19, 1775, he was on his way to Concord with his command, which afterwards became a part of Washington's army, and was the first body of troops to enter Boston after the evacuation the next March. Here he fitted out the first privateer of the Revolution. It carried nine guns and took several prizes, with the proceeds of which Sargent paid his troops out of his own pocket. In June he marched to New York, was in all the battles there, so that his regiment was reduced from 727 men to 197. He took part in the battle of Trenton, and soon after resigned his commission for ill-health, but kept on fitting out privateers, of which he sent forty-seven sail to sea. In later years his property was lost by misfortunes, and at the time spoken of he was reduced to poverty, living upon the scant proceeds of a ferry at Sullivan, the sole use of which had been granted him by vote of the county. The pension was granted at first, but soon taken away, on the score that he was rich. He made an indignant protest, and filed an inventory at the War Department, by which it appeared that he was worth $1,270, every little item of household furniture appearing scrupulously in the schedule. The pension was refused, although ample testimony was shown that the old veteran, now seventy-six years old, owed about $2,000. In 1828 he made another effort. His ferry had been superseded by a bridge, his occupation was gone, and the schedules annexed to his inventory showed that the scanty property had diminished to $255, of which $200 represented the tumble-down house in which he lived, with his wife, three maiden daughters and a grand-daughter. His letter to John C. Calhoun, then Secretary of War, was most pathetic, and reinforced by the testimony of judges of various courts to his deserving condition, and of creditors to debts ten times the value of his home. Still nothing was done. The handwriting of the correspondence showed the growing infirmities of Colonel Sargent, who in 1826 sent again in trembling characters "the third and last schedule to be made by Paul Dudley Sargent, a colonel in the Revolutionary War. I have not any property nor any income whatever. The fact is I have been living for four years on charity and the sale of my furniture, which is now entirely gone." At last convinced that he was not too rich to be pensioned at the age of eighty-one years, and after he had waited in bitter distress so long, the officials granted him $20 a month, but too late to be of much good, for he died soon after. That is the record of the pension given so grudgingly, and withheld illegally from the man who led the first New Hampshire troops to Concord, fitted out the first privateer, and gave all his private means without stint to the cause of independence. It is in striking contrast to the prodigal bounty now shown in dealing with the yet young survivors of the late war.—Washington Cor. Boston Advertiser.

About People Who Use Tobacco.

A tobacconist furnishes the following as the result of observation of his customers: An even-tempered, quiet man never goes to an extreme in choosing a tobacco; a nervous man wants something strong and furious; a mild man something that smokes and nothing more. There is a great deal in the way men handle their cigars. If a man smokes his cigar only enough to keep it lighted, and relishes taking it from between his lips to cast a curl of blue smoke into the air, set him down as easy-going. He has keen perceptions and delicate sensibilities. He will not create trouble, but is apt to see it out when it is once begun. Beware of the man who never releases the cigar from the grip of his teeth, and is indifferent whether it burns or dies. He is cool, calculating, and exacting. He is seldom energetic physically, but lives easily off of those who perform the labor. A man who smokes a bit, rests a bit, and fumbles the cigar more or less is apt to be easily affected by circumstances. If the cigar goes out frequently the man has a whole-souled disposition, is a devil-may-care sort of fellow, with a lively brain and a glib tongue, and generally a fine fund of anecdotes. To hold half the cigar in the mouth and smoke indifferently is a lazy man's habit. They are generally of little force, and their characters are not of the highest strata. A nervous man, or one under exciting influences, fumbles his cigar a great deal. He is a kind of popinjay among men. Holding the cigar constantly between the teeth, chewing it occasionally, and not caring whether or not it has been lighted at all, are characteristics of men with the tenacity of bulldogs. They never forget anything, and never release a hold. The fop stands his cigar on end, and an inexperienced smoker either points it straight ahead or almost at right angles with his course.—Pall Mall Gazette.

—After having played a bar or two of "Midsummer Night's Dream" at a concert in Memphis recently, Herr Sternberg suddenly ceased, looked up at the gallery, then made a little bow to the audience, and declared that he could not play while peanuts were being cracked and that the gentlemen so engaged must cease or he must ask to be excused. There was a dead silence and Mr. Sternberg resumed. As the Appeal reporter critically remarks—the peanut has no soul for music.

VOL. XXXIV.--NO. 27 TECUMSEH, MICHIGAN, THURSDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 6, 1883. WHOLE NO. 172

BROOKLYN BOSH

Tiled hearths, backed by large fireplaces, and furnished with brass andirons, shovel, tongs and bellows, were conspicuous as useless conforming accessories, and called forth many regrets from those once familiar with wide chimes. One old lady stood long and reverently before the beguiling ovens framed by narrow shelf and shining candlesticks. The unknown circle of mirror above it reflected not the room, but there was such a far-away look in her dim eyes she could but fancy she saw the pictures in the fire on her father's hearth. She certainly did not notice the [illegible] and pale face framed in a black satin [illegible] that lay in the heart of the crystal. It was a fitting center piece for [illegible] all the landscapes, flowers and sketches of beauty displayed there. [illegible] looked so pretty or genuine as the one so near the threshold.

Cupboards with crumbling [illegible] holding china bottles in [illegible] had done duty in the days of salon [illegible], and chairs that supported tired heroes are there, as well as some swaddles of tapestry wrought with fine silk that made a gorgeous wall for a home two hundred years ago. The embroidery must have been the work of years, and whoever imitated the silken leaves had as much genuine love of beauty as she who stitched the cloth of gold.

Queen Elizabeth's apron is an interesting relic, for it has been worn by one who has plaited happiness and heartbreaks for many thousands of periods, but the woman, who beguiles loveliness by stitching her thoughts into beautiful scenes for her own blackened walls, instead of making shadows for other people's, is a much nicer neighbor.

Among aids to civilization were swords of departed generals, an old blunderbuss and a piece of shot from Sebastopol. Warlike implements of Indian make are numerous, and a couple of water jugs unearthed from Peruvian graves both seem as much service as all the rest, having ministered to the living and the dead.

Coins stamped several hundred years before Christ, with idols, vases, jugs, especially jugs, form a large part of the antiquarial collection. At first I was inclined to believe the immortalized Little Brown Jug was there too, but they have a fashion of duplicating such pottery, so it is possible this is not as old as it looks. Judging from appearances only B. C. is the correct monogram.

Scattered here and there are statues of gleaming white marble. It is difficult to believe, before finishing, that so much life can be waked from stone with blows of mallet and chisel. It comes easy enough to tell a story with brush and color or pen and ink, but to charm variety into eternal sameness is the crowning gift of excellence. All work wears the impress of the craftman's individuality, whether he builds a fence or palace, but the artist excels all others, by surrounding his imagery with the ideal world in which he lives. His themes are as much clothed with thought as colors, and betray his mental bias as plainly as actions. Thousands of chapters from real life, and all of them the best types of experience that can be procured, are as strong appeal to any one's better nature. The most hardened offender against moral law can find here something to win him back to memories of the path of rectitude.

It is a place full of silent sermons, where each may choose what suits their condition, and reject what does not, without offending the minister. It is to be regretted that this church should be closed on the day, which of all others, freedom to listen to one's own thoughts is a vital necessity, for it is the one day in seven when we are permitted to consider self as company.

There must ever be an inherent disposition in every person to choose for themselves, and if they will select a good place will it not amount to just as much towards furthering their education in good as if others selected it and made all the arrangements for an esthetic observance of the Sabbath in which they have no heart. In spite of all the fuss ministers and hired girls have to work Sundays, and feel better if paid for it. Custom and tolerance annuls law and keeps doors ajar to places not half as good as Art Galleries, and any one can enter who is tired of being brought face to face with thoughts soiled by their other six days smirching. It seems unfair to hinder if one is not disposed to help, and should the projected art loan become a reality, I trust it will be based on a concession that will permit me to cross over to Belle Isle and get acquainted with a frog or two.

Tecumseh Tannery.

I will pay greenbacks or gold for hides and sheep pelts. I have also first class hand made harness, both double and single which I would exchange for good split hickory, wood, corn or oats.

Why not save commission and sell your hides and sheep pelts direct to the tanner.

O. W. BEAN.

One year ago last Saturday, people began filling their ice houses in Tecumseh.

Capt. Romeyn is still at his father's and may remain here for some time. The old gentleman is very low and is liable to drop away at any hour.

The Common-Council at its last session adopted the standard time and recommended to the inhabitants of this village and the surrounding community to do likewise.

A railroader was "held up" yesterday forenoon by two others and relieved of a jug of whiskey and, he claims, some money. The chaps have been arrested and taken to Adrian.

O. B. Ayers of Brooklyn was in town yesterday. Dan. still remains a bachelor, to the surprise and wonderment of his gentlemen friends and probably to the regret of many a marriageable young lady.

The regular edition of the HERALD this week is accompanied by the usual holiday supplement. It is unnecessary to go into any detailed explanation of it. We advise every patron of the Herald to read it. Valuable matter of this kind cannot be appreciated when taken at second hand.

The entertainment at the Opera House on Thanksgiving day and evening, given by the ladies of St. Peter's Church, was largely attended, and resulted successfully as a matter of course. Their annual Thanksgiving fair has become one of the permanent institutions of this village. The net proceeds were $150.

Last week a mortgage for $2,700,000 was recorded with Register Dolbear at the county offices by the Michigan & Ohio railroad company to the Central Trust company, of New York. It is also recorded in Monroe, Hillsdale, Calhoun, Kalamazoo, Barry and Allegan counties, as well as in Lucas Co., Ohio.

All parties who gave notes to the T. & M. R. R. which, by their conditions, have become void are requested to attend a meeting at the law office of W. W. Frazer, in this village, next Monday, Dec. 10, at 2 o'clock, p. m., to take action concerning said notes.

By order of Committee.

Tecumseh, Mich., Dec. 5th, 1883.

Last Saturday afternoon about 2 o'clock, David Youngs and another man who works for Abe Hanford, entered Hanford's stable to take out a valuable team, when Young was kicked by one of the horses just above the right hip. For some time it was thought he could not recover. Dr. Catlin was called and the man is now doing fine and strong hopes are entertained of his recovery.

If our readers will excuse a little surfeit of advertising until Jan. 1st, we will give them more reading matter after that date. This is for the benefit of the masters and misses. To the wise father and economical mother, our advertising columns are the best reading matter in the whole paper. People who are on the look out for bargains should read every column of advertising in this week's HERALD.

The Michigan Baptist State convention, at its last session at Coldwater, provided for a consecration meeting in each association in the state to be held on the 17th and 18th of this month. The programme of subjects is to be uniform, so that all the meetings will consider the same topic at the same hour. The meeting in the Lenawee Association will be held with the Baptist Church at Adrian. Similar meetings were held one year ago; they were occasions of marked interest, as also of unusual manifestations of the power of the holy spirit. Our Baptist friends will be very apt to attend in large numbers this year. They ought to.

A Card of Thanks.

We desire to return our heartfelt thanks to all those kind and sypathizing friends who assisted us during the illness, and at the death of our father. And also to the Masonic Fraternity for their kindness, which will ever be remembered.

Mr. & Mrs. Wm. H. Arner.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD.

TECUMSEH, MICH., DEC. 6, 1883.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

Do you use R. R. or Sun time?

Attend the war concert to-night.

How did you enjoy Thanksgiving?

Thirty car loads of corn have been shipped into Mercer this fall.

People now walk over a new side walk in front of the Lasley House of-fice.

A new one cent daily paper has been started in Toledo, called the Post.

B. J. Garlinghouse is now found behind the counter at Hough & Hosmer's.

The people of Tecumseh can have the opportunity of paying their taxes to-morrow.

The Springville Grange will hold a box social at the cheese factory to-morrow evening.

Ridgeway has put up the $2,000 bonus required and will have a depot on the M. & O. road.

The work on the new addition to Brewer's foundry is progressing rapidly this fine weather.

Wouldn't it be a good plan for the village authorities and schools to adopt standard time?

Remember that election of officers takes place at the regular meeting of Tecumseh Lodge, No. 69, F. & A. M. to-morrow evening.

Harry Quine, of this village, graduated last week at Evans' Business College, and will take a position in the Milburn Wagon Works at Toledo.

Mr. C. J. Moore, an old Tecumseh boy, was in town last week on a brief visiting tour. He is now filling a position in the Michigan Central depot at Ypsilanti.

Owing to the rush of work occasioned by our holiday supplement, we are compelled to defer an obituary notice and some township correspondence until next week.

Last Sunday's edition of the Detroit Daily Free Press contained 20 pages of seven columns each. It was a stunner. The Free Press since the late drop in price is surpassing itself.

Sheriff Bidwell has offered $100 reward for the capture and conviction of the person or persons who threw a stone through the plate glass window of Kies Bros.' store last week Tuesday night.

Fred Henderson and C. H. Bramble are trying to teach the young ideas how to shoot—the one in township of Franklin, the other about three miles from Kalamazoo. Success to them.

Luther Allen, formerly of the Wabash has been appointed Gen. Supt. of the M. & O. road, and D. J. Durrell has received the appointment of Master Mechanic. Their headquarters for the present at least will be in Toledo.

The Salvation army is hooted and jeered by the crowds on the streets at Grand Rapids, and the chief of police has notified the captain that if they persisted in creating any more disturbances he would be obliged to "run them in" as a nuisance.

The new two-cent morning daily, of Detroit, has made its appearance, and is a well edited, tasty looking sheet.—We believe it will creditably fill an unoccupied field, and from the character of the first two numbers believe it will soon become a permanent fixture in Detroit journalism.

Clara Louise Kellogg with her magnificent concert company, including Mme. Teresa Carreno, Pianist, J. F. Rhodes, Violinist, Signor De Ferranti, buffo and Miss Alta Pease, contralto will appear at the Opera House, in Adrian, Saturday evening, Dec. 8th. If 25 people attend from Tecumseh the train can be held till the close of the entertainment.

Clinton News: All the rooms of the woolen mills are now closed except the finishing room. It will take several weeks yet to finish up in that department and then the busy wheels of that usually busy building will stop and industry give place to silence within its walls. How long before they will resume their wonted activity? We hope not many months.

What is Mat Blosser driving at in this paragraph: "There are people in every community who seem to take delight in throwing cold water on every project gotten up to increase the importance and interests of a town. Such men think themselves smart but they are a fester in the community and should be despised and their words frowned down by the inhabitants.

Mr. Levi Martin, of this village, has an interesting war relic, being a parol which was given to him on the battle field of Chancelorsville May 4, 1863. It reads as follows:

HOSPITAL, May 4, 1863.

Levi Martin, a private of Co. F 55th Reg. O. Vol. U. S. A., a prisoner of war, is hereby paroled not to take up arms or in any way assist the army or government of the United States in the war against the Confederate States until exchanged according to the cartel agreed upon.

By command,
GEN. R. E. LEE.
H. V. Dinglar, Capt.

Clinton News: It must be that we are going to have a very severe winter, for one of the school boys in this place was known to wear three suits of underclothes one day this week. Did he wear them to protect himself from the cold, or from an artificial heat produced by the repeated applications of his teacher's raw hide?

The farmers' union and horticultural society hold a meeting at Music Hall in Hudson, Dec. 15th. Discussion on tile and tiling, led by T. J. King and Wm. Brown; essay by Mrs. Hattie Russell—farm literature; essay by A. H. Crane—farm economy; recitation by Miss Belle Carson; discussion on preparing the farm for winter, led by J. U. Harkness; address, J. J. K. Boles; all interspersed with music and a picnic dinner.

One of the Franklin farmers has set his neighbors a good example in our opinion. Like many others he has built a new barn. But the example referred to consist in having his name, Wm. A. Beebe, painted on one of the large doors in letters so plain that it can be read from the road without the least trouble. If others would follow his lead in this respect it would not only be a satisfaction to the traveling public but often a great convenience.

On Saturday morning last Engineer Sawyer, of the M. & O., received a caller at his office. He was extremely drunk and his name was John Cahrill. The fellow claimed that he had been robbed and wanted to telephone to the officers, and he insisted that he was in the telephone office. Sawyer was finally compelled to put the man out, and in the fracas that ensued Cahrill got a broken arm. Dr. North reduced the fracture and the man is now sobering off.

The annual meeting of the First Baptist church, of Tecumseh, will be held in the chapel of said church, on Tuesday, Dec. 25th, 1883, at 2 o'clock, p. m., for the election of two trustees in the place of John Margeson and L. G. North, (whose terms of office will then expire) and for the transaction of other business.

Especial attention is called to Articles 9th and 10th of the articles of Incorporation, and article 3rd of the By-Laws, as published in the August No. of the "Baptist Item."

By order of the Board of Trustees.
A. P. CODDINGTON, Sec'y.
Dated Nov. 30, 1883.

Last Friday afternoon a Swede by the name of Gustave Vanderburg, who was at work at the M. & O. gravel pit, fell on the track between two cars and had one of his legs badly crushed and the other one injured. The man was so shocked by the accident that he is unable to explain how it happened. One leg was amputated on Friday night by Drs. Catlin and Woodward, and it is feared that amputation of the other one will become necessary. The man is now cared for as well as possible at the boarding cars near the gravel pit.

Adrian Press: Elisha Hampton, son of the late James B. Hampton, of Franklin, died last week at Exeter, Nebraska, his home. He was born in Franklin, went to the war from that town, was a splendid soldier, and served till the close of the rebellion. He died of chronic diarrhoea contracted in the service, leaving two children. Thus one by one the boys are melting away, and each life that has gone out in the prime of manhood, is a standing rebuke to this noisy clamor about pension frauds.

Another terrible murder occurred in Detroit last Wednesday evening when Policeman Alonzo E. Bullard was shot and killed by a crook named George Wilson. The killing was done with a shotgun, at so close a range that the powder burnt the officer's clothes. The charge entered Bullard's body near the groin, and literally tore his intestines into shreds. The murderer escaped to Canada in a row boat, but the trail was struck and he was captured in a barn, where he had gone to hide. He is now in jail in Detroit. The dead officer leaves a young wife and children in a penniless condition.

Adrian Times: The drain troubles in regard to the "big ravine" in Riga, are not yet ended by any means. Sup. Finger has refused to spread the tax for the drain, and of course by to-day must have turned over his rolls, minus this drain tax, to the county treasurer. The people who have performed work on the ditch, some of whom are very poor and depended upon their earnings on the ditch for their living, feel very indignant, and propose to hold a meeting to discuss the matter, at Blissfield next Tuesday. A writ of mandamus issued by the supreme court seems to be their only remedy.

The November number terminated the existence of the Hudson Baptist. The first number was issued in August, 1882, and with but one or two exceptions it has appeared every month since. Its aim has been similar to that of this sheet. To record such facts concerning the church and Sunday school as would be helpful and to make such suggestions as would promote the general religious welfare of the community. It suspends not from lack of patronage and sympathy but from lack of time on the part of Bro. Patterson to prepare matter for its columns. We shall miss its monthly visits to our table.

FROM THE BAPTIST ITEM.

Benj. Garlinghouse has accepted a position in Hough & Hosmer's jewelry store.

Mrs. Dea. Adams is visiting a sister in Beloit, Wis. She will return to her son in Omaha in a few days.

Mrs. H. Sheldon, of Ohio, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Norton Gowdy, at their home in this village.

Bro. Cashman, writes from Detroit that there is some prospect of his spending next summer in Tecumseh.

Bro. Dea. Clough has been very sick during the past two or three weeks. At one time his recovery was considered very doubtful. She is much better at present.

Bro. A. P. Coddington has been visiting at Point Lookout in Arenac Co. While there he went up the Augress river 16 miles on a hunting trip. He reports a good time and game plenty.

Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Osmun, of Shelby Oceana Co., have been visiting about two weeks at Bro A. P. Coddington's. Mr. Osmun is editor of the Shelby Enterprise. They leave for home to-day.

Arrangements are about completed by which the Carman Family will give a Benefit Concert in Tecumseh for the benefit of the fund for sick and poor. The concert will probably be given on Christmas Eve., yet the date may be changed. Look out for them. Whoever fails to hear them will miss one of the rarest treats of their lives.

We are in receipt of "The Monthly Bulletin," published by the Students' Christian Association of the University of Michigan. It is of especial interest to the pastor, who was once a member of the Association for four years, and served it one year as vice president, acting as president during a portion of the same year. The brightest, tenderest recollections of his student life are concerning its meetings and work. Bro. R. F. Taggart will accept our thanks for this interesting pamphlet.

Among the changes made in the special boards of the State Convention this year, we have noticed the following: Rev. Z. Grinnell, formerly Secretary and Treasurer of the Foreign Mission Board, was transferred to a similar position on the State Mission Board. And our pastor, Rev. C. E. Conley, formerly Chairman of the Foreign Mission Board, now occupies the position of Secretary of the same board. He has been busy since convention in making out and arranging the work for the year. The machinery is again in good working order, and the prospects of the year are hopeful.

The whiskey fraternity at Clayton has found that "the little Baptist preacher" could not be intimidated nor beaten in the courts. The only comfort left them then was to swear. But Bro. B., believing that they might to be law abiding citizens in all particulars as well as himself, plainly told them that the next man who used an oath in his presence would be prosecuted for that.—The result is, he has not heard an oath since. The thing nearest an oath he has heard came about in this wise. One of the "fraternity" began to rail at him the other day. He grew red in the face, he gesticulated, ordinary language soon became too feeble, and suddenly he blurted out, "By G——rimes!!!"

Enforcing the Liquor Law.

A man was once asked, if he could play the violin. He replied, "I don't know. I have never tried." This is about the way with most temperance people with reference to the liquor laws. They do not know whether they can be enforced or not—they have never tried. Such indifference and inaction must be far from right. The present legislation is such, that, if it can be enforced, it will effectually cripple, if not practically prohibit the traffic. That it can be enforced in some of its phases at least, is shown by the article on our second page, entitled, "A Temperance Triumph at Clayton."

If it is effectual in Clayton, there is but one reason why it should be ineffectual in Tecumseh—that is the unwillingness of our citizens to use the weapon the legislature has placed in their hands. If we can prevent the sale of intoxicating liquors, and will not do it, it follows that we are at least indirectly responsible for the disgraceful scenes, which have occurred upon our streets during the past week. Most temperance men demand a prohibitory law. That demand will be granted sooner or later; for it is right not only, but it is wrong to deny it.—But prohibitionists will hasten that hour of signal triumph, by showing to the people that they mean all they say by doing as has been done in Clayton—enforce to its extent the law already enacted. This done, the half-hearted will become decided and the brazen effrontery of the liquor party will be cowed. In this even the majority of the people will demand prohibitory legislation, and having secured it, will relentlessly enforce it.

We are glad to learn that steps have been taken to enforce the law at Clinton also—with what results we are not informed. If such work could become general, it would tell, upon the next legislature.

Since Slayton & Kinney moved to their "Big Store on the corner," and marked their goods down 15 per cent. their trade has doubled. Good goods and low prices tell every time.

The latest farmer swindle is a traveling dentist, who pulls teeth, calls in a few days and gets half of the price of the set, but fails to return, so that the victim is minus teeth and cash.

Adrian Times: Capt. Littleton, of Clayton, has attained an unenviable reputation as a liar, even through the columns of a certain newspaper correspondent of the village, and he fears that his future invitations to Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners will be few and far between. If the captain desires to kill the fellow, we have a gun which we can warrant will accomplish the desired object.

The custom practiced by local papers of publishing the President's message in full is, we think, honored in the breach rather than in the observance. Not that every citizen should not read the message and ponder upon it. But every family now-a-days takes a city paper of some sort and will get the message from that source. A local newspaper can better devote its columns to matter of a local character.

Card of Thanks.

The family of the late Wm. H. Arner are again placed under obligations to their friends and neighbors by their recent sad loss. Thrice now, have they been the recipients of their kind sympathy and assistance during many hours of severest trial. They feel with deep consciousness that these heaven-born charities are beyond their power to repay; but they trust that Providence will reward them with its richest and divinest blessings.

OBITUARY.

John F. Schreder, full of years and honors, departed this life at the home of his son-in-law, Wm. H. Arner, in Ridgeway, on the 29th ult., at the advanced age of nearly ninety five years. He was born in Newburg, N. Y., Mar. 1789. At the early age of twelve years he began life for himself, working on farms and going to school winters until he was about twenty-one years old. At that age he began working in a flouring mill near Philadelphia where he worked for twelve years. In 1831 he came to Michigan and located a farm on section seven in Ridgeway, which farm he has ever since owned and where he continued to reside until within a year or two. He was a soldier in the war of 1812 and for many years drew a pension. He was also a soldier in the Black Hawk war. He cast his first vote in the Spring of 1809 and his second the same fall when he voted for James Madison, fourth President of the United States, and not a single election day has intervened from that date until his death, that he failed to cast a ballot. He has always been a Democrat in politics and took much interest in political affairs. He was blessed all his life with vigorous bodily health, and his mind and memory were unimpaired until his last illness. In 1797 Gen. Washington, and lady visited Newburg and while there Mr. Schreder saw them and had the pleasure of shaking hands with the Father of his country. He also saw Lafayette, and was present when Fulton's steamboat was tested on the Hudson. His married life was a happy one, being blessed with seven children, some of whom are living and some have crossed over to meet him on the other shore. At the time of his decease he had fifteen grand children and seventeen great grand children. He was a man of domestic tastes and habits; a kind husband, a devoted friend and a generous parent.

He had been a member of the Masonic fraternity for fifty-eight years. He entered as an apprentice at Adrington, Pa., in 1825, and was raised to a Master Mason in 1827. Upon his removal to Michigan in 1831 he obtained a Grand Lodge certificate from the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, and upon this he entered the Tecumseh lodge shortly after its institution. About two years ago he transferred his membership to the Clinton lodge. He was a natural mason; warm hearted, generous and faithful to friends, and one of his last requests was that his body might be carried to the tomb by his masonic brethren. This request was gratified.

The funeral services were held at the M. E. church, in Ridgeway, and were conducted by the Clinton lodge, which attended in a body, several members of the Tecumseh lodge joining with their Clinton brethren.

Although not a member of any church his religious belief was that of a Universalist, and the funeral sermon was preached by Rev. H. Shepard, of Tecumseh, assisted by Rev. Borden, of Ridgeway.

The remains were deposited in the Tecumseh cemetery. Thus has another pioneer passed into the world beyond. His early life was one of privation and poverty, and his station has always been that of a humble and honorable citizen. He has "performed well his part." He has laid aside his earthly garments and will henceforth dwell with the great majority.

—Having furnished the books for the Tecumseh Library Association, also the new books for the school library, we improved the opportunity to stock up with a complete line of practical works which we are able to sell at surprisingly low prices. We also have a large line of musical books which will be sold correspondingly low. Hough & Hosmer.

—Don't forget to visit Coller's Palace of Music, Adrian, if you are going to buy Holiday music goods. Largest stock and lowest prices. Everything from a Jew-harp to a piano.

—Just for fun we will sell our $35.00 couches for $25.50. Call and examine a good couch for a little money. Slayton & Kinney, Tecumseh.

—A line lot of cheap Mattresses at Palmer's Chair Factory at bottom prices.

—An elegant line of Christmas, New Year, Easter and Birthday Cards at Hough & Hosmers.

—Something new! The New Home Sewing Machine Co. has just patented and has on exhibition at B. J. Coller's, Adrian, a cylinder Shuttle, which will be used in their machines hereafter. Call and examine.

—Slayton & Kinney retail baled hay.

—For $30 we will sell you a black walnut bed room suit with large glass on the dresser. It is very cheap at $35. Slayton & Kinney, Tecumseh.

—Holiday goods of all descriptions at Hough & Hosmers.

—Take your sewing machines that are out of order to B. J. Coller's repair shop, Adrian, if you don't want them ruined by inexperienced workmen. Twelve years' experience. All work guaranteed. General agent for Light Running New Home.

—Leave your orders for Sash, Doors, blinds, mouldings, window frames, tanks, troughs, etc., with the Tecumseh Lumber Co. They will receive prompt attention.

—Don't forget the opening of Holiday goods Dec. 8th at Hough & Hosmers.

—Call at the yard and mill of the Tecumseh Lumber Co., and examine their stock.

—Fifteen of the finest Organs in this country on exhibition at Coller's Palace of Music, Adrian, for Holiday trade and more coming.

—At our "big store on the corner" you can get a marble top bed room suit, Tennessee marble with glass on dresser and commode for $50; regular price $60. Slayton & Kinney, Tecumseh.

—If you wish to see new Holiday goods call at Hough & Hosmers.

—Don't buy any Sewing Machines without seeing the Light Running New Home and Singer, sold only by B. J. Coller, Adrian.

—Judging from the number of Light Running New Home Sewing Machines received by B. J. Coller, Adrian, this week, he expects a large Holiday trade.

—At Coller's Palace of Music, Adrian you can find the largest stock of Pianos and Organs at the lowest prices in Michigan. Call or send a postal for prices.

—No guess work. If you want as good flour as is made in the state get Heck Bros.' celebrated roll flour.

—Natural looking and serviceable artificial teeth can be procured of Dr. B. F. Snyder's Dental Rooms.

—Parties in Tecumseh and vicinity will do well by seeing B. J. Coller of Adrian, Gen. Agt. for the New Home Sewing Machine if they contemplate purchasing any sewing machine. He is the company's only authorized agent in this vicinity. Don't be misled.

—You can have your decayed and aching teeth extracted at Dr. B. F. Snyder's dental rooms without pain, by taking vitalized air.

DIED.

ARNER.—In Raisin, on the 29th of Nov., Wm. H. Arner, aged 92 years.

The deceased was born in Livingston Co., N. Y., came to this state in 1828, and the town of Raisin in 1831 where he resided at the time of his death. He was highly esteemed as a citizen—was an earnest christian, a member and elder in the Presbyterian church. He leaves a widow and children to deplore his loss. His funeral was attended by a large concourse of people, who deeply sympathize with the bereaved family.

Chestnuts.

It is the time of the year when people who have never been taught any better go chestnutting.

Chestnuts do not grow wild out West. Let the mighty West remember that with a grateful heart on Thanksgiving Day. On the boundless prairies the chestnut only grows in the train-boy's basket.

The chestnut is the home of the rioting worm. No self-respecting worm will live in the ground if he can find a chestnut. He enters it by a sole which cannot be perceived, and once in the nut he riots in solitude and abundance, until some incautious man, treads the chestnut to him. A chestnut without a worm is as great a rarity as a bee without a sting.

Where all the chestnuts come from, goodness only knows. I don't. They don't grow on the trees. The Prince went out one day, with the little ones at the parsonage. He came home with half a peck of beautiful brown chestnuts. I smiled at the child's enthusiasm, and said to his mother:

"I will go out with him myself, and get a couple of bushels."

I did go out with him. I took some things to bring the nuts home in; to wit, a grain bag, a large double-decker market basket, and a box; the aggregate capacity of these vessels was two and one-half bushels. Dr. McLain and Louie accompanied us, with a somewhat larger equipment.

The proportion of the chestnut burs to chestnuts is as the leaves of the alders to the trout in the brook. Just about. You walk over acres of hulls, you turn them over, you look into them, you stumble and fall on them. At last your heart bounds with joy. You find a bur with a chestnut in it. You get all the needles on the bur into your two thumbs while you extract that chestnut, and then the ever-present worm looks out and denounces the barbarity of eviction.

I carried the chestnuts home that night in my pocket. The grain bag I folded up and hid under my coat, I threw the box away and the basket I filled with hickory nuts. After it was full, a native drove past and looked at me kindly.

"There's lots and bushels of shellbarks down on the other road about a mile," he said, with a peculiar emphasis on the shell-barks.

"Well, what's there?" I asked with a sinking heart.

"Pig nuts," he replied, "they're no good, nobody ever gathers them."

I fled, feebly, saying that I kept a pig and had gathered these nuts for feed, and the native looked incredulous and drove on.

"What you emptyin' all them nuts over de fence for?" the Prince demanded.

I told him there were motives in the human heart that sometimes shaped our actions too deep and intricate for him to comprehend, and then the Doctor and I gathered up the children and trespassed across a field to a forbidden chestnut tree, escorted by a whole herd of cattle and a Mr. Durham, who spaned the ground in another field and talked bass at us through the rails. We made a great haul at this tree. The venerable old monarch of the forest was about two thousand years old, and its branches had a spread of about twenty acres. It was cloudy with burs but we got seven nuts and ten worms.

I know what the worms are for. They are to keep people from eating the chestnuts. Were it not for the worms many people would eat chestnuts who cannot now be induced to taste them, and a great amount of suffering would thereby be entailed upon the human race. Of all the awful, lonesome, maddening things in the world to eat, a chestnut is the lingeringest. A man may start in on a chestnut say about the 10th of October. He can know it all that day, and from time to time make desperate efforts to swallow the fragments of it. It will make him cough all night, and he can resume the powers of mastication early in the morning and keep it up all the next day. It will last him that week, and Sunday he cannot sing at church without blowing gides-ated chestnut all over the pew in front of him. He's lucky if he finally gets that chestnut chewed and swallowed by the end of November. I always hated it, and since I have met it in its native haunt I am less than ever a friend of the chestnut.

Recalcitrant Preachers.

It is reported that when Rev. Dr. Ellis, Rev. Phillips Brooks and Rev. Dr. Brooke Herford were on their way home together from Liverpool to Boston, on the first Sunday on the captain of the Cephalonia endeavored to arrange for religious services, and asked the three famous clergymen to decide among themselves which should preach. Mr. Herford at once excused himself, saying he had preached steadily during his vacation and now wanted at least one Sunday's rest. Then Mr. Brooks suggested that Dr. Ellis, being the oldest, ought to preach. "O, no," said Dr. Ellis, "it would be nonsense for me to preach when everybody wants to hear you." And so, after half an hour of disclaimers and compliments, the end of the matter was that there was no preaching at all. "Well," said the captain, with a sigh, "I did what I could. But isn't it singular? Three fire-escapes aboard, and nobody saved from the burning!" Chicago Journal.

A Jacksonville (Fla.) paper records the death of Miss Kittie Worrall from grief and prostration. The young girl was to have been married. The bridegroom and all the friends were assembled at the house and the hour for the ceremony fast approaching, when the young man excused himself from the company on the plea of having forgotten the wedding ring and left the house and has never been seen since.

—It is said that one New York produce firm has paid an average of fifty dollars a day for a month at a time for telegrams to Chicago, and the telegraphic business of five firms with their Chicago correspondents costs $110,000 a year. And yet less than half a century ago all the world's business was transacted without the wire.—N. Y. Evening Mail.

Rheumatic Syrup Co.:

Gentlemen—You will please send me by express, C. O. D., one dozen Rheumatic Syrup, as the druggists here do not keep it. My brother has been troubled with rheumatism for years, and if your syrup will do as much for him as it has done for a young woman who resides here, and who for the last four years has suffered everything but death, with Inflammatory Rheumatism—her hands and limbs were terribly drawn out of shape, and they had given up all hope of her recovery, when an acquaintance from Syracuse, N. Y., sent one dozen bottles of Rheumatic Syrup with a request for her to try it. She had used ten bottles, and to-day she is as free from pain, and as well at heart as eyes she was, and her hands are coming back to their original shape and she is able to use her limbs quite freely. We shall not begrudge one thousand dollars if it cures my brother.

I am yours truly, Eli Hoyt.

A FEMININE DEFENDER OF TOBACCO.—An advocate of the use of tobacco in support of his stand unearths an article written by Margaret, Duchess of Newcastle, some two hundred years ago. In defense of the seductive weed that lady wrote "It composes the mind, it buses the thoughts, it attracts all outward objects to the mind's view, it settles and retents the senses, it cheers the understanding, strengthens the judgment, spies out errors, it exasperates follies, it heats ambition, it comforts sorrow, it abates passion, it excites to noble actions, it digests conceptions, it creates fancies, it quickens wit, and it makes reason pleader and truth judge in all disputes or controversies between right and wrong."

Hop Bitters Co., Toronto:

I have been sick for the past 3 years suffering from dyspepsia and general weakness. I have used three bottles of Hop Bitters, and they have done wonders for me. I am well and able to work, and eat and sleep well. I cannot say too much for Hop Bitters.

SIMON ROBBINS.

Astronomy is a beautiful science. We are told that if a railway was to run from the earth to the nearest fixed star, and the fare was one penny for every hundred miles, and if you were to take a mass of gold to the ticket-office equal to twice the national debt—or $3,800,000,000—it would not be sufficient to pay for a ticket to the nearest fixed star aforesaid. If this be the case, it matters very little to us whether such a railway is ever constructed. It would be discouraging to go to the ticket-office with a mass of gold equal to $3,800,000,000, and be informed that the fare was $5,678,032,000. If the ticket agent wouldn't trust until we got back, we'd be compelled to forego the trip.—Norristown Herald.

DR. A. TRASK'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflammations and Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, All Skin of the Spinal Extremities, Neuralgia, Lumbago and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood, by this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 10 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

COMPOUND OXYGEN NOT A DRUG. A NEW TREATMENT. For Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, Dyspepsia, Catarrh, Headache, Debility, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all Chronic Nervous Disorders. A CARD. We the undersigned, having received great permanent benefit from the use of "COMPOUND OXYGEN," prepared and administered by STARKEY & PALEN, of Philadelphia, and satisfied that it is a new discovery in medical science, and all that is claimed for it, consider it a duty which we owe to the many thousands who are suffering from chronic and so-called "incurable" diseases to do all that we can to make its virtues known, and to inspire the public with confidence. We have personal knowledge of Drs. Starkey & Palen. They are educated, intelligent and conscientious physicians, who will not, we are sure, make any statement which they do not believe to be true, nor publish any testimonials or reports of cases which are not genuine. WM. D. KELLEY, Member of Congress from Philadelphia. T. S. ARTHUR, Editor and Publisher "Arthur's Home Mag.," Philadelphia. V. L. CONRAD, Editor "Lutheran Observer," Philadelphia. PHILADELPHIA, PA., June 1, 1882. ☞ In order to meet a natural inquiry in regard to our professional and personal standing, we give the public the usual confidence in our statements, and in the genuineness of our testimonials and reports of cases, we print the above "CARD" from gentlemen well and widely known and of the highest personal character. Our "Treatise on Compound Oxygen," containing a history of the discovery of and most of this remarkable curative agent, and a large record of surprising cures in Consumption, Catarrh, Neuralgia, Bronchitis, Asthma, etc., over a wide range of chronic diseases, will be sent free. Address, DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, 1109 and 1111 Girard St., Philadelphia.

DR. B. MINCER,

Scientific Optician!

I have devoted 25 years wholly to a study of the eye, and how to aid vision properly, and I make a specialty of fitting glasses to the eyes that have been injured by cheap, inferior glasses. I manufacture every kind of glasses, and guarantee satisfaction. Read what prominent physicians of Adrian say:

Having for some time past used glasses to improve my sight, without satisfactorily gaining my object, I called on Mr. Mincer, optician, of Detroit, who readily adapted glasses to my eyes, with which I am so well pleased, that I cheerfully speak in his favor. His method of examining and his application in selecting glasses to fit the eye can only be acquired by a knowledge of the useful organ to which must be added extensive experience. He has also adapted glasses to Mrs. Baker's eyes with which she is well pleased. I recommend him to all who need glasses adapted to their wants; poor glasses are an abomination.
V. A. BAKER, M.D.
ADRIAN, Nov. 18, 1882.

I have used spectacles bought of Mr. B. Mincer for the past three months, and find them superior to any I have ever used, and can cheerfully recommend him to anyone in need of glasses, and the benefit of his experience in the science of optics to adjust proper lenses.
DANIEL TODD, M.D.

I have investigated the work of Mr. B. Mincer, optician. I have reason to believe that he understands his profession, and adjusts excellent glasses on scientific principles. C. RYND, M.D.

REMEMBER!

I will visit every town in the county during the month.

"Mt. Gilead, Ohio, June 26, 1882.

COUGHS. "I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL this spring for a severe cough and lung trouble with good effect, and I am pleased to recommend it to any one similarly affected.

YOUNG MEN If you want to learn Telegraphy in a few months, and be certain of a situation, Address, Valentine Bros., Janesville, Wis.

Some Physical Fruits of Idleness.

The mind should be always occupied; it is strengthened and preserved in a healthy state by work; whereas it decays or becomes impoverished by disease; or what is even worse, since it is impossible to keep the brain absolutely at rest, its powers should be profitably employed, or they react on the system, and give rise to the numberless ailments, physical, mental, and moral, known as hysteria. This term almost implies that I am thinking of the female sex; certainly, it is to women especially that the want of occupation applies. Young men are forced to get their living whether they like it or not; but a large number of young ladies in a family have absolutely nothing to do. Those brought up in the country have this advantage, that they may always make work for themselves; the village children may be otherwise taught and cared for; bringing not only a blessing upon them, but a healthy body and mind to the benefactor. In town the condition of middle-class girls is to me pitiable. They are too genteel to follow any occupation; they are often too many in a family to assist in domestic duties; they have returned home with some very poor accomplishments; their knowledge of French and German is not sufficient to allow them to converse in those languages; with music just enough to indulge in doleful song or play badly on the piano. They dawdle through the day in a listless way, and fall victims to a thousand little ailments which the doctor is supposed to put right by physic. And the most curious thing is that, should the instincts of the girl force her to put some of her energies into use, she is likely as not to be thwarted by her mother. I am a daily witness to this: and, when young ladies are brought to me for advice, the invariable story is that they are overtaxing their strength; the maternal instinct being so perverted that it has become with many the belief that every movement means fatigue, and absolute rest is the way to ensure health. It is against this very erroneous view that I am now preaching. These mothers do not come to the doctor for advice, but come to dictate to him; and they say, "I want you, doctor, to insist on my daughter not playing the organ at church, for it is too much for her; or having the children's class once a week, for she is always ill after it, but order her to have her breakfast in bed, and a glass of port wine about 11 o'clock." It is this fanciful care on the part of parents which is so injurious for the very energy of young people would command them to occupy themselves. I do not know that girls are worse than boys in respect of idleness: for probably the latter would not work unless obliged, and even for them an occupation is good quite apart from that at which they earn their daily bread.

Sun-Spot Suppositions.

Enthusiasts who make a special study of sun-spots and attendant phenomena believe that the corner-stone of a new science is being laid by discoveries pointing to an intimate connection between solar and terrestrial meteorology. Just what the connection is they are not yet able to clearly define, although electricity is suspected of being the agent through which the effects are manifested upon our planet. It is known that the gaseous envelope of the sun is affected by eruptions of such prodigious magnitude as to be utterly beyond our power of conception, these disturbances appearing to us in the form of rapidly changing spots and protuberances. The eras of the spots—or sun-storms—occur at remarkably regular intervals, a complete cycle of the various stages of activity from maximum to minimum and again to maximum being performed in about eleven years—the so-called "sun-spot period." The sun-spot physicists claim a coincidence of the periods of maximum spots and years of great atmospheric and physical disturbance in the earth. The year 1881 was one of great solar disturbances, while it was marked by violent storms and earthquakes upon our globe. Further than this, these scientists claim to have recently detected by simultaneous observation minor atmospheric changes as the result of corresponding movements in the sun. Many difficulties attend these observations, but the Astronomer Royal for Scotland and others believe that the state of the sun will some day become an important factor in weather forecasts and like calculations.

"I am in receipt of your circular. I keep a good supply of your Downs' Elixir (all the sizes), believing it to be one of the best Cough Remedies put up; I also keep Dr. Baxter's Mandrake Bitters, and Henry & Johnson's Arnica and Oil Liniment.
U. D. Bristol, Druggist.

The above named remedies are all warranted to give satisfaction, and can be found in any first class drug store.

Paper can be made quite transparent by spreading over it with a feather a very thin layer of resin dissolved in alcohol, applied to both sides.

Testimony From the Press.

To those afflicted with lung trouble, hear what V. W. Wilson, of the Ottowa (Ill.) Times says: "After being disabled for three months with a cough, and lung trouble, often spitting up blood, can testify that I am cured permanently by the use of Dr. Bigelow's Positive Cure." A free trial bottle can be had at Baker and Hall's.

It is proposed to use stiff canvas stretchers in place of the ordinary berths in sleeping cars. They are comfortable, and can be so cleverly stowed away during the day that one would think himself in an ordinary drawing-room car. The canal-packet men knew this fifty years ago.

Physicians recommend porous plasters in cases of Back Ache, Lame Side Stiff Muscles, Rheumatism and all local pains. Hop Plasters are the best made, combining Fresh Hops with Gums. Ready to use, pleasant and powerful in action. 25 cts. at any drug store.

The highest elements of character, of power and dignity lie within reach of the lowest and the poorest.

ESTATE OF ASA RUSSELL.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, s.s.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, on Wednesday, the 28th day of November, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three.

Present Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Asa Russell, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Edward L. Russell, praying for the probate of an instrument now on file in this court, purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, and that administration of said estate may be granted to petitioner, the executor in said will named, or to some other suitable person.

Thereupon it is Ordered, That Monday, the 24th day of December next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of said Petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said Petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

KING OF THE BLOOD.

The Most Thorough Purifier of the Blood Yet Discovered.

Cures all Humors, from a Common Eruption to the worst Scrofula.

It purifies the Blood.
It invigorates the Liver.
It regulates the Bowels.
It strengthens the Stomach.
It gives vivacity in place of lassitude; cheerfulness in place of gloom; and robust vigor in place of debility.

Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Disordered Liver, Constipation, Nervous Affections, General Debility, in short all the numerous diseases and discomforts caused by impure blood are speedily conquered by this powerful corrector, the chief and sovereign of all ancient or modern medical discoveries—KING OF THE BLOOD.

Its name is its best description as it is a royal dispenser of the blessings of health and vanquishes the foes that lurk in the blood.

It banishes PIMPLES, SALT RHEUM, SCALY ERUPTIONS, ULCERS, SCALD HEAD, FEVER SORES, and all SCROFULOUS DISORDERS.

It checks CONSUMPTION in its early stages. It has frequently cured it when advanced.

It disperses TUMORS and CANCERS without the Surgeon's Knife.

It cures DROPSY, general or partial.

It cures FEMALE WEAKNESS and DISEASE.

It reduces in a safe and effectual manner all swellings, external or internal.

It eradicates the effects of Venereal Disease and Mineral Poisons, and establishes a sound constitution.

Many certificates, much further information and full directions for using, will be found in the pamphlet, "Treatise on Diseases of the Blood," in which each bottle is enclosed.

Price $1 per bottle, containing 12 ounces, or six bottles for $5. Sold by druggists in medicine.

If your druggist does not happen to have it on hand, request him to order a supply of it for you, as it will be cheaper than to send to order direct of us, and less trouble.

BULL DOGLETS.

A man who had traveled about,
Was heard very plain to speak out;
"I have chewed in foreign lands,
But the finest of brands
Is the 'Bull Dog' without any doubt."

A man up at Kalamazoo
Said no decent tobacco he knew;
But the "Bull Dog" he tried—
Was so well satisfied
He bought a whole gross to chew.

A resident at a away station
Was grumbling about his [illegible]

A Remarkable Cure of Scrofula.

William S. Baker, of Lewis, Vego Co., Ind., writes as follows: My son was taken with scrofula in the hip when only two years old. We tried several physicians but the boy got no relief from their treatment. Noticing Stoy's Sarsaparilla and Stillingia or Blood and Liver Syrup recommended highly, I bought some of it of you in the year 188_, and continued taking it till the sores finally healed up. He is now 21 years of age, and being satisfied that your medicine did him so much good when he used it, we want to try it again in another case, and now write for another bottle.

Cement Sewer Pipe Works.

E. M. CASEY, Proprietor.

To those who have never witnessed the process of cement pipe manufacture is quite interesting. A few moments ride by Michigan avenue car from the center of the city will land one almost before the door of the above named establishment at 236 Trombull avenue. One may see here large quantities of solid looking pipes, and upon inquiry learn that some are intended for water pipe for drainage, sewers, culverts, etc. Special attention is directed to the Wolfing Pipe, from 6 to 24 inches in diameter, the best pipe that has been found enough to admit a man to work in it, thereby saving much expense in cleaning.

CHICAGO

WEEKLY NEWS

AND THE

Tecumseh Herald

FOR $2.

THE CHICAGO WEEKLY NEWS is recognized as a paper unsurpassed in all the requirements of an American Journal. It stands unexcelled among the numerous [illegible] of the country. In the matter of telegraphic service, having the advantage of connection with the CHICAGO DAILY NEWS, it has at its command all the resources of the Western Associated Press, besides a very extensive [illegible] Special Telegrams from all important [illegible]. As a Newspaper it has [illegible] INDEPENDENT in politics, giving its political news free from partisan bias or [illegible] and absolutely without fear or favor. It is, in the full sense, a "FAMILY PAPER." Each issue contains several CHOICE SELECTED STORIES, a SERIAL STORY of absorbing interest, and from time to time articles on Fashions and Industries, Literature, Science, etc., etc. Its Market Quotations are complete and to be relied upon. It is and expects to remain an enterprising pure and true weekly GENERAL FAMILY NEWSPAPER. We republish here from the columns of the WEEKLY NEWS a few of the voluntary commendations it has received:

WHAT OLD SUBSCRIBERS SAY

About the Chicago Weekly News when they renew their subscriptions.

William Carroll, Pontiac, Oakland County, Mich. says: "I think it is the best paper in America."

L. A. Welch, Sullivan O., says: "It is better than many of the Dailies."

James P. Malone, 264 St. Charles street, New Orleans, La. says: "In comparing your paper with others I receive, I must say yours, the CHICAGO WEEKLY NEWS, is good, better, best. I would sooner miss a meal than a number of the NEWS. It is the newspaper of the day. It is true to its name."

Alfred P. Foster, Woodbuff, Henry County, Ill., says: "It is one of the cleanest papers published."

W. W. Rhodes, Adrian, Mich., says: "I don't want to miss a number. It is the best magazine for news I have ever seen."

Peter Lansing, Fairplain, Newaygo County, Neb. says: "I like the Chicago Weekly News. It is full of reading and excellent papers, and although I am in receipt of the most [illegible] journals, I am constrained to adopt THE WEEKLY NEWS as No. 1, in consequence of its non-partisan attitude in politics, giving me the unbiased truth concerning the actions of all political parties."

M. E. Davenport, Palmyra, N. Y., says: "It is the cheapest and best paper I ever read."

Mrs. L. Schonan, Hannibal, Mo. says: "I like your paper very much. I get six other papers, but do not like them as well as THE WEEKLY NEWS."

W. R. Lee, Mansfield, Tex., says: "I am highly pleased with the NEWS for I get positive information of what is going on in America, which I get from both sides of the question, rarely so north, which is utterly impossible to get in a short time by reading on either side."

The above extracts are published to show what is said of us by the CHICAGO WEEKLY NEWS is held by its old subscribers.

Our special Clubbing Terms bring it within the reach of all. Specimen Copies may be seen at this office.

HENRY, JOHNSON & LORD, Proprs., Burlington, Vt.

ESTATE OF WM. H. POCKLINGTON.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office in the City of Adrian, on Wednesday, the 28th day of November, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty three.

Present, Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of William H. Pocklington, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Mary M. Pocklington, praying that administration of said estate may be granted to Francis Pocklington and Abraham Gasten, or to some other suitable person.

Thereupon it is ordered That Monday, the 5th day of December next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

NORMAN GEDDES, Judge of Probate.

STATEMENT OF S. L. GROAT.

I have been afflicted with Rheumatism [illegible] years, 31 have been so bad [illegible] last 10 years that I have been obliged to use crutches all this time. I have tried every [illegible] remedy I could hear of, and have paid through over eight thousand dollars, and I can solemnly say that I have never taken a medicine that has given me as much relief as your Lightning Remedy. And I consider it the best remedy for Inflammation or Acute Rheumatism that exists, and will give relief much larger than any other known remedy. My son was afflicted with the disease, and after taking the first dose experienced a relief, and was perfectly cured of the disease after taking eight doses. S. L. GROAT.

CATARRH IN THE HEAD

TRADE MARK.

Can positively be cured by using DR. P. HALL'S CATARRH REMEDY. A new compound, entirely different from all other preparations. It is in the form of a fine ointment which is easily applied to the nostrils and ears, and reaches the seat of the disease by absorption. Pleasant to the smell, and most efficient in operation. For Hay Fever, also impaired Hearing, Sight, Smell and Taste, produced by Catarrhal disease, it is a positive cure. The most noted Physicians and prominent Druggists all over the land have given it their endorsement. We have the unsolicited testimonials of hundreds of prominent and reliable men, who have been permanently cured. Do not be humbugged by nostrums, prepared by the inexperienced and unreliable, but insist upon having this Excellent Remedy, compounded by a Physician who has made this disease a study for 30 years. Two to four bottles generally sufficient to effect an entire cure. Satisfaction guaranteed or Money refunded. It is a positive cure for Ear-ache. For sale by Druggists. Also sent by mail, post paid, upon receipt of 50c. single bottle, package of two bottles, $1.00. Circulars and testimonials free.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

SPRINGVILLE SNUFF.

J. E. Gibbs has ordered the lumber for a new store to be put up soon at the depot.

Lucas Bennett has returned from the north.

The new depot is about completed.

A. J. Ayres moved into his new house in the village this week.

Mr. Onsted is troubled about putting up an elevator, as the M. & O. Co. will not let him near the track.

Henry Minsing will ship his cider from Brooklyn as he can get much better rates there than on the M. & O. He will send out about 200 barrels this week.

T. H. Mosher is figuring with the L. S. & M. S. Ry. to ship his flour from Brooklyn.

The dance at Ayer's hall given out for Friday evening, Dec. 21st, has been changed to Thursday eve., Dec. 20th, in order to secure Prof. Eugene Smith's orchestra from Hillsdale, and a first-class time may be expected.

ADDISON ATOMS.

Business has been unusually brisk here during the past month or so.

The Addison mills are still undergoing internal repairs.

Mr. F. E. Curtis' banking house is now prepared to do a first-class business. His telephone connections will greatly facilitate the details of the business.

The mixed trains lately run on the new railroad afford no small convenience to the trade here in the receipt and shipment of goods.

Mrs. Homer Turner, one of the oldest inhabitants of the place, was buried last Monday afternoon, after a brief illness.

Addison Division S. of T. advertise for a public entertainment and oyster supper Wednesday evening next.

Parties from Toledo are canvassing the neighborhood for stave and heading material.

Judging from the amount and quality of goods put in stock this fall by a half dozen of our merchants, and the prices charged for them, we should judge the people of Hudson and other sister villages must be on the alert and that at once, in order to retain the tribute money so long levied upon our defenceless people.

MACON MUSIC

Mr. C. E. Tripler and Miss Edith Howell were married Nov. 28. Both are well known and highly respected by a large circle of friends who will unite with us in extending our hearty congratulation for their future.

School re-opens at the village next week, with the same good standard teachers at the front. As their ability has been thoroughly tested we are confident of a successful term.

The Sunday School will give a Christmas concert, Dec 23.

Spelling contests are attracting much attention. Schoolmarms and scholars are reviewing their spelling lessons.

Last Sunday Miss Nellie Nyland, of Tecumseh, was the guest of Miss Myrtie Harriott.

Miss Mary A. Lindsley died very suddenly last week, after a short illness of a week. The funeral services were held Dec 8, at her late home in Saline.

Miss Pique Richart began school Monday in Dist. No. 10, in Saline.

The Baptist society gave an oyster supper at the residence of Sylvester Thomas Friday night.

The Reformed church gave their pastor a reception at the home of Elder Wm. Osgood, Tuesday evening.

Mr. Eddie Osgood is visiting friends in the state of New York.

CLINTON CULLINGS

More swearing about taxes in the Treasurer's office than at a base ball game. The extremely pious stuff their ears with cotton as a precautionary measure before entering.

Mrs. Alexander Ellis, one of the first settlers of this place, died Sunday and was buried Tuesday.

T. Holden Heggie of Caro made his Clinton friends a short visit Monday.

One character who has made himself entirely too conspicuous in the case of the People vs. Kirchgessner, may, from present indications, wish he had cast the "beam out of his own eye" first. At least it begins to look that way just now to outsiders.

E. G. Cook makes his old friends an occasional visit here, and when he does, he generally manages to buy enough wheat and other grains to keep the farmers busy hauling until he comes again. He can buy more grain in a half day than some agents can in two months.

John T. Clark is said to have one of the finest herds of Jersey cattle in the State. So much for Clinton enterprise.

Wednesday, the day for the Episcopal Fair and Entertainment came at last. The day was bright and pleasant, and every countenance was radient with joy, for it bespoke success to the enterprise. For many months the good ladies of the Episcopal Church had devoted a large share of their leisure hours to the work of preparation for a fair and entertainment for the benefit of their church. They had labored faithfully during all these long weary months for a double purpose; that not only might the fruits of all their toil, anxiety and solicitude bring forth an abundant harvest of substantial aid to the church, but also produce an entertainment that would meet the endorsement of an appreciative public. How well they succeeded in reaching the ends sought, and what their satisfaction must be at the results of their persevering labors is fortunately not left to conjecture or speculation. The Fair in the afternoon was a magnificent success. The spacious Town Hall was filled with tables, each presided over by fair hands, and upon which was displayed for sale a vast collection of the choicest goods, both useful and ornamental. The supper which was served between five and seven o'clock was all that could be wished and was partaken of by hundreds. The entertainment later in the evening and which consisted of music tableaux, &c., was a very interesting as well as entertaining feature of the whole. A good many were present from Tecumseh, Manchester, Saline and other places.

Special credit is due Mrs. E. R. Smith, Mrs. E. VanDeMark, Mrs. F. Lancaster, Mrs. J. E. McCollum, Miss Reynolds and other ladies of the Society for their noble efforts in behalf of the church, and for the great amount of labor and time expended in preparing this entertainment.

A TERRIBLE PROPHECY.

The Red Sunsets, Cyclones and Earthquakes Foretelling Coming Disaster. How to Meet It.

The mysterious appearances following sunset and preceeding sunrise have attracted wide attention from the students of the skies and the people generally. During the days of recent weeks the sun seems to have been obscured by a thin veil of a dull leaden hue which, as the sun receded toward the horizon, became more luminous, then yellow, then orange, then red: and as night settled down upon the earth, a dull purple. At first it was thought these appearances were ordinary sunset reflections of light but it is now pretty certain that they are either the misty substance of the tail of some unseen comet, in which the earth is enveloped, or a surrounding stratum of world dust or very small meteors. Professor Brooks, of the Red House Observatory, Phelps, N.Y. has turned his telescope upon these objects and discovered what he thinks are myriads of telescopic meteors. If it is unorganized world dust, or decomposed vapors, as the Democrat and Chronicle, of Rochester, N. Y., remarks: "How is matter to be disposed of? Will it settle and form a deposit upon the earth, or remain a partial opaque shell about the earth to cut off a portion of the sun's light upon it?"

Whatever the mystery is there is no denying that some very strange forces are at work in the upper airs. The terrible tornadoes and cyclones which have swept our own country, and the fearful volcanoes and earthquakes which have destroyed so many cities and thousands of people—the tidal waves which mysteriously rise and fall on coasts hitherto unvexed by them—the tremendous activity which is evident in the sun by the constant revelation of enormous spots upon its surface—all indicate unusual energy in the heavenly bodies.

These circumstances recall Professor Grimmer's prophecies that from 1881 to 1887, the passage of the five great planets—Mars, Neptune, Jupiter, Uranus and Saturn—around the sun would produce strange and wonderful phenomena. He says: "The waters of the earth will become more or less poisonous. The air will be foul with noisome odors. Ancient races will disappear from the earth." He attempts to prove his prophecy by the fact that in 1720, when Mars and Saturn made their passage around the sun coincidentally, great destruction and mortality visited all parts of the globe. He also found the same results in previous perehelion passages of the planets, and argues that these circumstances always produce epidemics and destructive diseases which will baffle the skill of the most eminent physicians; that the poor will die by thousands, the weak and intemperate falling first, those whose blood has been impoverished by excess of work or dissipation next and only those who are in comparative vigor shall escape to enjoy the era of renewed activity and prosperity which will follow the period of destruction.

Inasmuch as the entire world seems subject to the sway of the heavenly bodies no part of the earth, he thinks, can escape scourging. He even predicts that America will lose over ten millions of people; that farmers will be stricken with fear and cease to till the soil, that famine will make human misery more wretched. That hundreds will flee to overcrowded cities for aid in vain. That sudden changes in ocean currents, temperature and surroundings will entirely transform the face of nature and climate of countries; that the air will be so foul with malaria and other noxious gases, that those who survive will be troubled with disorders of the digestive organs. That many who escape other ills will bloat with dropsy and suddenly drop away, while others will grow thin and drag out a miserable existence in indescribable agony for weeks. Neuralgic pains in different parts of the body will torment them. They will easily tire and become despondent. A faint, hot feeling will be succeeded by chilly sensations while hallucinations and dread of impending ill will paralize all effort. The birds in the air, the beasts of the field and even the fish of the sea will become diseased, 'poisoning the air and poisoning the waters of the globe.' We are told on the other hand that those who shall pass thro' this period of trial will have larger enjoyment of life and health. The earth will yield more abundant than ever before. The animal kingdom will be more prolific and life prolonged very materially. This prolongation of life will be owing to the healthy electric and magnetic influences that will pervade the atmosphere. It would perhaps seem that the present redness of the sun and presence of a belt or veil of cosmic matter, justified, in a measure, the prediction of Professor Grimmer, but disturbing as the prediction may be we are told for our comfort that the strong and pure blooded need have little to fear in these calamities, that those who are delicate or indisposed should adopt means to keep the system well supported and the blood pure and that the most philosophical and effective method of accomplishing this is to keep the kidneys and liver in good condition. From the testimonials of such men as Dr. Dio Lewis and Prof. R. A. Gunn, M. D., Dean of the United States Medical college, N. Y., and thousands of influential, non professional people, it seems almost certain that for this purpose there is no preparation known to science equal to Warner's Safe Cure better known as Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. This medicine has acquired the finest reputation of any preparation that was ever put upon the market. It is a radical blood purifier, which soothes and heals all inflamed organs, strengthens the nervous system, washes out all evidences of decay, regulates digestion, prevents malassimilation of food in a philosophical and rational manner, fortifies the system against climatic and malarial influences and the destructive agencies which seem to be so abundant in these evil days.

It is not our purpose to dispute the correctness of Prof. Grimmer's prophecies. As we have said, the marked disturbances of the past few years would seem to give a semblance of verification of his theory. It is certain, as above stated, that we are passing through what may be regarded as a crucial period and it is the part of wise men not to ignore, but to learn to fortify themselves against the possibility of being overcome by these evils. It a duty which each man owes to himself and his fellows, to mitigate as possible the suffering of humanity and in no way better can he accomplish this purpose than to see to it that he, himself, is fortified by the best known preparation in the strongest possible manner and that he exert the influence of his own example upon his fellows to the end that they, too, may share with him immunity from the destructive influences which seek his ruin.

FARMERS' CLUB.

Friday evening, Dec. 7th, the Farmers' Social Club met at Uncle John Rector's. The attendance was quite large. It being the constitutional time for the election of officers for the following year, the club proceeded at once to the election of said officers with the following results:

Pres.—I. H. Schreder.
Vice Pres.—George Griswold.
Sec. and Treas.—F. V. Horton.

The following program was carried out in its proper order.

Music—Singing by the choir.
Select reading—Mrs. J. Fisher.
Music.
Dec.—George Henderson.
Music.

The declamation by Henderson was well rendered, and not only did much credit to the speaker, but was highly gratifying to the club.

Question, Resolved, That we deem it a wrong and a wanton extravagance in the expenditure of the people's money by the county board of supervisors when they consume three days in the election of a chairman; and further, is it right that the county at large should be taxed for the maintenance of Adrian's pauper inebriates.

The discussion was very animated, and was participated in by Messrs. F. V. Horton, A. D. Hall, I. H. Schreder, George Griswold and F. C. Rector, who thought that those who upheld the board of supervisors had not yet paid their taxes.

The next meeting will be held at the residence of Mr. I. H. Schreder, Friday evening, Dec. 21st, with the following program:

Music—Choir.
Rec.—Minnie Rector.
Music—Grant Schreder, Henry Horton.
Essay—I. H. Schreder.
Dec.—Henry Horton.
Inst. music—Minnie Rector.
Select reading—Charles Griswold.
Rec.—Grace Gillespie.
Music—Grant Schreder, Henry Horton.
Question, What is the most profitable land fertilizer, and the proper method and time of applying?

F. V. HORTON, Sec'y.

Frank Leslie's Monthly Magazine

The editor, T. De Witt Talmage, D. D., commences the fifteenth volume and the year very brilliantly. He presents in the January number a most attractive and interesting holiday one replete with delightful reading and artistic excellence. The contents are extremely varied; there are Christmas stories, sketches, descriptive articles and poetry, etc., the editor has a characteristic article, "The Coming Sermon," and there are contributions in prose and poetry from some of our most popular writers. A new serial, "Wrong from the First," by the author of "Mr. Burke's Nieces," is commenced, in fact the pages overflow with entertaining and edifying matter and artistic illustrations. Now is the time to subscribe, and no one could fail to appreciate, as a holiday gift, a year's subscription to this magazine. The price is 35 cts. for a single number or twelve numbers for $3.50 postpaid. Address Mrs. Frank Leslie, Publisher, 53 and 55 Park Place, New York.

The next issue of "The Popular Science Monthly" will contain an elaborate article on "The Classics in Germany," giving a crushing answer to President Porter and others who have appealed to the celebrated "Berlin Report" against Charles Francis Adams on the Greek question. The article is by Professor E. J. James, of the University of Pennsylvania, who has recently returned from Germany, where he carefully investigated the subject. He shows that it has been greatly misunderstood here, and that the inferences drawn from German experience of classical and scientific studies are of not the slightest value for the "dead language party in this country.

Peterson's Magazine for January reaches us in advance, and is altogether the most superb number we have ever seen, even of this favorite lady's book. The price of this popular lady's book is but two dollars a year, with great deductions to clubs, and valuable premiums to the person getting up the club. Specimens are sent gratis, if written for, to those desiring to get up clubs. We advise no one to subscribe for a magazine until they have seen a copy of this one. Address Chas. J. Peterson, 306 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

New Cure for Whooping Cough.

This has been considered one of the few incurable diseases. Physicians usually say that it must take its course, viz., two weeks of incubation preceeding the spasms, four weeks of gradually increasing number and power of the paroxysms, and from two weeks to six months of restoration to health. Often this malady is followed by pneumonia, bronchitis, or extreme physical exhaustion, ending in lingering illness or death. When the paroxysms are very violent, patients frequently rupture blood vessels or the delicate membranes of the eye or other organs. The disease is increasing in virulence. The number of deaths in New York city for one year has reached 459; in the city of London the appalling number of 6,000 annually. It has been known to some of the medical profession that persons suffering from whooping cough, asthma, bronchitis, catarrh, croup, and the other zymotic diseases, experienced quick relief, and sometimes rapid cure, by breathing the vapors arising from the open purifying boxes at gas works. This fact was discovered by a French physician in 1865, and published. Shortly after, the gas works of this country were visited and now it is quite common to see several patients gathered about a gas works inhaling the strong vapors.

The secret of the relief has been recently discovered. A Providence R. I. chemist procured the condensed hydro-carbon de- [illegible] and by analyzation discovered it to be cresolene (C_7H_8O), a compound product somewhat akin to carbolic acid but possessing far greater power in destroying the germs of contagious diseases. Vaporized in a closed room the terrible paroxysms in pertussis (whooping cough) are checked immediately, and ordinarily in five nights the patient entirely recovers.

Persons suffering from chronic asthma and unable to recline at length, can assume a recumbent position and sleep peacefully all night. Bronchitis and croup are quickly relieved. Diphtheria and scarlet fever are not only often cured, but it is absolutely impossible for these dreaded diseases to be communicated to others.

The contagious germs deposited in bedding, carpets, clothing, wall paper, or floating in the air, are instantly destroyed by the powerful vapor of cresolene which is conveyed in the air everywhere. A sick room—indeed the entire house—can be almost instantly perfumed with exact fragrance of cologne, Florida water, bay water, etc., the odor remaining for hours.

These results are made possible through the use of a very ingenious but simple metal vaporizer, which consists of a stand six inches high, supporting a cup which contains a half ounce of liquid. Under this cup is a disk, against which the direct rays of heat given off by a toy kerosene night lamp strike, and pass thus modified to the bottom of the cup. This produces perfect volatilization.

You will, I trust, pardon the length of this communication, but the subject seemed to me to possess such general interest and promising to occupy a new and important field in the relief of suffering child humanity, that I thought it worthy a place in your widely circulated columns.—Rev. Henry D. Albro in N. Y. Evangelist.

The Youth of Our Land.

There really ought to be some law against the sale of dime novels to young boys. Instances occur almost daily where the minds of young boys have become so distorted by reading trash that they are ready to slaughter their fellow beings in large quantities. A boy who reads about some avenger of the prairie who chops and splits his cord and a half of Indians regular every day, or some pirate whose scuppers run off enough blood every minute to make a hundred dollars worth of blood sausage, gets into an abnormal condition of mind and is wholly unfit for the solid work and low wages of real, every day life.

He begins to accumulate pistols, daggers, and other old junk, and longs to run a poniard into some false Spaniard, and twist it around, while he hisses through his set teeth some drivel that he has read in a novel. Such a boy will not do corn. Near Peru, in Illinois, the other day, a sheriff found a cave where a number of these boys whose minds had become inflated, had established a sort of pirate's glen. The pirates were not at home, being away probably on an expedition to capture a dark eyed Spanish beauty, or a bantam or shanghai beauty, and the sheriff entered the place and took an account of stock. All around were the sinister looking weapons of death, and the treasures and spoils of war, and among them were twelve bottles of lemon beer. This in itself ought to teach boys that there is no such thing as realizing what novels tell about. There never was a novel yet that told about the duke pacing back and forth with a clouded brow in the elegant drawing room of his castle and then going to the sideboard and draining a flagon of lemon beer. Not any. The duke always drains a flagon of fine old Rhenish wine, seven hundred years old, before he sets out to mutilate a couple of townships of people. A boy ought to see by this that if he is going to try and follow the duke's example he will have to use old Rhenish wine instead of lemon beer. And where would be the fun in slaughtering those two townships of people with a skin full of lemon beer or pop? It would be insipid. And not only that, but ridiculous. Suppose the duke should draw his rapier to run a person through the body, and just as he was about to say, "Die, villain," the gas from the lemon beer should come up in his nose. He would feel like a fool. A boy who reads a novel, and becomes all wrought up and excited, never thinks of this. Neither does he think who it is that writes the novel. It he could see the author of the novel—who is some poor devil in a New York garret, who has starved himself half to death for money to buy whisky, and who changes his quarters every month to save rent—he would be ashamed to be seen reading such stuff. The poor broken down scribbler who writes about the brilliant diamonds of inestimable value that flashed upon the bosom of the countess, is probably wearing a sheet of writing paper for a shirt front.—Peck's Sun.

Cost of Bringing up a Boy.

A clergyman who has been discoursing about boys has devoted considerable attention to the cost of these somewhat necessary individuals, and he estimates the expense of bringing a good boy, with all the advantages of city life, to the age of fifteen, at about $5,000. These figures are about doubled by the time the boy is of age, if he goes through college. A bad boy, arrived at the age mentioned, costs fully as much, even if he has not been to college, and the computation, as the reverend gentleman suggests, does not include the value of the mother's tears and father's gray hairs. Most men who have brought up boys will agree that the estimate is not too high.

A Possible Relic of De Soto.

The Tallahassee (Fla.) Floridan says: A few years ago, about two miles east of Tallahassee, was found a ponderous spur, of unique and curious workmanship, the like of which has not been seen in modern times. The burr was one and a half inches in diameter, and the bar proportionately heavy. On either side of the rowel dangled small pendant bells, that gave forth a tinkling sound in response to each step of the wearer—doubtless some steel-clad and bonneted warrior of the long ago. Not many days since, while parties were plowing near the identical spot, a solid and shapeless mass was turned up which, upon close examination, proved to be an iron stirrup of ancient pattern, as heavy and massive as the spur spoken of first, and firmly imbedded in a thick coating of rust and rust. When this was removed the stirrup was found to be in a remarkable good state of preservation. The sides represent two Ethiopian figures standing upon the foot rest, leaning forward facing each other, while they support with outstretched arms what forms the top of the stirrup, or that part connected with the leather. So unlike are both these relics to anything known to the generations of to-day and time, and, both being found so near the same place, it is not unreasonable to ascribe them to the same era and individual. Nor is the supposition at all improbable that one of the knightly followers of De Soto, lagged on through this then unknown region and wilderness, like the dauntless son of Spain, by a thirst for the yellow heaps of gleaming gold that bounded up ahead of them in vain visions and heated fancies, here fell a victim to the tomahawk and scalping knife of the wronged and revengeful red man, nothing "some one of the Tallahassee Tribe," by which "Tiger Tail" claimed to be a descendant, boasted, as he displayed at his belt a yet bloody scalp, that he had "killed a pale-face."

Weight by Measuring.

The following rule for finding out the weight of an animal by measuring may prove convenient: "See that the animal stands square; then take his circumference behind the shoulder-blade—this is the girth. Then measure from the bone of the tail which plumbs the line with the hinder part of the buttock, and direct the string along the back to the forepart of the shoulder-blade; this will be the length. Then work the figures thus: Suppose the girth of bullock 6 feet 4 inches, length 5 feet 3 inches, which multiplied together make 33 square superficial feet; and these multiplied by 23—the number of pounds allowed for each superficial foot of cattle measuring less than seven and more than five feet in girth—make 759 pounds. When the animal measures less than nine and more than seven feet in girth, 31 is the number of pounds to be estimated for each superficial foot. And suppose a small animal to measure 2 feet in girth and 2 feet in length, these multiplied together make 4 feet, which multiplied by 11—the number of pounds allowed for each square foot when cattle measure less than 3 feet in girth—make 44 pounds. Again, suppose a calf or sheep, etc., to measure 4 feet 6 inches in girth, and 3 feet 9 inches in length, that multiplied together makes 16 square feet, and these multiplied by 16—the number of pounds allowed for cattle measuring less than 5 and more than 3 feet in girth—make 256 pounds. The dimensions of cattle, sheep, calves and hogs, taken this way, will give the weight of the four quarters of the animal, sinking the offal. A deduction must be made for animals half fat—of one pound in twenty from those that are fat; and for a cow that has had calves one pound must be allowed, in addition to the one for not being fat, upon every twenty."

It May Yet Be True.

When Jules Verne wrote his romance, "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," he found it necessary to construct a cigar-shaped steamer that would travel under water while her crew could breathe with the same ease they could on land. If Mr. Verne had waited a few years he might, perhaps, have saved himself the trouble of inventing this submarine craft, as he might then have found it in actual operation. It is at present only proposed to apply a recent invention to a diver's helmet in the following manner: The apparatus, after having been fastened over the nose and mouth of the diver, when he wishes to breathe the air out of his lungs he does so in the ordinary way, and it goes down the tubes into the bottom of the front fiber. It then filters through the caustic-charged sponge in front, and passing along an outlet at the top, is ducted over the diver's shoulder into the other case, through which it filters in the same way, and then, ascending into the helmet, mixes with the oxygen that has been let in from its store chamber, and is ready to be breathed again into the diver's lungs. Mr. Fleuss states that if he could only expand the water, he could remain there for a whole day; as it is, he walked for a quarter of a mile under the sea at Ryde, and when at Brighton he went down during stormy weather into five fathoms of water. This being the case, it is a simple matter to apply the principle to the air-tight submarine ship. The devices for sinking it or for raising it to the surface of the water would be easily arranged, so we may soon have our enterprising excursion managers offering a trip along the bottom of the river to Lake Erie—single tickets, 50 cents; lady and gentleman's ticket, 75 cents.—Detroit Free Press.

Poison Ivy.

The poison ivy is very poisonous to some persons; they are poisoned by not touching it at all, or even, it is said, passing near it, while others may handle it without being afflicted by the contact in the least. The poisonous property of the plant is owing to a volatile acid; its effect is an acute inflammation of the skin, often accompanied by a great swelling. The effects remain sometimes for months before the poison is completely removed from the system. The usual remedies are cooling purgatives and an external application of lead water. An application of a solution of hops has been known to prove an effectual remedy when all other remedies failed. The plant has sometimes been mistaken for Virginia creeper, to which it bears no slight resemblance. The distinguishing feature is that the poison ivy has three leaflets, whereas the Virginia creeper's leaves have five leaflets. Persons have been poisoned by mistaking the poisonous for the harmless species. This plant is of the genus rhus or sumac. There is also an upright plant that is poisonous.

A writer advises that girls who wish to have small mouths should repeat at frequent intervals during the day: "Fanny Finch fried fourteen floundering frogs for Francis Fowler's father."

Feathered Slaves.

No people are more ingenious than the Chinese in the minor arts of life. That they have succeeded in training birds to fish is a striking example of their ingenuity and patience. Instead of carrying nets, the fishermen provide themselves with a large number of cormorants which perch on the edge of the boats. It is a curious spectacle to see these creatures engaged in fishing, diving into the water and always coming up with a fish in their beaks. As the Chinese fear the vigorous appetites of their feathered servants, they fasten around their necks an iron ring, large enough to allow their breathing but too small to admit of the entrance of the fish they seize; to prevent their straying about in the water and wasting the time desired for their work, a cord is attached to the ring and to one claw of the cormorant by which he is pulled up when inclined to stay too long under water. When tired he is permitted to rest for a while; but if he abuse the indulgence and waste his time, a few strokes of the bamboo recalls him to duty, and the poor diver resumes his laborious occupation. In passing from one fishing ground to another, the cormorants perch side by side, so as not to disturb the equilibrium of the frail vessel.

A Cure of Pneumonia.

Mr. D. H. Barnaby of Oswego, N. Y., says that his daughter was taken with a violent cold which terminated with pneumonia, and all the best physicians gave the case up and said she could not live but a few hours at most. She was in this condition when a friend recommended Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs and advised her to try it. She accepted it as a last resort, and was surprised to find that it produced a marked change for the better, and by persevering in its use a permanent cure was effected.

Chas. Jones, of Elizabeth, Spencer Co., Ind., says, I have dealt in medicine a number of years, and will say that Dr. Roger's Vegetable Worm Syrup is the most valuable medicine I ever sold. My customers were so pleased with its effects that they purchased a number of bottles to have it on hand. It is all that it is recommended to be.

A New York man recently dreamed that he was a Texas desperado in a town threatened by Indians, and when he woke up he found that he had crawled under the bed.

"Ish this 'er postoffice?" inquired Cauliflower, slightly disfigured after nineteen rounds of sour mash. "No, this is a butcher shop," replied the sarcastic mailing clerk, licking a faded one cent stamp. "Sho! Ish that sho! Well, give me a tender line for my muzzer."

An English writer says that the middle class Englishman, as a rule, does not buy books, except a few classics and professional treatises, but waits for his chance at the book club or circulating library. There are instances where authors are asked to lend their own copies by men of ten times their income. Wine and china may be bought, but books must be hired for, says the writer, the English are educated to the point of reading, but not to paying for books.

Hatch's Universal Cough Syrup gives your kidneys and liver a jog to help relieve your lungs of a bad cough, or your child of croup. There can be no membraneous croup when Universal Cough Syrup is used in the first symptoms of the disease. No family with children can afford to be without it one day. 25 and 50 cents.

A bowl of good pea soup is as satisfying as a hearty dinner on a cold day. To make a gallon of it, wash a pint of peas and soak them over night; then boil in five pints of water, gently simmering three hours or so, until thoroughly soft. With a potato-masher rub the soup through a colander or wire sieve. A pound of beef or ham bone may be boiled with the peas. The soup may be seasoned in various ways—with onions, cloves, pepper, etc.

A Blessing To All Mankind

In these times when these newspapers are flooded with patent medicine advertisements, it is gratifying to know what to procure that will certainly cure you. If you are Bilious, blood out of order, Liver inactive, or generally debilitated; there is nothing in the world that will cure you so quickly as Electric Bitters. They are a blessing to mankind, and can be had for only fifty cents a bottle.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1867 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now fifty years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me.

HORACE FAIRBROTHER."

Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved his darlings life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,

MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."

155 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."

Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."

Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."

Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

How Watch Cases are Made.

Most persons have an ambition to carry a gold watch case, and yet few people know how a watch case is made, or the vast difference in the quality of the metal. In a SOLID GOLD WATCH CASE, aside from the necessary thickness for engraving and polishing, a large proportion of the metal is needed only to stiffen and hold the engraved portions in place, and supply strength. The surplus is not only needless, but undesirable, because gold is a soft metal and cannot furnish the stiffness, strength and elasticity necessary to make the case permanently strong and close-fitting. The perfect watch case must combine gold with some metal that will supply that in which the gold is deficient. This has been accomplished by the James Boss' Gold Watch Case TRADE MARK which saves the WASTE of needless gold, and INCREASES the SOLIDITY and STRENGTH of the case, and at the same time reduces the cost ONE HALF.

Send 8 cent stamp to Keystone Watch Case Factories, Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome Illustrated Pamphlet showing how James Boss' and Keystone Watch Cases are made.

Catarrh

At this season of the year everybody has a cold, and some very bad ones. By frequent exposures the membranes of the nose become very sensitive, and catarrh and influenza are epidemic. Relief may be obtained by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

For many years in succession, beginning so far back I don't remember when, I had the catarrh in my head. It consisted of an excessive flow from my nose.

Ringing and Bursting Noises

in my head. Sometimes the hearing in my left ear was affected. Five years ago, about this season of the year, I began to use Hood's Sarsaparilla. I was helped right away, but I continued to use it until I felt myself cured.—Mrs. Alice H. Chadwick, Lowell, Mass.

Greenough Brownell, merchant and extensive farmer, Victor, Ontario county, N. Y., writes: "I have used Hood's Sarsaparilla for my catarrh, and it has helped me. I consider Hood's Sarsaparilla one of the best remedies for blood diseases to be obtained."

100 Doses One Dollar

"I have been troubled with that distressing complaint, catarrh, and have been using Hood's Sarsaparilla, and find it one of the best remedies I have ever taken. My trouble has lasted ten years, and never could get any relief until I commenced to use Hood's Sarsaparilla.—Martin Lovell, Chicago, Ill.

Danger from Catarrh

depends upon the amount and extent of the poisonous infection. Unquestionably many deaths from consumption can be traced to neglected catarrh. There is a violent distress, prostrated coughing spells, the eyes weep, the nose discharges copiously, and the head seems ready to split.

In such cases Hood's Sarsaparilla corrects the catarrh by its direct action in discharging the poison from the blood through nature's great channels, so that healthy, sound blood reaches the membranes and is wholesome.

GIVE ME A CALL.

Charles Lamb was once called upon to say grace. "Is there no minister present?" "No," was the answer. "Then let us thank God," replied the humorist.

French merchants are more franc in their dealings than those of any other nation.—[Yonkers Gazette. Yes, but American merchants have more cents.—[Bloomington Eye.

"Once upon a time" a man met an old woman in an English town driving several asses. "Adieu, mother of asses," said he. "Adieu, my son," was the old woman's reply.

Without wishing to encourage the world in gabble, we may state the goldenness of silence is over-estimated. The mute, inglorious oyster is always getting into broils, stews and hot water.

Breaking an awkward silence—Mrs. Montague Smart (suddenly, to bashful youth, who has not opened his lips since he was introduced to her a quarter of an hour ago)—"And now let us talk of something else!"

Propriety—Light-minded young thing in a bathing suit: "Surely, Aunt Margaret, you're not going to wear your spectacles into the water!" Aunt M.: "Indeed I am. Nothing shall induce me to take off another thing."

A London tourist met a young woman going to the kirk, and, as was not unusual she was carrying her boots in her hand, trudging along barefoot. "My girl," he said, "is it customary for all the people in these parts to go barefoot?" "Pairtly they do," and pairtly they mind their own business!"

A female applicant for aid, appeared at the office of the Director of the Poor, in Detroit the other day, with a sad and anxious look, and on being asked what she wanted replied, "I'd like some money." "How much?" "Well, I can't say exactly. How much do you generally give to a person who wants to buy a bead belt?"

Cleanliness.

The surface of the human body, and even the delicate membrane covering the eye, as well as the mucous lining of the internal passages of the animal body, may and often do become diseased in such a manner, by neglect of purity and careful cleanliness, that they will give off contagious matter. The contagious disorders of the skin, the eyes and the mouth are results of neglect of cleanliness, and are justly esteemed very disgusting. Decaying matters, whether vegetable or animal, and not unfrequently the still living but unhealthy and unclean surfaces and tissues of both animal and vegetable bodies, are apt to become infected with parasites which prey upon and injure or destroy the tissues. Even the tenderest parts and juices of vegetable substances and the skin, the muscles and blood of the animal, may be harmed in this way. It was a little invisible parasite which destroyed the potatoes at harvest time throughout the country many years ago, and there are some foul waters and infected kinds of meat which will breed disease in persons who partake of them. Therefore, it is a duty to be cleanly in food and drink, as well as in our breathing and personal habits. It is doubtful if persons who become filthy in their habits and neglect to provide for the purification of their bodies, clothing and premises, will ever be found pure and sweet in their thoughts, language and influence.

A Great Discovery.

This is daily bringing joy to the homes of thousands by saving many of their dear ones from an early grave. Truly is Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis, hay fever, loss of voice, tickling in the throat, pain in side and chest, or any disease of the throat and lungs, a positive cure. Guaranteed! Trial bottles free. Large size $1.

A piece of steel is a good deal like a man: when you get it red-hot it always loses its temper.

How Our Forests Disappear.—The manufacture and shipment of timber is the leading industry in Washington territory, employing a great many workmen, and an immense number of large saw mills, operated by steam and water power. A large fleet of ships and some small exporting steamers convey the timber to San Francisco, East Indies, Europe, Australia, South America, Egypt, Japan, and China. The timber shipped from one district in western Washington Territory in 1876, by vessels, without reckoning the home consumption, equalled 40,000 railway carloads, or 2000 railway trains of twenty cars each, and in 1878 amounted to 250,000,000 feet. Timbered lands well situated for logging purposes sell at from eight to twelve dollars per acre. Three miles from a river timber lands can be had from two to three dollars per acre.

The ills which flesh is heir to are more often due to impurities in the blood than is generally supposed. The purification of this vital fluid enables the system to ward off its worst enemies. There is no doubt that Hood's Sarsaparilla is one of the best blood purifiers in the world, and we feel confident that those who give it a trial will not be disappointed.

No man can be provident of his time who is not prudent in the choice of his company.

Perfect Success.

Those two words have a vast meaning when fully comprehended. A perfect success can be truthfully applied to Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic, which cures dyspepsia, biliousness, costiveness, all diseases of the kidneys, liver and bladder. It is a perfect tonic and blood purifier; it keeps the skin clear and bright, drives away pimples and makes the general health excellent. Price 50 cents of Baker and Hall.

Our suffering from malignity abroad is not so great as suffering from malignity within.

I had severe attacks of gravel and kidney trouble; was unable to get a medicine or doctor to cure me until I used Hop Bitters, and they cured me in a short time.—A distinguished lawyer of Wayne Co. N. Y.

Happiness is a pig with a greasy tail which every one runs after, but nobody can hold.

Why use a gritty, muddy, disagreeable article when Hood's Sarsaparilla, so pure, so clear, so delightful, can be obtained. 100 doses $1.00.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—Mr. Moody, the evangelist, says his three weeks' work in Ireland was the most productive of his life.—Chicago Herald.

—The Methodists of the South have determined to make their centennial celebration next year a memorable occasion.—N. Y. Independent.

—To save expense there is now a preparatory school in London in which students can soon determine whether they have the requisite qualifications to become a doctor.

—A great many ministers know when to begin a discourse, but not one in ten knows when to leave off. The man who has the genius to put his amen in the right place is always popular.—N. Y. Herald.

"I'm glad Bobbie's gone to that school," remarked Mrs. Malaprop, "cause it's teached by a good pedigree—or synagogue some folks call him I believe and furthermo', they don't have no carrycomb, like these newfangled colleges."—Yonkers Gazette.

—Rev. W. K. Kip, Protestant Episcopal Bishop of California, has just celebrated the thirtieth anniversary of his ordination. He was formerly rector of St. Paul's, Albany, and on his journey as missionary bishop to California was shipwrecked at San Diego, and there preached his first sermon in the diocese.—Detroit Post.

It was a matter of very considerable doubt for many years with me whether Young Men's Christian Associations were anything else except a subordinate kind of bachelor church; but the steady development, the growth and broadening of these institutions have, quite happily for me, dispelled all such doubts and fears; and now, taking it comprehensively, I regard the system of Young Men's Christian associations as being one of the remarkable developments of God's providence in our day.—H. W. Beecher.

—The Cherokee Advocate says there are 6,400 members of Baptist churches in the Indian Nation, about 110 churches and eighty ordained ministers. The proportion of churches and church-members is greater than in any white community known. There are only about 75,000 Indians. The institutions of learning, both of the higher grade and the common schools, are reported to be prosperous and the outlook encouraging. Principal Chief Early, of the Ottawas, says: "Much interest is felt in religion, and I might say that the whole tribe is or will be Christianized." The Presbyterians are also so strong in the Nation that they have organized a presbytery, the first session of which was held October 31 at Fort Gibson.

—The American Missionary Association had $337,000 to use last year. Of this $230,022 was expended in the South, $11,022 among the Chinese, $18,955 among the Indians, $16,112 on foreign missions, $6,896 on publications, $15,799 on agencies, $6,866 on administration, $8,235 for miscellaneous purposes. There was a balance on hand of $548. Among the Indians the society has 5 stations, 9 schools, 5 churches, 12 missionaries, 25 teachers, 1 native pastor, 12 native teachers, 271 church members, 356 pupils, 584 Sunday School scholars. Among the Chinese in California it has 19 schools and 2,823 scholars, with 121 converts the past year. In 12 States of the South and in Kansas and the District of Columbia, it has 9,640 colored students; 6 new church houses were built, and there are 89 churches, with 5,974 members under its care.—*N. Rheumatic SYRUP.

The Greatest Blood Purifier Known!

RHEUMATISM CURED.

Rochester, N.Y., Apr. 8, 18.. Rheumatic Syrup Co.: Gents—I have been a great sufferer from Rheumatism for six years and hearing of the success of Rheumatic Syrup I concluded to give it a trial in my own case, and I cheerfully say that I have been greatly benefitted by its use. I can walk with entire freedom from pain, and my general health is very much improved. It is a splendid remedy for the blood and debilitated system.
E. Chester Park, M.D.

SCROFULA CURED.

Port Byron, N.Y., Jan. 8, 18.. Rheumatic Syrup Co.: I had been doctoring for three years with different physicians, for scrofula, as some call it, but found no relief until I commenced taking your Rheumatic Syrup. After taking it a short time I began to have felt no pain since using the Syrup. Continuing its use a fourth bottle, I think it the best blood purifier I have ever heard of for the cure of rheumatism and neuralgia.
Mrs. M. M. Strang.

NEURALGIA CURED.

Cayuga, N.Y., March 8, 18.. Rheumatic Syrup Co.: Since November, 18.., I have been a constant sufferer from neuralgia, and have not known what it was to be free from pain until I commenced using the Rheumatic Syrup. I have not felt no pain since using the Syrup, and I have tried every remedy I have ever heard of for the cure of rheumatism and neuralgia.

AN ENGLISH INDIGNATION MEETING.

We have received from Mr. Albert Bath, Sevenoaks, Kent, England, a report of the proceedings of the third annual meeting of the "Farmer's Alliance." Also a hand-bill calling an indignation meeting to protest against extraordinary tithes. As the notice of this meeting will be quite a curiosity to our readers we copy it in full:

"Extraordinary Tithe Execution sale, at Mr. Bartholomew's farm, Joyce Hall, Southfleet, Kent, on Tuesday, November 27th, at 12 for 1 o'clock.

Nearest Station is Pawkham, London, Chatham & Dover Railway. A distraint having been levied upon the goods and chattels of Mr. Bartholomew, for £29 12s. 0d. extraordinary tithe, and £40. 7s. 6d. for ordinary tithe, with expenses, seizing two valuable horses to satisfy the execution.

This is to give notice that immediately after said sale an indignation meeting will be held to protest against the continuance of this iniquitous law, which so seriously hinders the increased growth of the country's products, prevents the larger employment of labour, thereby oppressing the poor, increasing the poor rates, lessening the shopkeeper's takings, setting the Church of England in direct antagonism to the masses of the people, and bringing odium and disgrace on the Christian name.

We earnestly invite all who are ashamed of such proceedings, and weary of seeing religion thus dragged through the mire, to meet and assist in protesting to the Government of our Country against a continuance of universally condemned legal robbery.

Anti-Extraordinary Tithe Association, Bridge House Hotel, London Bridge.

November 22nd, 1883."

Cement Sewer Pipe Works.

E. M. CASEY, Proprietor.

To those who have never witnessed it, the process of cement pipe manufacture is quite interesting. A few moments' ride by Michigan avenue car from the center of the city will land one almost before the door of the above named establishment at 256 Trumbull avenue. One may see here large quantities of solid looking pipes, and upon inquiry learn that some are intended for wells, others for chimneys, sewers, drains, etc., Special attention is called to their Well pipe from 12 to 30 inches in diameter, the latter size being large enough to admit a man to work inside, thereby saving expense in excavation.

ESTATE OF HENRY D. C. TUTTLE.

STATE OF MICHIGAN County of Lenawee ss

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian on Wednesday the 12th day of December, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three.

Present, Norman Geddes Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Henry D. C. Tuttle, late of Silver Lake, Kansas, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Albert E. Tuttle a brother of said deceased, praying that administration of said estate may be granted to Edwin B. Wood, or some other suitable person.

Thereupon it is ordered That Monday, the 7th day of January next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

An Editor's Reflections.

The editor of the Lockport Union is responsible for the following. Who has not thought in about the same strain? And in our sober moments too:

Every once in a while something or other occurs which brings up before us feelings of other days; we are solemn—we indulge in retrospection and dream of "what might have been." And, while in the mood, other serious thoughts succeed, one to another, and we are prone to reflect on such savings of the proverb-makers as "An hour once lost is gone forever," "What is past can never be recalled," etc., and we speculate as to the future even so much as to wish to raise the impenetrable veil that divides our life here from the shadowy realms beyond and know the mysteries that lie hidden there.

When we come to think seriously on the subject, what a confoundedly strange thing life is! What peculiar mysteries we ourselves are that we cannot even "know ourselves." And yet one thing is pretty certain, viz. that each and every one of us can say with a very comfortable degree of assurance "I am," although a goodly number of our great and shining lights have expressed themselves doubtful of even that.

Suppose sometime, you or ourself, friend reader, should wake up and find we were somewhere else and learn that this earthly existence had been all "in our mind," as slang parlance hath expressed it. It would be strange would it not? And yet a dream seems even as real as this sometimes. But enough of conjecture such as this. We will take it for granted that all things ARE. There is room enough for guesswork left after that.

Not very long ago, you and the rest of us were babies, nothing but squalling, ugly looking little chunks of incipient humanity. We have ceased to be such, and can never be babies any more. Let us be thankful.

A Regular "D. B."

Not long ago a well-known newspaper man took day board at the Sherman House, says the Chicago Times. He was at home in the place, and was a privileged character. One day he sauntered behind the office counter into the regions that are supposed to be sacred to gentlemen who wear diamonds and address congressmen, governors, tourists, porters, newsboys and other statesmen by their first names, when his eye happened to catch sight of his own name on a slip with others over the bookkeeper's desk. He would not have given it a passing thought had not the letters "D. B." been attached. He "flew off the handle" on the instant, and demanded an interview with the proprietor. That august functionary was found, and to him the irate journalist addressed a few remarks. "Do I owe you anything?" he asked. "No, sir," was the prompt reply. "I have paid my bills all right so far as you know, haven't I?" "Certainly. I have no complaint to make."

"Then why do you permit your clerk to post me over his desk as a 'D. B.?'"

"I do not; there must be some mistake."

The journalist assured him that there was no mistake, and that he had seen the objectionable and significant letters with his own eyes. The more he thought of it the madder he got. The proprietor could not pacify him until he promised to have the matter investigated and the guilty man punished. It was found that the night clerk had perpetrated the outrage, and that evening the injured citizen took an early opportunity to take him to task. "What did you mean by putting 'D. B.' after my name?" inquired the newspaper man. "O, go away," he replied, thinking his interlocutor was "chaffing," as was his custom; "don't bother me." "No, I won't go away, and I demand a civil answer to my question."

The clerk looked up and saw an angry man in front of him. Then his countenance was suddenly bisected by a grin, and he doubled up like a man with the colic. "You took day-board, didn't you?" he inquired, as soon as he regained his composure. "Yes, I did, and I have paid for all the day-board I have enjoyed." "So you have," was the soothing response, "but just come around here a minute, still I show you something. You see you are in good company. You are an associate of several millionaires and railroad magnates. They are each and every one designated the same way, 'D. B.' That is short for 'day-board.' Regular boarders are marked 'R. B.'"

The journalist spent a week's salary trying to bribe his audience with liquid nourishment to keep still, but like all good things the joke leaked.

Some physicians assert that a hearty meal at midday is injurious to the health. A five or six o'clock dinner, eaten slowly with the members of his own family, is far healthier. A heavy midday meal unfits professional men for carrying on any business in the afternoon, as it makes them heavy and sleepy, for nature requires some kind of repose to aid digestion. Our popular system of eating is wrong. The majority of persons thrust three heavy meals into about ten hours, and leave the body without a fresh supply of food for the remaining fourteen hours of the day and night. Two good meals, morning and evening, would be the proper plan, with perhaps a light lunch or cracker at about one o'clock in the day. This would allow both of the heavy meals an opportunity to digest before the next was taken. As to a heavy midday meal for men who have to tear around as if the next moment were to be their last, it is perfectly ridiculous, as the food, instead of digesting and forming blood, muscle and brain, acts as a block to those forces of nature—choking up a sewer, as it were. It is best to eat lightly in the middle of the day.

The story is told of an old hunter in Michigan who lost his way in the woods a number of times while the country was new. At length he secured a pocket compass and its use was explained to him by a friend. But shortly afterward he lost his way again and lay out as usual. When found he was asked why he did not travel by the compass. He did not dare to be said. He wanted to go north, and he "tried to make the thing point north, but it wasn't no use, 'twould shake, shake, shake round and point southeast every time.

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE, Dec. 5.—Mr. Hoar presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of Massachusetts opposing convict labor in the public works. A joint resolution of the Legislature of New Hampshire was also presented opposing further land grants to railroads and any renewal of forfeited lands. Bills were introduced to repeal the Internal Revenue tax and abolish the Internal Revenue Bureau; to recognize the legislative power of Utah; to indemnify Arkansas for the swamp and overflowed lands sold by the Government since 1857, donating part of the abandoned military reservation of Fort Smith for the benefit of public schools there; providing for granting public lands to soldiers and sailors of the late war; providing for appointment of a special commissioner to visit the principal countries of Central and South America to collect information looking to the extension of American trade and commerce. A joint resolution proposing a Constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacture, sale, or importation of alcoholic liquors, except for medicinal or chemical purposes. A bill providing for a patent ballot-box and counting device at elections was introduced, and a message being received from the President, the Senate went into executive session and adjourned.

HOUSE.—A resolution appropriating $20,000 for printing the records of the Supreme Court was referred to the Committee of the Whole. The customary resolution announcing the death of Thomas H. Herenden, of Alabama, was submitted, and out of respect for his memory the House adjourned, with the understanding that no business would be transacted the following day.

SENATE, Dec. 6.—Petitions and memorials were offered as follows: Compelling railroads to take out patents for lands granted or they revert to the people, removing the duty from barb wire, praying that lands granted the Oregon Central Railroad be forfeited and thrown open for settlement. Bills were introduced repealing the pre-emption and timber culture laws and amending the homestead law; restoring lands to the market in Minnesota and Wisconsin withdrawn in 1880 for the maintenance of dams, etc.; providing for the construction of a ship canal joining the waters of the Chesapeake and Delaware bays for means of military and naval defense. Joint resolutions were offered proposing an amendment to the Constitution giving women the rights of suffrage; also an amendment giving the President the right to veto separate items in appropriation bills while approving the remainder; requesting the President to demand from the Spanish Government repayment to citizens of the United States of money exacted from them on shipments of cattle to Cuba. At the expiration of the morning hour the Senate adjourned until Monday.

HOUSE.—M. Metcalf, of Iowa, took the oath of office and the House adjourned until Monday.

SECRETARY TELLER is under consideration a proposition to appoint the Indian graduates at the Carlisle Indian schools to subordinate positions as teachers in the new Indian schools in the West.

A PETITION from J. W. Niles, colored "Separatist," of Arkansas, setting forth that alleged unlawful combinations prevent him and his colored associates from exercising the right to make entries of public lands, charging cruel treatment on the part of the white citizens of Arkansas and asking relief, was presented to the Senate on the 5th by Mr. Sherman.

THE Deputy Commissioner of Internal Revenue says that the internal taxes collected for the present fiscal year are at the rate of $125,000,000 per annum. He estimates that the collection for the entire year will amount to $130,000,000. This estimate includes between six and seven millions to be collected for special taxes in April and May, but does not include the increase anticipated from spirits forced out by the law.

THE estimates for appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1885, has been transmitted to Congress by the Secretary of the Treasury. The amount estimated and required for all the expenses of the Government is $258,125,185, which is $22,987,282 less than the aggregate appropriations of the present fiscal year, and $57,154,537 less than the sum called for in the estimates submitted last year. The appropriations for the present fiscal year, including deficiencies and miscellaneous, are $305,112,587, the estimates on which these appropriations are based calling for $280,243,467.

A CALL has been issued by the President of the Workingmen's Association, of Lynn, Mass., for a National Convention of the Workingmen's party and the nomination of candidates for President and Vice President.

THE annual report of the Auditor General of Pennsylvania shows the receipts at the State Treasury last year to have been $6,775,430.10. Of this amount $2,089,332.95 was derived from the tax on corporation stock and limited partnership, $837,558.08 tax on gross receipts, $335,468.56 tax on bank stock, $374,819.47 tax on personal property, $404,764.65 tax on collateral inheritances, $235,880.13 tax on foreign insurance companies, $489,930.53 tavern licenses, $315,123.76 retailers' licences, $107,004.24 bonus on charters. The receipts greatly exceed the estimate of the State Treasurer made a year ago in his annual report.

THE Mount Hickory Iron Works and Rolling Mill, one of the largest manufactories of Erie County, Pa., were destroyed by fire on the morning of the 9th. The mill was mainly owned by William L. Scott and had a working capital of $250,000, and employed 250 men. Loss $200,000; insured for $90,000. A man, who gave the name of Frank Ward, of Sharon, Pa., was arrested for firing the building. He was noticed prowling around the neighborhood in a suspicious manner, and could not give a good account of himself.

FRANCIS J. PARMENTER, a coal dealer of Providence, R. I., was found dead in his barn with his skull fractured, on the morning of the 9th. John Martin and Joseph F. Bree, white, and Thomas Harket, colored, were arrested on suspicion.

REV. DR. JOHN O'MEARIS, corresponding secretary of the American Board of Foreign Missions, died at Boston on the 8th.

F. M. NICHOLS was arrested by United States officials on the 8th for running a postal agency in Wilkesbarre, Pa. He employed boys and delivered letters for one cent, which is just half what the Government charges for drop letters in cities where they have carriers.

THE New York Tribune on the 9th published articles exposing a ring of contractors who have defrauded that city out of large amounts by a system of unbalanced accounts. They were in collusion with the civil engineer, who made deceptive estimates.

A MOB at New London, Conn., on the 8th, smashed George S. Avery's store front, hanged him in effigy and threatened to tar and feather him. A widow of that place said he had broken his marriage engagement with her, and it was on that account the mob made the attack.

THE Penn Iron Company, of Lancaster, Pa., notified its puddlers on the 8th of a ten per cent. reduction in their wages to take effect on the 15th. It is probable the works will be shut down if the workmen refuse to accept the reduction.

THE President of Tufts College, Boston, stated recently that while public opinion appeared to be toward co-education, it was found inadvisable to admit women.

THE Annisquam Mill at Rockport, Mass., used for the manufacture of corset jeans, burned on the 9th. The loss is estimated at $400,000.

THE Central Labor Union of New York, on the 9th, passed a resolution urgently recommending the President of the United States to interfere in the case of O'Donnell, the murderer of James Carey, and to endeavor to procure a stay of execution.

WEST AND SOUTH.

THE Farmers' Congress of the United States convened in Louisville, Ky., on the 5th, to be in session three days. Sixty or seventy delegates were present, mostly from the South. The President, in his address urged the appointment of a Commissioner of Agriculture as a member of the Cabinet.

THREE negro children were burned to death in Columbia County, Ga., on the 5th. The parents went to church and locked the children in the house.

ON the 5th news reached Tombstone, Arizona, that a band of Apaches had attacked two Americans and seriously wounded them near Frontera, N. M. The news created considerable excitement at Tombstone, and General Crook's policy of murdering the women and children and leaving the fighting bucks to raid was strongly condemned.

A HEAVY rain and wind storm on the 8th blew down a large number of telegraph poles and wires at Denver, Col., blockading many of the streets.

HEAVY rains at Dallas, Tex., on the 6th partially flooded the city and did considerable damage to property.

GLICK BROTHERS' fertilizing tanks at the Chicago stock yards exploded on the night of the 5th, wrecking the entire building. There were fourteen men and two boys in the building at the time and it was thought several were buried in the ruins. Two men are known to have been fatally hurt and five more seriously injured.

SEVEN shocks of earthquake at Rosenden Springs, Ark., on the 5th lasted forty minutes, broke crockery and glassware in stores and houses and loosened large rocks in the cuts of the Kansas City & Memphis Railroad, which fell on the track. The shock was accompanied by a loud noise and violent jar of the earth.

AT Lynchburg, Va., on the 6th, Harrison Crews, colored, was convicted of incendiarism and sentenced to the penitentiary for twenty-six years.

JOHN J. JOHNSON and Coleman Hawkins, rich farmers of Anderson, Ind., quarreled about a ditch on the 5th and Hawkins shot Johnson and committed suicide.

A SPECIAL dispatch from Helena, Mont., on the 6th stated that during the month of October a man representing himself as Postoffice Inspector Stedman, and afterwards as Inspector Henderson, visited the postoffices between Miles City and Helena, swindling officials and banks of sums of money. He was arrested recently and proved to be a man named S. W. Scott.

THE Grand Jury now sitting at Elkhart, Ind., has been instructed by Judge Osborne to bring in indictments against news dealers handling obscene illustrated papers.

A little dot of a girl coaxed two nickels from her father on Thanksgiving day, saying she would use one for candy and the other she would give to the missionaries. Before executing her expressed intentions she lost one while at play, and running to her mamma, said: "Oh, mamma, I have lost my missionary nickel."

We Mean What We Say.

How They Meet and Part.

A gentleman lately took down verbatim the conversation of two fashionable ladies during a morning call—viz: "How do you do, dear?" "Pretty well, thank you." (They kiss.) "How have you been this age?" Pretty well. How have you been?" "Very well, thank you." "Pleasant to-day." "Yes, very bright, but had a shower yesterday." "All your family quite well?" "Quite well, thanks. How is yours?" "Oh, very well thank you." "Have you seen Mary B. lately?" "No, but I have seen Susan C." "You don't say so! is she quite well?" "Yes, very well, I believe." (Rising.) "Must you go?" "Yes, indeed; I have seven calls to make." "Do call again soon." "Thank you; but you don't come near me once in age." "Oh, you shouldn't say so, dear; I'm sure I'm very good." "Good bye." "Good bye, dear."—Exchange.

"Gale Forest gives the following pat reply to the above:

"Yes! and after writing that the gentleman discovered the strain upon his mental faculties had been so severe, he went out to "brace up." Just as he reached his destination, met a friend from out of town, when the following conversation was overheard and taken down by the writer, as an example for women, of men's "wit and wisdom." "Hellow! old fellow, how are you?" (They shake) "First rate, how are you?" "Tip-top!" "When dy'e get in?" "Just now." "Have something?" significantly.) "Well—yes, don't care-fi-do." (They step into a saloon, after cautiously looking around, to make sure no outsiders are about, to see they are breaking their pledge—pause—they emerge, innocently wiping their mouths, before putting into them their lighted cigars, and being primed," resumed:) "How's yer folks?" "All well; how's yours?" "All flourishing now; youngest boy had diphtheria, but all right now." "Crops good up your way?" "Well, yes, pretty fair." How do politics look?" "Bad—very bad—all democrats up our way; big democratic majority. (Takes out his watch.) "Thunder! ten minutes to 12,—must be off—got to see a man at 12." "Can't you come up to the house and take dinner?" "No, guess not to-day—got several pressing business engagements. Good bye." "Good bye." They again wring hands, and then rush away from each other as if fearing they might have to stand another treat.

Scientific Notes.

The human body is seven-eighths water. The blood is mostly water. All the tissues owe their softness to it, and even the bones have a share of this fluid. No organ of the body could perform its duty, nor could life be sustained without it. Alcohol burns up the water, diseases and destroys the body.

An iron rail properly made, it is said, will last as long as those of steel. The Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton road near Dayton has in use iron rails placed there thirty-one years ago which are yet in fair condition. They were made at Johnston, Pa., and the order required that they should be the best possible to be made. It is safe to say that no iron rails are made nowadays which would endure an equal amount of traffic for thirty years.

Denmark has lately acquired a torpedo-boat which is pronounced in England, where it was made, the largest afloat. Her displacement is fifty-five tons and her armament comprises four of the largest Whitehead torpedoes, each carrying eighty pounds of gun-cotton and a Hotchkiss revolving gun. She has a coal capacity of ten tons, which is equivalent to 1,200 miles at eleven knots, but her full speed is twenty knots. Despite her great size, the boat is capable of transportation by rail.

In a paper read before the British Medical Association, Dr. J. Hadden objects to the treatment of fevers by immersing the patient in cold baths for the purpose of directly abstracting heat. He says the theory upon which such treatment is advocated is incorrect. The high temperature is not itself the cause of the worst symptoms of fevers. Furthermore he declares that in practice such treatment is dangerous, and that the only safe way of using baths in fevers is by sponging the surface with moderately cold water. Even tepid or warm water will exert a cooling and soothing effect. The immersion method is too shocking.

Professor Donders, long known as the most distinguished oculist in Holland, recently delivered a lecture in Amsterdam, on color, which has been widely quoted. After an elaborate experimental analysis of various popular notions on the subject in hand, Professor Donders proceeded to demonstrate that, notwithstanding the prevailing theory, green must be ranked with the primitive colors, like red, blue, and yellow. Green, the Professor explained could not be produced by mixing pure yellow and blue—such a composition would be white, in the very nature of things. The green color which is apparently derived from the mixture or amalgamation of two paints is, in reality, says Professor Donders, the result of subtraction.

Good Advice for Everybody.

1. Never, under any circumstances assume a responsibility that you can avoid consistently with your duty to yourself and others.

2. Base all your actions upon a principle of right; preserve your integrity of character, and in doing this never reckon on the cost.

3. Remember that self-interest is much more likely to warp your judgment than all other circumstances combined; therefore look well to your duty when your interest is concerned.

4. Never make money at the expense of your reputation.

5. Be neither lavish or niggardly. Of the two, avoid the latter. A mean man is universally despised, but public favor is a stepping stone to preferment therefore generous feelings should be cultivated.

6. Say but little; think much and do more.

7. Let your expenses be such as to leave a balance in your pocket. Ready money is a friend in need.

8. Avoid borrowing and lending.

9. Wine drinking and cigar smoking are bad habits; they impair the health and pocket, and lead to a waste of time.

10. Never relate your misfortunes, and never grieve over what you cannot prevent.

11. Cultivate promptness in deciding upon matters that come before you; there are few objects more disagreeable than an undecided, vacillating man. Consider thoughtfully, but decide promptly.

12. Never break a business engagement of any kind, if it be possible to meet it. Let nothing cause you to become careless of business etiquette, integrity and promptitude.

13. Let truth and an unwavering faith in God underlie all your motives and actions.

VOL. XXXIV.--NO. 28 TECUMSEH, MICHIGAN, THURSDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 13, 1883. WHOLE NO. 172

Origin of Popular Phrases.

NAMOSE.—A Mexican phrase—an adaptation of the Spanish verb namar, meaning literally, "for me, so."

PASTY.—This word, which is now used as a vulgar synonym of dittery, is by no means of recent origin, as many suppose. It was really coined 300 years ago, and has been in use uninterrupted from that period.

POSE.—This term, which is extensively used in the United States and England to designate the person placed at the corner of workmen and working women is an improvement on the Dutch original, meaning employer.

BOGUS.—An Anglicism—the vernacular for counterfeit—the name of a forger who operated somewhat extensively across the water about thirty-five years ago. He passed false tokens and counterfeit bills to the amount of many thousand dollars, and hence the term "bogus" is applied to whatever is false and fraudulent.

A DELUSION, A MOCKERY AND A SNARE.—The fact that this familiar saying has about it a certain Biblical ring, has sometimes led to its being quoted as from one or other of the Hebrew prophets; the words are, in fact, an extract from the judgment of Lord Denman, of the English house of lords, on the appeal of Daniel O'Connell to that body from the verdict rendered at his trial.

RED TAPE.—An English expression, originated by Carlyle and made popular by Dickens. It was designed to represent the ceremonious delays and official formalities characteristic of the British governmental routine. It is similarly used in this country to ridicule the tardiness with which everything is effected by the formalism of government officials. The expression arises from the fact that government officers generally tie up their bundles of paper with red tape.

CANTEEN.—This is, perhaps, the only word in our language which, originally passed into a foreign tongue, and was afterward taken back in a modified form. As originally spoken by the Saxon, it was simply a tin can; but the Gaul, as is his wont, placing the noun before the adjective, and pronouncing the letter t as c brought it out as canon, pronounced can-ceen. Adopting a thousand other French terms, the obtuse Englishman took back his own original word in a new shape, without any inquiries on the subject, and hence we now say canteen instead of tin-can.

TO THE MANOR BORN.—This phrase, strictly construed, has perhaps a meaning. It is a form of expression that defines the privilege or position of an heir on whom is entailed some landed estate, the manor of a wealthy or noble family. But has it any authority to be used, as we frequently see it, as a technical or proverbial saying? Probably not. It is not a phrase known in law to define the legal status; and it is not a question of proverbial significance from any of our classic writers. It is apparently a perverted reading of the following passage in Shakespeare:

Horatio—Is it a custom?
Hamlet—Aye, marry is't;
But to my mind—though I am a native here,
And to the manor born—it is a custom
More honored in the breach than the observance. —Hamlet, Act 1, Scene 4.

OLD HARRY.—The popular attributes of the evil one are a human form with horns, tail and cloven foot. These are probably derived from the representations of the Greek satyrs and the Roman fauns—the wild gods of the mountains and groves; and it is probable that the name Old Harry was originally Old Hairy. The satyrs were said to have hair like goats; and "hayre," or "harie," in old English, signified a garment made of goat's hair.

On this supposition Old Harry or Old Hairy would have some affinity to Old Shock, a popular English name given to the demon that was supposed to haunt roadsides and wild pathways. Shock is a head of rough hair, a rough-haired dog. The evil one is sometimes called "the Lord Harry," a title perhaps given derisively; or it may allude to the Scripture term, "the god of this world," the prince of the powers of darkness.

The Model Farm.

The Keota (Iowa) Eagle has at last found a western man who is satisfied with a fifty acre farm. His name is Artemus Fisher, and he lives one mile and a half south of Keota. The Eagle tells the story of his management and of his success as follows:

He keeps one team of horses, three first class cows, and a nice little drove of the best hogs. He milks his cows for the creamery, and they made him nearly $200 last year; will perhaps do better this year. He will sell $500 worth of hogs this year, and have thirty stockers to keep over. He has $200 worth of flax-seed to sell; has an abundance of hay and grain to keep his stock in first-class condition during the winter. He keeps everything in apple-pie order about his farm; his cows revel in clover up to their eyes; he attends to feeding, watering and milking as regularly as the clock strikes, hence he gets the best results with the least possible feed. He keeps his stock under cover, and never allows any animal to shiver in the fence corners. He has a barn that is a model of convenience and economy. It is snow-proof, and as warm as the old kitchen. He has a first-class selection of fruit—not a large orchard, but a choice selection of the varieties that thrive and bear the best in this locality. Everything about the farm bears marks of intelligence, thrift and economy. Besides making a living for himself and the "old lady," he will sell at least $800 worth of stuff off his fifty acres this year, and not be exceeding former years either. There is no rush or hurry about this model farm. Everything goes off quietly and regularly. The expenses are very small and the gains sure.

A hotel in Boston built of stone and brick 66 and 69 feet frontage with basement and seven stories above the sidewalk, was moved nearly 100 feet in order to make a change in the street. One side was supported by eight granite columns twelve feet high, the whole building weighing 5,000 tons beside the furniture. The occupants of the stores and the hotel were not disturbed in the removal.

FOR SALE. One yearling thoroughbred Jersey bull, $35; one full-blood boar, $8 per pound, age 4 months; not of young cattle.
JOHN T. CLARK, Clinton, Mich.

FOR SALE CHEAP. A good property on Railroad st., opposite Slayton's warehouse. Has a dwelling house thereon and a vacant lot, for building purposes. Will be sold at a bargain. Enquire at the HERALD OFFICE.

FOR SALE. A house and lot situated within ten minutes walk of the P. O. at a bargain if sold at once. Inquire at the HERALD OFFICE.

Tecumseh Tannery.

I will pay greenbacks or gold for hides and sheep pelts. I have also first class hand made harness, both double and single which I would exchange for good milch cow, wood, corn or oats.

Why not save commission and sell your hides and sheep pelts direct to the tanner.

O. W. BEAN.

The court house committee will hold another meeting on the 15th inst.

The Clinton Council, Royal Templars of Temperance, is in a flourishing condition.

Landlord Passmore now rejoices in having one of the best hotel offices in Lenawee county.

J. W. Clement, formerly of Blissfield, has purchased an interest in the Albany (Mo.) Ledger.

H. D. Cutting, of Clinton, attended the Michigan Bee Keepers' Association at Flint last week.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Clinton M. E. church was held last Saturday and Sunday.

Dr. Wood's residence at Deerfield caught fire last week Tuesday and was damaged to the extent of $300.

There will be a Donation at the Baptist church for the benefit of Rev. C. E. Conley, on Thursday next, Dec. 20th.

Mr. & Mrs. I. P. Keyser returned home last week from a visit among Mrs. Keyser's relatives in New York state.

The club rates offered in this week's HERALD are the best ever presented through this office. Take advantage of them.

The oldest inhabitant scratches his head and tries to remember a former instance of such weather as this in December.

The regular annual meeting of the Lenawee Baptist Association will be held at Adrian on the 17th and 18th of this month.

Thanks to Hon. J. W. Connett, of Chicago, for the seventh annual report of the department of public works of that city.

Charlie Patterson has obtained a clerkship in a boot and shoe house at Cleveland, and will leave Tecumseh much to the regret of his friends.

St. Nicholas still leads all the juvenile monthlies. It has an extraordinary list of attractions for 1884 which can be found at length in another column.

Willis Merritt held a certificate in the Michigan Mutual Benefit Association of Hilldale, and an assessment has been ordered to pay the loss occasioned by his death.

The new office counter at the Lilley House was made at Slayton & Kinney's factory. Dell Wood, their efficient foreman, superintending the job. It is a model of beauty.

James Cook, of Raisin, has made a business engagement with the Studebaker Wagon Co., of South Bend, Ind., and has gone to Dakota to boom the wagon trade in that growing territory.

That sterling religious and secular weekly "The New York Observer" displays its prospectus in another column. Read it and heed it. You cannot find a better family newspaper on the continent.

Peck's Bad Boy has become a noted personage. People who like to read Peck's Sun, and thus enjoy a weekly interview with the young man can obtain it at reduced rates by clubbing with the HERALD.

There will be a grand Christmas party at Sage & Carey's hall, in Macon, on Tuesday night, Dec. 25th. Music by Frank Spear's band. Room managers, Rice Hendershot and Len Rhodes. Look out for a good time.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD.

TECUMSEH, MICH., DEC. 13, 1883.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

Sheriff Bidwell was in town yesterday.

Those gorgeous sunsets still hold the platform.

George Smith, of Toledo, was in town last Tuesday.

This has been a bad winter for the skate trade thus far.

Last Saturday was the last day for physicians to register.

The roller skate craze has struck Hudson full in the face.

The Blissfield B. B. C. are preparing for a Christmas ball.

At this writing the muskrat stands ahead as a weather prophet.

The citizens of Deerfield are much pleased with their new fire engine.

Prospectuses till you can't rest in this week's HERALD. Read them all.

Smoking cars are now attached to all Jackson Branch passenger trains.

The younger ladies of Deerfield are already making preparations for a leap year dance.

The Southern Michigan Medical Association holds its next meeting in Adrian, Dec. 21st.

The standard time is now sent by telegraph at 11:00 A. M., instead of 12:00 as heretofore.

A Fair and Entertainment was held last evening by the ladies of St. Johns Episcopal church of Clinton.

Dell Goodrich, of Clinton, has sold his farm of 60 acres in Clinton, to Mr. Harvey Palmer for $5,000.

Morenci Observer: The old pioneer Benjamin Hornbeck, who came near his death recently, by taking poison by mistake is gradually recovering.—It was Mr. H. that cut the first tree on the site where Morenci now stands in June, 1834.

Morenci Observer: "Go west, young man, go west and grow up with the country." Allen Metcalf, a native of Sugartown, went to Iowa a year ago, and at the late election was elected justice of the peace by an overwhelming majority.

The third lecture in the Star Course at Adrian will be given on Tuesday evening next, Dec. 18th by Dr. P. S. Henson, of Chicago. Subject, "A plea for the old." Dr. Henson was one of the most successful lecturers at Chautauqua last season.

All things considered, Texas Siftings is probably the best humorous paper now published in America. It is clubbed with the HERALD at almost half the regular rates. We should scarcely consider our club list complete without the Siftings.

Clinton News: We understand that all the telephones in this place will be taken out except one which will be put in at Burchard's drug store and which will serve to do all the business necessary; the switch board of course, will not be used.

Hudson Post: Last evening the clerks in the store of John K. Boies made their employer a surprise, it being his birthday. They gathered at his house about eight o'clock, passed a pleasant evening, and presented him with an elegant Unabridged Dictionary.

The State Grange meets at Lansing this week. G. B. Horton, Rufus Baker and Samuel Morey, with their wives are delegates from this county. The Weston Grange glee club are invited to "do" the vocal music, making the third time they have been thus honored.

The young people's social club in Dist. No. 5, will hold a tableau and magic lantern social at the residence of Uncle John Rector, Dec. 14. Mr. Rector desires a full house, and says "tell the young folks to come on, we have room enough for them all." Don't disappoint him.

The Louisville Courier-Journal is the leading paper of the South. It is a red-hot free trade organ and one of the ablest conducted papers in the Mississippi valley. People who may wish to take a representative Southern journal cannot find a better one. It is on our club list.

The "Michigan Farmer" has become a household word throughout the Wolverine state. It is the best agricultural weekly for a Michigan man, who takes but one paper of that kind. It will be found in our club list and people can procure it through us at the lowest club rates.

Hudson Gazette: One has to make an inspection of the Curtis mansion in Wheatland, to understand its beauty and convenience. It is fitted up with all the modern improvements, the last one (but by no means the least) being telephone connection with Michigan and Ohio towns. Stock buyers will especially appreciate this.

The December number of the Gardiner's Monthly is at hand. It contains besides its usual array of useful reading matter a fine steel portrait of John J. Thomas, the celebrated horticulturist. For gardeners and fruit growers this monthly cannot be excelled. Published by Chas. H. Marot; 814 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

Hough & Hosmer are ready for the Holidays. If you doubt it, step into their store.

We understand that R. C. Van Antwerp will open a restaurant the first door west of Anderson's dry goods store. Meals at all hours, oysters, cigars, etc.

Henry Smith, of Tecumseh, has purchased the old mill property at East Manchester, and intends to improve it soon. He will convert it into a flouring mill or a paper mill.

Adrian Press: A Morenci physician in one month has attended professionally thirteen families that rejoice in ten pound baby boys, but thus far nary a little girl has greeted him.

Hudson Gazette: The Hillsdale canning works have closed for the season. Notwithstanding the short crop they have put up 25,000 cans tomatoes, 20,000 cans pumpkin, 50,000 cans apples, besides, corn, beans, peas, pears, etc.

We took special notice of the fancy glass ornaments in C. A. Keil's show window. This ware is very beautiful and something entirely new for the trade. Mr. Keil has an immense line of Holiday goods and all would do well to look at his stock.

Mr. Sidney Baker, manager of our telephone exchange is again at his post. He was called to Ohio to attend the funeral of his father which caused him to be absent from his post for several days. His friends here sympathize with him in his bereavement.

Alvin Bailey hired a horse at Gregory's livery stable in Adrian last Friday stating that he was going to Tecumseh to see E. G. Cook about hiring out. Then he skipped out with horse and buggy and has not been seen since. Officers are now on his track.

Work has been begun on the new furnaces at the Methodist church. In consequence the service will be changed somewhat. There will be preaching in the lecture room of the church at 10:30 A. M., followed by the Sunday school, and prayer meeting at 7 P. M., in the same room.

The dancing school opening at the Armory Hall, Monday evening was a decided success. A number attended and the school will be continued.—Mr. Eugene Smith is a No. 1 dancing master and a perfect gentleman, and we hope a large school may be formed. Next school one week from next Monday evening.

Ex-Gov. Greenly, who died at Eaton Rapids and whose funeral occurred at Adrian, was elected lieutenant governor of this state in 1846, on the ticket with Gov. Felch, and upon the election of the latter to the U. S. senate, Mr. Greenly became acting governor from March 4th, 1847, to the end of the year.

S. M. Isbell & Co., of Jackson, a wholesale fruit house, have established a branch at Battle Creek. A. A. Kennedy, of Tecumseh, has taken an interest in the firm and will be the manager of the Branch House. His experience in that line of business will make him a valuable man for them. Success to him.

The N. Y. Sun is the same fearless, independent sheet it has been since the veteran editor, Chas. A. Dana, took control. It strikes from the shoulder every time, without fear or favor. In the words of the prospectus—which is printed elsewhere—"if you do not know the Sun, it is high time you got into the sunshine."

The celebrated Carman family will give one of their concerts at the Baptist church on Christmas night, Dec. 25th. As this concert is for the benefit of the sick and poor fund we hope to have a full house. Tickets 25 cts., children under 12 years, 15 cts. Tickets for sale at Baker & Hall's and Marks & Russell's drug stores.
COMMITTEE.

At the annual election of officers of Tecumseh lodge, No. 69, F. & A. M., held last Friday evening the following were elected:

W. M.—E. M. Conklin.
S. W.—Geo. Wilson.
J. W.—W. H. Arner.
Treas.—T. D. Mark.
Sec.—J. R. Hialey.
S. D.—Abner Wilson.
J. D.—C. A. Sharp.
Stewards—C. M. Burlingame, D. Zellars.

We took a business trip to Toledo last Friday, and while there stopped at the Burnett House. This house is centrally located, has lately been refitted and refurnished and is now provided with all the modern improvements. The cuisine is of the best, and rates are extremely reasonable for the accommodations furnished. Tecumseh people had better give the Burnett a trial when they go to Toledo.

The following are the officers of Tecumseh Lodge, 870, Knights of Honor for the year 1884:

D.—Dan'l T. Hall.
V. D.—A. W. Armstrong.
A. D.—H. W. Stevens.
Ge.—J. L. Schoolcraft.
C.—S. Whittier.
R.—C. A. Slayton.
F. R.—L. G. North.
T.—David McNair.
Sn.—Wm. C. Jordan.
Sn.—Fred. Chiveral.
P. D.—M. P. Brown.
Med. Ex.—L. G. North, M. D.
Rep. Gd. Lodge—M. P. Brown.
Alternate—C. A. Slayton.

Wm. Lamb, of Caro, this state, made the HERALD a call last week.

Mr. & Mrs. Cyrus W. Wells, of Minneapolis, arrived in town yesterday afternoon on the M. & O. road.

The ladies of St. Peter's church will give a social at Mrs. C. J. Brewer's on Wednesday evening, Dec. 19. All are invited.

Geo. Adamson has made several sales lately of solid gold watches, and has an immense line of the goods in stock.

The Misses DeWolf gave a party last Friday evening in honor of Miss Jessie Van Court, of Detroit, who is visiting them.

Slayton & Son received to-day a large fire and burglar proof safe made by the Mosler Safe and Lock Co., of Cincinnati. It is a beauty.

We stopped into Adams' Novelty Store yesterday, and were surprised to see what a complete stock of this line of goods they carry. Their store is quite an addition to the business of the town.

Mrs. John Griswold, while riding home from Adrian last Friday, was thrown from a buggy and received a broken arm. Dr. Samuel Catlin reduced the fracture, and the patient is improving daily.

The boys are again in the habit of jumping on the trains to and from the depot. The authorities wish to give timely warning and will proceed to take care of said boys according to the village ordinance if the offense is repeated.

The L. S. & M. S. railroad will sell round trip tickets at one fare as follows: For Christmas good going Dec. 21, to 26, returning good until Jan. 1. For New Years, good going Dec. 28 to January 2, returning good until January 8th.

The war concert last Thursday evening was listened to by a crowded house and the program itself gave the most entire satisfaction. The committee are indebted to Co. C and the musicians of the village for their assistance, which was freely and gratuitously given. The net proceeds increased the piano fund exactly $100.

Harper & Brothers, of N. Y., are justly entitled to the reputation of publishing the best combination of family periodicals in America. The Magazine, the Weekly, the Bazar and Our Young Folks furnish a good library upon current literary events.—Each in its particular field cannot be excelled. Announcements of the four may be found in another column.

Manchester Enterprise: On Thanksgiving evening the streets of our village were lighted for the first time. The common council having purchased 22 new lamps they were scattered about town in the most needful places. These with the four already provided illuminated our streets quite well, but the city fathers have decided that they need about a half dozen more in order to have the thing complete.

Clinton News: The mania of suicide seems to have reached the brute creation as well as human kind. At least D. Woodward is inclined to that opinion. A fine four year old colt belonging to that gentleman was found dead in his stable Sunday morning.—He had thrust his head through a small hole between his own stable and an adjoining one, and not being able to get it out again, choked to death. The hole was so small that the board had to be chopped apart in order to get the animal's head out, and the wonder was how he could have worked his head into such a small opening.

Blissfield Advance: A letter was received from the manager of the Toledo Base Ball Club, by Henry Carpenter recently, enquiring as to his desire to play ball professionally and for other information. Henry's skill on the diamond last summer was commented on very favorably. His position as first base man was filled with utmost satisfaction, his errors were few, and his record at the bat very fair. If he had any desire to play in a professional nine we believe he would play on an average with the best, and besides he is an honest, steady, industrious young man. The club here would lose a valuable member.

Hudson Gazette: The Gazette has for a long time been telling Hudson people to keep their eyes on the Grand Trunk scheme for a branch or line connecting this great thoroughfare with Cincinnati. The project is being canvassed again, and letters have been received here from Jackson parties feeling of the Hudson pulse on the question; and an informal meeting was held on Saturday evening, and a committee, consisting of Messrs. Boies, Fressdorf, Osborn and Abbott, appointed to visit Jackson this week, which they did, returning yesterday. We have not had time to converse with members of the committee; but we notice by the Jackson Patriot that an important meeting was held at the Hurd House, Jackson, being represented by Gen. Withington and others. It seems the scheme is to secure a branch of the Michigan & Ohio road to the Ohio line through Hudson. The enterprise is a very desirable one for this community, and the subject will no doubt, be duly presented at an early time.

The New York Weekly Herald is one of the old standard weeklies.—Like old wine, it improves with age. The prospectus appears elsewhere.

The Advance says: It may not be known to many, but the latitude of Blissfield is 41 degrees and 51½ minutes north.

Which reminds us that the 42d parallel of latitude runs through this village, the exact location being near the north line of Shawnee street, about one rod south of Brewer & Co's foundry.

Hon. William L. Greenly, of Adrian, ex-governor of Michigan, died in Eaton Rapids on the 29th of November. His remains were taken to Adrian for interment. Gov. Greenly was born in Hamilton, N. Y., Sept. 18, 1813, and he had consequently just passed the age of 70. He was a graduate of Union College, Schnectady, of the class of '21, and was admitted to the bar three years later. He removed to Adrian in 1836, where he has since resided. In 1837 he was elected to the state senate and served for two years. In 1845 he was elected lieut. governor, and when Gov. Felch, in February, 1847, was chosen United States senator, Mr. Greenley succeeded to the gubernatorial chair and filled out the unexpired term. He was a life long Democrat, and by the long ascendancy of the Republican party in this state was continued in private life. He had many qualities of leadership and always rallied about him a large circle of admiring friends.

A CORRECTION.

Our report in the last issue of the HERALD of the recent accident on the M. & O. R. R. at this place being incorrect we desire in this issue to make suitable correction. The victim of this accident was Gustave Vallenburg a Swede, who with his brother Victor and two other Swedes were riding on the flat cars of Conductor Alverson's gravel train. While approaching Tecumseh, after the day's work, it being cold, Conductor Alverson requested the men to go into the caboose where it was warm. Victor, a brother of the other two, had executed this order and Gustave was in the act of doing so, and had neared the end of the flat car, when George Munn, the rear brakeman, came out of the caboose with his lantern, it being 6 P. M., and dark. Mr. Alverson supposes that the light from the lant rn blinded Gustave's eyes so that he walked off the end of the car and fell between the car and the caboose, the trucks of which passed over him, crushing and mangling the right leg half way between the knee and hip joint, and badly cutting and bruising the left leg. Reaction from the shock of the injury did not take place sufficiently to warrant an operation until midnight, when the right leg was amputated near the hip joint by Dr. C. M. Woodward, assisted by Dr. H. W. Catlin, and in the presence of John J. Orr and Mr. Alverson. The operation was performed in one of the boarding cars.

The next day he was transferred to the residence of John S. Kinney, where he has since had every comfort of a good home and the best of care. He is watched over night and day by his brother Victor, and is having the most careful attention from his surgeons. He is now doing as well as can be expected. On the fifth day of the accident he was attacked with a disease known as hospital gangrene, a very dangerous complication, but by vigorous and skillful treatment this disease was arrested. The report that he would have to lose the other limb is untrue. Although it was badly injured and some portions became gangrenous and sloughed out, his leg will be saved, and his ultimate recovery is hoped for.

Barrows is fully prepared for any and all who may want pictures for Christmas and New Year's gifts. Note carefully the changes in price list at entrance of gallery. Special Holiday prices. Get one of my 8x10 pictures at 50 cents each. They are always natural, and I will warrant them equal to the photograph in every way, and remember, if pictures made by me are not satisfactory you need not take them. See the new scenic background put in for the Holidays. My extremely low prices for pictures will not justify me in giving you as prizes for patronage houses and lots, a business block or a dollar chromo, but I will give you full value for your money in good straight honest work.

DIED.

MORGAN—At her home in Macon township, one mile northeast of Macon village, Mrs. Henrietta Morgan, nee Boughner, on the 14th day of November, 1883, at the age of 32 years, 1 month and 11 days.

Oct. 3, 1851, was the day of her birth. Her native place was Snyder's town, Northumberland Co., Pa. In the spring of 1864, she came with her parents to Michigan. On the 13th of January, 1870, she was united in marriage with Mr. Charles I. Morgan, of Saline, who with four children survives to mourn the early fading of her life's "bright consummate flower." The deceased was characterized by an amiable disposition, which gained her a multitude of friends. The best Friend of the human soul was hers. Him she loved and served, and he proved her comforter in life and in death. In June, 1881, she made public profession of her faith in Jesus, and in company with her husband was received as a communicant of the Reformed Church of Macon, in whose choir she consecrated her voice in song. Very soon has the Master summoned: "Come up higher." But he found her watching. Calmly she bade her household and friends farewell, trustingly she committed herself to her Saviour, and then by angelic hands the key was turned in the golden key, which opes the palace of eternity." Her funeral obsequies were conducted by the pastor on Sabbath day, Nov. 17. A large audience attended to mourn her loss and to sympathize with her stricken family. Text of discourse: "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit."—Acts 7:59.

Franklin as a Writer.

His pen was as ready as his purse in the service of all human kindness. And what a pen it was! It could discourse metaphysics so clearly and lucidly as to make them seem plain moralizing. It could tear a sophism to pieces by a mere query. It could make a simple tale read like a subtile argument. He could be grave and he could be gay in a breath. He could spend as much wit and humor on a "Craven Street Gazette"—which was meant only to amuse an old landlady, away from home, and probably out of joint before her return from Rochester—as on a State paper designed to fire America and sting England. In another tone, he translates into human language, for the amusement of a country lady, the reflections in the garden of her house, of a gray-headed philosopher full seven hundred old, on the vanity of all things. His "Petition of the Left Hand" might have been composed by Addison. In it, the left hand bewails the partiality which educates the right hand exclusively. Some of Franklin's fables and tales have been absorbed into the thought of the world that their source is absolutely forgotten. Only in this way can we account for what was doubtless an unconscious plagiarism by an eminent sanitary authority last year of Franklin's "economical" project for diminishing the cost of light. The economy consisted simply in rising at six o'clock instead of [illegible] forenoon, and as Franklin's never become superannuated. Not every one who uses the expression, "to pay dear for one's whistle" knows that the dear whistle was a purchase made by Franklin when seven years old with a pocketful of pence. Franklin's store was too abundant for him to mind, though some of his fame went astray. "You know," he tells his daughter, "everything makes me recollect some story." But it was not recollection so much as fancy. His fancy clothed every idea in circumstance. When the illustration had served its turn, he was indifferent what became of it. Franklin [illegible] to himself when he felt [illegible] wanted any such mechanical aid. English had been learned from Pilgrim's Progress and the Spectator. He had the force of Bunyan without his ruggedness. He had the serene light of Addison with tenfold his richness and vigor. He sparkled with sarcasms as cutting as Swift's, but he sweetened with human [illegible]. Many of his inventions or adaptations—such as "colonial"—have been stamped long since as current English. But he did not covet the fame of an innovator, whether in language, in morals, or in politics. In language, he was even declared a foe to innovation. Writing to Noah Webster, in 1789, he protests against the new [illegible] "improvements" "advocated and practiced by [illegible]." He had as little ambition to be classed as an innovator in English. He wrote because he had something at the moment to say, with a view to accomplishing that single thing should it be in his power. [illegible]

Beauty

[illegible]

Pedigree of Maud S.

The remarkable trotting speed of a mile in 2:10, made by Mr. W. H. Vanderbilt's chestnut filly Maud S. at the Chicago Trotting Park, leads one naturally to look into the character of her ancestors, in order to account for her wonderful performance. Her sire was Harold (son of Rysdyk's Hambletonian and Enchantress) by old Abdallah. Her dam was Helen Russel by Pilot, son of Pacing Pilot; her third dam was Marta Russel, by Thornton's Rattler. It will thus be seen that Maud S. is from best stock and a good record might be expected of her. Her legs and feet are faultless in form, and apparently of a quality that will stand up under any amount of use, and judging from her actions on the track, she is as faultless in disposition as in conformation. This simply shows that breeding will tell, and that there is a great deal in pedigree, if made with some definite end in view. Like produces like.

Woman's best friend for relieving the many pains and weaknesses that are incidental to female life, and one that gives rosy cheeks, brightens the eyes, check every unnatural drain and creates a perfect picture of health and beauty, is Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. It purifies the blood strengthens the female system, and removes all feeling of languor, distress, pimples, sores and weakness, producing dreamless slumber and painless regularity of natural functions.

The breakfast taken in winter will determine our efficiency for work in the day, and will so influence our whole being for that period of time that no after-meal can correct. The breakfast in winter must contain more nitrogenous food, than in summer. It is absolutely needed. You must store heat to furnish material for absorption and for maintaining vitality; add to this nitrogenous food something that will disengage heat from the blood and keep up temperature and you may defy the coldest day. Your face may feel it, your hands may feel it, but your body will be impervious to it and go on disengaging that inward heat which can alone stand against the lowest temperature without. If this first meal has been properly attended to we may presume that vital action can be maintained at full force for five hours at least before it needs replenishing.

Many who long suffered from urinary and digestive diseases, causing nervousness, weakness and debility, after trying bitters, kidney medicines, iron medicines, etc., without benefit, have found permanent relief in from one to three bottles of Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla, the only perfect blood purifier and strengthener. Hundreds of letters to the proprietors have testified to its superiority over the many pretended cures so largely advertised by means of bogus certificates that are bought and paid for.

The Commercial Bulletin remarks that the American nose can now be wiped with an American made silk handkerchief, but no American nose can be wiped with a domestic linen handkerchief, and moreover, no American heart beats beneath a domestic linen bosom. Let linen be a little better protected and linens would be sold cheaper in price and better in quality than the imported linens at the present time. Not a yard of linen is made in the United States. And yet no country is better adapted to flax raising or manufacturing.

The fault with most all cough preparations is that they contain morphia, and are absolutely injurious to the stomach and nerves. That simple preparation of wild cherry bark, called Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, contains no morphia and yet will cure a cough or cold in less time than any other compound. It is the only reliable cure for consumption.

A little tot of a girl roasted two nickels from her father on Thanksgiving day, saying she would use one for candy and the other she would give to the missionaries. Before executing her expressed intentions she lost one while at play, and running to her mamma said: "Oh, mamma, I have lost my missionary nickel."

Don't neglect your cough! Ayer's Cherry Pectoral will quickly cure it and prevent consumption.

That others can hurt us, only shows how dependent we are upon them for comfort.

Why do you suffer with Back Ache, Pain in the Chest, Rheumatism, or lameness anywhere when a Hop Plaster will surely give you relief? Druggists sell them, 25 cts.

"The bullet went in here," he said, touching the side. "I don't feel any pain, and must be bleeding inwardly if at all, I think."

ZOA-PHORA
The Great Remedy for all Complaints peculiar to WOMEN.

Middlewave, Ind., Dec. [illegible]
Dr. Pengelly:
Dear Sir: [illegible] done for me what it does for many. Desiring to benefit suffering women, I add my testimony to the value of Zoa-Phora. For five years I suffered greatly with Prolapsus, being obliged to use a supporter during all those painful, weary years, but, thanks to your medicine, I can do come. I laid it off after using one and a half bottles. I am not well, but I work all the time, and am better than I ever expected to be. You may use my letter, and if any one wishes to write me for more information, give them my full address. Mrs. [illegible]
JERSEYVILLE, Ill., April 25, 1882.

Dr. Pengelly:
Dear Sir:—I am more than pleased with the effect of your Zoa-Phora in our daughter's case. I am surprised to see how she has improved. She is gaining in weight and color and I think feels better than she ever did. Her nerves are steady, and the distress in her chest is entirely gone. I firmly believe that Zoa-Phora is all that has saved her life. I am willing you should use my letter, for I am not afraid to tell what a wonderful cure your medicine is. Yours respectfully,
MRS. SARAH RANDOLPH.

N. B.—This was a case of suppression.

From Mrs. John Spitler,
No. 28 Wilt St., Fort Wayne, Ind.
I have suffered for sixteen years with spasmodic pain in my head and general nervous debility. Recently I had a severe attack of pain in my head, caused by weakness and nervous exhaustion. I thought I should die. My husband said we would test Zoa-Phora thoroughly. He gave it to me according to directions for severe cases, and in less than two hours I had complete relief. I advise all ladies who suffer from nervous or sick headache, or any form of female weakness, to use Zoa-Phora. There is no medicine to compare with it.

DR. A. TRASK'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.
It instantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.
The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.
All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.
It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years,
This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.
Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

COMPOUND OXYGEN NOT A DRUG

A NEW TREATMENT.
For Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, Dyspepsia, Catarrh, Headache, Debility, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all Chronic and Nervous Disorders.

A CARD.
We the undersigned, having received great and permanent benefit from the use of "COMPOUND OXYGEN," prepared and administered by Drs. STARKEY & PALEN, of Philadelphia, and being satisfied that it is a new discovery in medical science, and all that is claimed for it, consider it a duty which we owe to the many thousands who are suffering from chronic and so-called "incurable" diseases to do all that we can to make its virtues known, and to inspire the public with confidence.
We have personal knowledge of Drs. Starkey & Palen. They are educated, intelligent and conscientious physicians, who will not, we are sure, make any statement which they do not know or believe to be true, nor publish any testimonials or reports of cases which are not genuine.

DR. B. MINCER,

Scientific Optician!

I have devoted 25 years wholly to a study of the eye, and how to aid vision properly, and I make a specialty of fitting glasses to the eyes that have been injured by cheap, inferior glasses. I manufacture every kind of glasses, and guarantee satisfaction. Read what prominent physicians of Adrian say:

Having for some time past used glasses to improve my sight, without satisfactorily gaining my object; I called on Mr. Mincer, optician, of Detroit, who readily adapted glasses to my eyes, with which I am so well pleased, that I cheerfully speak in his favor. His method of examining and its application in selecting glasses to fit the eye can only be acquired by a knowledge of the useful organ to which must be added extensive experience. He has also adapted glasses to Mrs. Baker's eyes with which she is well pleased. I recommend him to all who need glasses adapted to their wants; poor glasses are an abomination.
V. A. BAKER, M.D.
ADRIAN, Nov. 18, 1882.

I have used spectacles bought of Mr. B. Mincer for the past three months, and find them superior to any I have ever used, and can cheerfully recommend him to anyone in need of glasses, and the benefit of his experience in the science of optics to adjust proper lenses.
DANIEL TODD, M.D.

I have investigated the work of Mr. B. Mincer, optician. I have reason to believe that he understands his profession, and adjusts excellent glasses on scientific principles. C. RYND, V.D.S.

A Primitive Tribe.

Dr. Hunter describes a peculiar tribe in India which has preserved an extreme primitiveness. The people are called Leaf Wearers, because they wear the costume of Adam and Eve before the fall; or, more strictly speaking, they did so until the English persuaded them to adopt cloth.

In 1871 the English officer called together the clan, and after a speech handed out strips of cotton for the women to put on. They then passed in single file to the number of 1,900 before him, made obeisance to him, and were afterward marked on the forehead with vermillion as a sign of their entering into civilized society. Finally, they gathered the bunches of leaves which had formed their sole clothing into a great heap, and solemnly set fire to it. This leaf-wearing tribe had no knowledge of the metals till quite lately, when foreigners came among them, and no word existed in their native language for iron or any other metal. But their country abounds in flint weapons, so that the Juangs form a remnant to our own day of the stone age. "Their huts," writes the officer who knows them best, "are among the smallest that human beings ever deliberately constructed as dwellings. They measure about six feet by eight feet. The head of the family and all the females huddle together in this one shell, not much larger than a dog kennel." The boys and the young men of the village live in one large building apart by themselves; and this custom of having a common abode for the whole male youth of the hamlet is found among many aboriginal tribes in distant parts of India.

One of the Worst cases of Salt Rheum Cured by Rheumatic Syrup.

Wolcott, N. Y., May 27, 1882.
Rheumatic Syrup Co.:

Gents—I take this opportunity to express my thanks for what your Syrup is doing for me. I have been troubled with rheumatism for years, and salt rheum has been nearly all over my body, but for the last few years has settled in my right arm, my arm being broken out the entire length of it. I have used every remedy I could hear of for rheumatism and salt rheum but found nothing to relieve the pain, have been so I could not lie in bed at night. I commenced taking Rheumatic Syrup; have taken two bottles; it has stopped all pain. I can now get my regular sleep; the salt rheum has nearly all disappeared; in fact, I am feeling better this Spring, since I commenced taking your Syrup, than I have for years before. The Rheumatic Syrup is truly a great blood purifier and a sure cure for rheumatism, for I have improved every day since I commenced its use until now I am a well man.
Nelson Moore.

Our duties would be seldom disagreeable if we did not perversely resolve to think them so.

Is Fun Better than Physic?

Fun is excellent; a hearty laugh is known the whole world over to be a health promoter; but fun does not fill the bill when a man needs physic, on the other hand people take too much physic. They would be more healthy, live longer and enjoy life thoroughly if they used Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic, which cures all blood disorders, indigestion, kidney and liver troubles, removes pimples, and is a perfect tonic. Can be taken by the most delicate. Only 50c a bottle, of Baker & Hall.

The prince of Wales has been re-elected grand master of the free-masons in England.

Ruin Wrought in the Forest.

How depressing it is to see acres of trees cut down in the midst of a noble forest. How saddening it is also to see that thin spot in the midst of your otherwise abundant hair. Stop it at once by the use of Parker's Hair Balsam. For actual efficiency this famous article stands at the head of its class. Elegant for the toilet, delicious in odor, and restores the original color to gray or faded hair. Economical, as a slight occasional application keeps the hair and scalp in perfect order.

Gen. Hancock and staff, has gone to the Pacific coast on military business.

Colorless and Cold.—A young girl deeply regretted that she was so colorless and cold. Her face was too white and her hands and feet felt as though the blood did not circulate. After one bottle of Hop Bitters had been taken she was the rosiest and healthiest girl in the town, with a vivacity and cheerfulness of mind gratifying to her friends.

Speaker Carlisle is receiving advice at the rate of 300 letters per day.

Lapeer, Mich., Feb. 2, 1881.
"I am in receipt of your circular. I keep a good supply of your Downs' Elixir (all the sizes), believing it to be one of the best Cough Remedies put up. I also keep Dr. Baxter's Mandrake Bitters, and Henry & Johnson's Arnica and Oil Liniment.
U. D. Bristol, Druggist.

The above named remedies are all warranted to give satisfaction, and can be found in any first class drug store.

The man who gives his children habits of truth, industry and frugality, provides for them far better than by giving a fortune.

Extreme Tired Feeling.

A lady tells us "the first bottle has done my daughter a great deal of good her food does not distress her now, nor does she suffer from that extreme tired feeling which she did before taking Hood's Sarsaparilla." A second bottle effected a cure. No other preparation contains such a concentration of vitalizing, enriching, purifying and invigorating properties as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

The three most difficult things are to keep a secret, to forget an injury, and to make good use of one's leisure.

If your lung-trouble is of a scrofulous origin, Ayer's Sarsaparilla will do you more good than any other medicine.

KING OF THE BLOOD.

The Most Thorough Purifier of the Blood Yet Discovered.

Cures all Humors, from a Common Eruption to the worst Scrofula.

It purifies the Blood.
It invigorates the Liver.
It regulates the Bowels.
It strengthens the stomach.
It gives vivacity instead of lassitude, strength instead of weakness, and robs life of its burdens, to the aged.

Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Disordered Liver, Constipation, Nervous Affections, General Debility, in short all the numerous diseases and disorders caused by impure blood are speedily conquered by this powerful corrector, the chief and sovereign of all ancient or modern medical discoveries—KING OF THE BLOOD.

Its name is the best description, as it is a royal dispenser of the blessings of health and vanquishes the foes that lurk in the blood.

It banishes PIMPLES, SALT RHEUM, SCALY ERUPTIONS, ULCERS, SCALD HEAD, FEVER SORES, and all SCROFULOUS DISORDERS.

It checks CONSUMPTION in its early stages. It has frequently cured it when advanced.

It disperses TUMORS and CANCERS without the Surgeon's knife.

It cures DROPSY, general or partial.

It cures FEMALE WEAKNESS and DISEASE.

It reduces in a safe and effectual manner all swellings, external or internal.

It eradicates the effects of Venereal Disease and Mineral Poisons, and establishes a sound constitution.

Many certificates, much further information and full directions for using, will be found in the pamphlet, "Treatise on Diseases of the Blood," in which each bottle is enclosed.

Price $1 per bottle containing 12 ounces, or to 56 doses. Sold by dealers in medicine.

If your druggist does not happen to have it on hand, request him to order a supply of it for you, as it will be cheaper than for you to order direct of us, and less trouble.

EIGHT THOUSAND DOLLARS CASH.

STATEMENT OF S. L. GROAT.

I have been afflicted with Rheumatism for the past twenty-three years; the last three years I have been obliged to use crutches all this time. I have tried every Rheumatic Remedy I could hear of, and have paid out in cash over eight thousand dollars, and I can solemnly say that I have never taken a medicine that has given me as much relief as Wilson's Lightning Remedy. And I consider it the best remedy for Inflammatory or Acute Rheumatism that exists, and will give relief quicker than any other known remedy. My son was afflicted with the disease, and after taking the first dose he experienced a relief, and was perfectly cured of the disease after taking eight doses. S. L. GROAT.

FULL DOGLETS.

A man who had traveled about,
Was heard very plain to speak out,
"I have chewed in all lands,
But the finest of brands
Is the 'Bull Dog' without any doubt!"

A man up at Kalamazoo
Said no decent tobacco he knew;
But the "Bull Dog" he tried—
Was so well satisfied
He bought a whole caddy to chew.

A resident at a Way-station
Was grumbling about his location.
He said: "I'd not mind
If I only could find
'Bull Dog Plug' in this part of creation!"

An old man who used it before,
Saw a "Bull Dog" sign over a door;
He said: "While I'm by,
I'll procure a supply,"
And bought all they had in the store.

An "old timer," not noted for gumption,
Said his son nearly died of consumption.
But his health was renewed
When the "Bull Dog" he chewed.
That he died was the common presumption.

But the steady increasing demand
Shows the chewers do all understand,
Though "Bull Dog" don't cure
All the ills we endure,
'TIS THE FINEST BY FAR IN THE LAND

ESTATE OF JOHN PENNINGTON.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, on Tuesday the fifth day of November, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three.

Present, Noah Cheeseman, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of John Pennington, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of John M. Pennington, executor of the last will and testament of said deceased, praying that he may be allowed the expenses of the administration of said estate thus far incurred, and all legacies that have become due, and praying for the allowance of the final account, and for a decree of the residue of said estate to the persons entitled thereto, and for such other orders in the premises as shall be agreeable to law, and for his discharge.

It is ordered, That Monday, the fifth day of January next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause why a license to sell the real estate of said deceased should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulated in said County, three successive weeks previous to said time of hearing.

St. Nicholas,

Edited by Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge

The New York Tribune once said: "In the avalanche of immoral literature that threatens the children, some strong, virile, wholesome and really attractive magazine is required for them; and St. Nicholas has reached a higher platform, and commands for this service wider resources in art and letters than any of their predecessors or contemporaries." The reference to the wide resources in art and letters commanded by St. Nicholas was never more fully illustrated than by the extraordinary list of attractions which that magazine announces for 1884. The following will be some of the leading contributors:

Louisa M. Alcott, J. T. Trowbridge, Captain Mayne Reid, Hjalmar Hjorth Boyesen, Maurice Thompson, Frank R. Stockton, Charles Dudley Warner, Joaquin Miller, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney, Julian Hawthorne, Celia Thaxter, Mary Mapes Dodge, Lieut. Frederick Schwatka, Rose Hawthorne Lathrop, E. S. Brooks, George W. Cable, Chas. G. Leland, Susan Fenimore Cooper, John G. Whittier, "H. H.," W. O. Stoddard, C. P. Cranch, and scores of other distinguished writers. The best artists and engravers illustrate the magazine. It has been truly said that the reading of St. Nicholas is for boys and girls who are fortunate enough to have it. In no other books or periodical is instruction so happily blended with recreation and amusement.

The price is $3.00 a year, or 25c a number. Booksellers, newsdealers and postmasters receive subscriptions, or remittances may be made direct to the publisher by money or express order, bank check, draft or in registered letter. Address THE CENTURY CO., New York.

HERE WE ARE AGAIN.

The steady and continual work we gave the past season to our gigantic clearance sales left our Mammoth Outfitting Establishment in proper shape for the reception of our

Fall and Winter Stock!

To say that we were successful would not half tell the story. OUR TRADE ALMOST DOUBLED, our customers were more than pleased with the bargains we gave them, and we were highly gratified with the liberal patronage bestowed upon us, and this season we intended to strive harder than ever to merit the continuance of the same.

BOYS' & CHILDREN'S CLOTHING.

We have just opened up and put in stock all the new shapes and Styles of Little Folks' Clothing, among which may be found some pretty and attractive garments. Henceforth we shall carry a larger line of these goods than ever. Our trade in this Department has met with such a large increase that we can well afford to, and this increase of trade enables us to sell at

SMALLER MARGINS THAN EVER BEFORE.

With us increase of trade means a decrease of profit. Not only shall our prices be the lowest, but we will carry ten times as many goods as any other house in the city. Our Boys' and Children's Department has become very popular, not only because it is fitted up with a view to accommodate our customers, but because the best makes, the prettiest styles and the most attractive assortment of this line of goods can always be found there.

Men's & Youths' Clothing!

We have selected the finest and most desirable goods for this department that were ever brought to the city; in fact the goods look so well as we open them up that we feel sure of selling them without much trouble. The reliable class of goods we handle, together with the uniformly low prices which are characteristic in our institution, are found to meet with public approbation. This department is crammed with new goods, ready for inspection and sale.

Gents' Fine Furnishings!

There is no more complete department of the kind in the state. We have just put in stock several cases of new goods, and are every day receiving fresh additions. It is filled to completion with all the latest styles in Gloves, Hosiery, Neckwear, Undershirts, Collars, Cuffs, Shirts, Handkerchiefs, Suspenders, &c., and everything at popular prices. We can guarantee to save you twenty-five cents on every dollar you spend with us in this department.

Everybody is invited to examine our Stock whether they wish to buy or not.

Harper's Magazine.

ILLUSTRATED.

Harper's Magazine begins its sixty-eighth volume with the December Number. It is the most popular illustrated periodical in America and England, always fully abreast of the times in its treatment of subjects of current social and industrial interest, and always advancing its standard of literary, artistic and mechanical excellence. Among its attractions for 1884 are: a new serial novel by Wm. Black, illustrated by Abbey; a new novel by E. P. Roe, illustrated by Gibson and Bellmann; descriptive illustrated papers by George H. Boughton, Frank D. Millet, C. H. Farnham, and others; important historical and biographical papers; short stories by W. D. Howells, Chas. Reade, &c.

THE SUN

NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of THE SUN have gone out from our establishment during the past 12 months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of all THE SUNS printed and sold last year you would get a continuous strip of interesting information, common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the moon, then back to Printing House square, and then three-quarters of the way back to the moon again.

But THE SUN is written for the inhabitants of the earth; this same strip would girdle the globe twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of THE SUN during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and if his wife or his grandfather has spent another hour, this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading, night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

THE SUN is, and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without the fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the republican party must go, and must go in this coming year of our Lord, 1884. If you know THE SUN, you like it already, and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know THE SUN, it is high time to get into the sunshine.

TERMS TO MAIL SUBSCRIBERS

The several editions of THE SUN are sent by mail postpaid, as follows:

DAILY—50 cents a month; $6 a year; with Sunday edition, $7.

SUNDAY—Eight pages. This edition furnishes the current views of the world, special articles of exceptional interest to everybody, and literary reviews of new books of the highest merit. $1 a year.

WEEKLY—$1 a year. Eight pages of the best matter of the daily issues, an Agricultural Department of unequaled value, special market reports, and literary, scientific and domestic intelligence, make THE WEEKLY SUN the newspaper for the farmer's household. To clubs of ten with $10, an extra copy free. Address I. W. ENGLAND, Publisher, The Sun, N. Y. City.

NEW YORK HERALD

Weekly Edition $1 a Year.

It contains all the general news of the daily edition of the Herald, which has the circulation in the United States.

Independent in Politics,

it is the most valuable chronicle of political news in the world, impartially giving the occurrences and opinions of all parties, so that all sides may be known. In the department of the Herald has always been distinguished by the fullness of its cable dispatches. The new transatlantic telegraph cables will increase facilities.

Foreign News

The Farm Department of the Weekly Herald is practical. It goes to the point, and does not give wild theories. The farmer will save many more than from the suggestions of the farm department alone, concerning soil, cattle, crops, trees, buildings, gardening, poultry and agricultural economy.

"The Home"

instructs the housewife and the children in regard to economical and tasteful new dishes, the fashions, and the making of home comforts. In addition are given latest reports of trade and the condition of money, columns of miscellaneous reading, poetry, a complete story every week, jokes and anecdotes, sporting news.

Produce Markets,

Popular Science,

the doings of well known persons of the day, a department devoted to

Sermons and Religious Notes

While the Weekly Herald gives the latest and best news of the world, it is also a special favorite for the family.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

BRITTON BUZZINGS.

S. J. Whinfe has charge of Britton & Sons' store.

Two improvements could be made by changing the name of the P. O. and burning up the old school-house.

Ed. Ranch has moved into his new house.

Edgar Wells and Jos. Exelby have both fine residences nearly completed.

A splendid location for a good physician, and the right man has only to come here and step right into a good paying ride.

Among the other improvements in this thriving burg, the store of John Britton & Son has a prominent place.

The stave mill will soon be rebuilt. It will stand almost directly east of Waring & Kniffin's saw mill, and the way the staff bolts are rolling in shows a good prospect for business the coming season.

There is considerable speculation as to what the M. & O. and Wabash roads will do in regard to depot accommodations, and everybody concedes that a union depot is just what is wanted, at least by the public.

If the right man would put up a grist mill here he could get a good bonus as a starter. What has become of that project of a stock company for this purpose?

S. A. Babcock, the gentlemanly superintendent of the stave factory, who was quite seriously hurt a few weeks ago in Adrian, has so far recovered as to be able to walk without crutches or cane, but his gait reminds us of a turkey who has narrowly escaped a thanksgiving dinner.

Considerable feeling was indulged in at the oyster supper at the church the other evening, besides feeling around in a boiler full of soup for the oyster. We refer to the sliding scale of prices: Children, 20c; adults, single ticket, 35c; couple, 75c. Some suppose this was because two stood a better chance of getting onto the oyster than one, but we can tell you all about it. You see, there has been so much brain work over the numerous ditch assessments, the oyster tariff kind o' got mixed up and was apportioned out on the same principle. The more you pay the less you get.

SPRINGVILLE SNUFF

Mr. Herbert Geddes has purchased a half interest in the Lafoon Record, Faulk county, Dakota, and several copies of the newsy sheet have been received here.

Some of the Union folks are trying to have Springville folks come over to the new depot after their mail. Efforts have been made to stop such a movement, and as yet the P. O. remains with us.

Mrs. Walker is very sick at Smith's hotel.

Samuel Kirkby and Wm. Clayson have formed a copartnership, and gone into the wood business, near Lenawee Junction.

The church social of Ridgeway will give a masked tea party at the lecture room of the M. E. church, in the village of Ridgeway, on Friday evening, Dec. 28th, 1883. A cordial invitation is given to all to attend this novel entertainment and join in the exercises of the evening.

By order of Committee.

Blissfield Advance: "Why don't you have some manufacturing to induce people to come here?" is a question often asked by visitors and strangers. A question easily answered. Our business men and capitalists take no measures or even attempt to induce any one to open or start an enterprise of any kind. While other cities and villages make vigorous and successful efforts to secure manufacturing interests, Blissfield is doing nothing absolutely nothing.

Morenci Observer: A fond father and son recently visited a store in Jasper, and the parent, seeing a rubber ball worth about five cents, and thinking it would be a nice thing, quietly slipped it into the boy's pocket. It cost the hopeful sire just five dollars to settle, and now the old man thinks it an unwise thing to steal in a store especially when the proprietor is keeping a sharp look out.

Adrian Times: Raisin farmers have at last waked up to the importance of graveling the sandy road from the Friendly church east. For years they have pulled through this fearful sand and hadn't enterprise enough to remedy the evil. The sand is so light through there that a mortgage won't hold on the real estate; the road has been almost impassable except in wet weather.

The holidays are almost here.

MATRIMONIAL.

At seven and one half o'clock on the evening of Dec. 12th inst., at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Geo. Lester, Mr. Dell Bonney, of Rollin, and Miss Mary Lester, of Ridgeway, were united in the bonds of matrimony by Rev. B. F. Rapp, pastor of the Church of Christ, in East Ridgeway. The party was a most pleasant affair, and the fine array of wedding gifts betoken the esteem in which the young couple are held:

VERITAS.

Artistic Monumental Work.

The Cardoni monumental works, F. A. Cardoni, proprietor, located at No. 22 Gratiot avenue, Detroit, is unquestionably one of the most worthily celebrated establishments of the kind in the West. Mr. Cardoni is a thorough artist in his profession, and all work done by him bears the impress of a master hand. His designs are invariably possessed of such strikingly beautiful proportions that when competing with other manufacturers they are usually accepted. He is an extensive importer of the productions of foreign artists, and being one of the best judges of sculpture in the country, it may be readily surmised that the assortment to be seen at his warerooms is a rare one. Having for quite a number of years been the recognized head of the profession in this section of the country, he can be relied upon implicitly. Mr. Cardoni's gallery is one of the attractions of Detroit, and our readers are cordially invited to visit it free of cost when in Detroit. The Holiday season is at hand and you cannot select a more beautiful gift than a piece of statuary from this celebrated gallery.

The Adrian Record gives this political reminiscence:

There is much talk nowadays about the bitterness of party feeling. But there was a time in the history of Michigan when party lines were more tightly drawn than now. When Alpheus Felch was governor, the democrats were in control of the state. Charles M. Croswell, then a young man, made application to be appointed notary public. In due time the governor's secretary wrote to him in answer, that the governor had learned that he was a whig and hence could not appoint him. Soon after this Gov. Felch resigned to accept the U. S. senatorship, Lieut. Governor Greenly became governor. Meeting Mr. Croswell on the street a few days later, Gov. Greenly stopped him, and in his bluff, outspoken style remarked "Well, Charley, I hear that the governor wouldn't appoint you notary public because you were a whig." Mr. Croswell answered that such was the fact. "Well," replied Gov. Greenly, "just wait till I get over there, I'll appoint you." And he did, which was the first appointment Ex-Gov. Croswell ever received.

The following resolutions were adopted by Clinton Lodge, No. 135, F. & A. M., on the death of John F. Schreder, of which the deceased was a consistent and worthy member:

Resolved, That by the death of our aged worthy brother, John F. Schreder, our Lodge has lost a most worthy brother, the community a patriotic and upright man and citizen, and the relatives an affectionate and faithful friend and counselor.

Resolved, That this Lodge deeply sympathize with the relatives and friends of our departed brother in their bereavement, and feel assured that our and their loss is his gain, and much consolation is afforded by the unselfishness and purity of his life and his peaceful departure.

Resolved, That the example of such a man is worthy of the highest respect and esteem and should be held in affectionate remembrance.

The sweet remembrance of the just
Shall flourish when they sleep in dust.

A FARMER'S PAPER.—We ask attention to the advertisement of THE OHIO FARMER, of Cleveland, O., in this issue of our paper, and recommend it as one of the oldest and most valuable agricultural and family papers of the country.

Take your children to see Eva, Marks, the trick donkey, and mammoth blood hounds in Uncle Tom's Cabin, at the Opera House on Tuesday, Dec. 25.

MRS. DAVID MONFORT.

We clip the above from the Junction City Union, published at Junction City, Kansas. The Mrs. David Monfort to which it refers was the youngest sister of our esteemed citizen, Mr. J. S. Hendryx.

Mrs. David Monfort died Friday morning, October 30th, 1883, at half past nine, A.M., aged sixty-five years, six months and five days. Her death was very sudden. She felt better that morning than common. She prepared breakfast and did up her house work, and was in the act of making some pies, when she dropped dead. Her maiden name was Elizabeth Hendryx. She was born in Steuben Co., New York, and lived there until she was twenty-seven years of age. At the age of eighteen she became a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and continued so up to her death. David Monfort and she were married on the 19th of October, 1833, and after spending two years with their friends they made up their minds to go west and grow up with the country. In the spring of 1846 they started for Michigan, selecting Utica, then a small, lively town in McComb county, as offering the best inducements to new beginners. Their means were limited, but she being a good hand with the needle they both went to work and very soon accumulated quite a little sum of money. They invested in the mercantile trade, and built a neat residence, and their prospects looked bright—but just then a dark cloud passed over. Their store caught fire and all their hard earnings were consumed in a few minutes. Mrs. Monfort being willing to sell their nice little home and move further west, in the spring of 1860, Mr. Monfort started for Kansas. He selected 184 acres of land near the head of McDowell's creek in Davis County, and built a log cabin. He wrote to Mrs. Monfort that he would meet her in Leavenworth, and so he did, with two yoke of oxen and an old government wagon. After making a few necessary purchases they started for their new home, and after a long tedious drive of two weeks they drove up to their cabin door. Mrs. Monfort got out of the wagon and sat down on the end of a log and cried. "O!" said she, "where is my beautiful home?" But soon she became reconciled to her fate. Being industrious and enterprising, and seeing the advantages the country afforded for stock raising she said, "If we only had a few cows and a horse I think we could get along." "But where is the money," said Mr. Monfort. "Well," said she, "I have a nice gold watch you might trade for a horse." Mr. Monfort took the watch and traded with A. W. Callen for a nice sorrel horse. Then she took a nice shawl that she had and traded it for a cow with Mrs. Hands, and a carpet with Mrs. Tully for a cow. With these few cows and the natural advantages of the country they soon became well fixed. These facts I give as she told them to me. She was a model housekeeper and a loving wife, and a better mother never lived. She leaves her husband and two children to mourn her loss, a loss that never can be replaced.

The North American Review for January presents a table of contents possessing in the highest degree the character of contemporary human interest. First, the opposite sides of the question of "Ecclesiastical Control in Utah" are set forth by two representative men, whose competence for the performance of the task undertaken by them respectively admits of no doubt, viz.: President John Taylor, the official head of the Mormon Church, and Hon. Eli H. Murray, Governor of the Territory of Utah. Senator John I. Mitchell writes of the "Tribulations of the American Dollar," recounting the strenuous efforts of the people of the United States to extinguish the national debt, and contending that it is our imperative duty today to settle definitely the question whether we shall have dollars of unequal commercial value in circulation. Published at 30 Lafayette Place, New York, and for sale by booksellers generally.

Dr. Lewis' Monthly will keep step with the most ambitious and vital of our large magazines. It will be illustrated whenever the subject demands such aid, but its peculiar feature, as heretofore, will consist of an able, earnest and determined discussion of Sanitary and Social Questions. Those who have read the past issues of this magazine will need no assurance of the unshoved vehemence of its work. It leaves no room to doubt its meaning or purpose. Dr. Lewis will contribute to each issue papers of hygenic themes whose value even earnest people will find it difficult to exaggerate, while nearly a hundred writers known to the public will contribute papers on living subjects. Although among the largest and most beautiful of our magazines, it is only $2.50 per year, or 25c a number. For sale by all newsdealers.

Demorest's Monthly for January, 1884, is an unusually entertaining number, and exceedingly rich in illustrations. Among the articles of interest may be mentioned "On the Thames," "Sentiment and Science in Philadelphia," by the Rev. O. B. Frothingham; "How we live in New York," by Jennie June, and "The Home of Dorothy Vernon." The interesting serial, "The Shores of Nothing" is continued, and "The World's Progress" and other departments are full, useful and varied. The frontispiece is a fine steel engraving of Sir Frederick Leighton's celebrated painting, "Wedded."

Our holiday rush of advertising will soon be over, and patrons will then be favored with more reading matter.

KATIE'S KISSES.

To me Katie I said: "It's a taste
Uv th' sweet lips that I'd have, an' I made
They belong to me now wid yerself,
An' no party fur kissin' were made."

But she answered an' toss'd me wid eyes
That no star in the sky could outshine,
"An' I think they belong to yerself,
An' how do ye kiss yer own lips?"

Then I said, I cried, as I spake,
An' a tender note lingered in me voice,
"Ye know I'd be happy to kiss
The lips av th' girl I choose."

Then I offered the same to ev'ry
Wid a heart jist as true as the day
But she said, "I did not ever take back
What once I had given away."

"An' if I did, yer tooth an' yer eye, dear,"
I laughed, "I'd wid nothing scorn
She frowned, dis I think that I'm right
Wid a kiss for th' rain or th' pawn."

Then I said, jist as mute as a stone,
An' jist as Aurelia did I stay,
Her lips came close, pouting a bit, lips
Like a rose from each other's way.

Then I thought of the lips of the saints,
An' I spake, "Way up to her throne,
Sure, I spake, "Did ye like Wid me now?"

One day Mr. Ashley strolled through the lobby of the hotel in the company of a young man whose face is well known to the regular promenaders of Broadway. This young man is always immaculately dressed and clean shaven. He has prominent features and peculiarly thin and compressed lips. He lives handsomely and always has a plenty of cash. With his new-found companion Mr. Ashley, the weak-eyed child of the guileless West, occupied a seat in the bar-room for some little time. Upon this occasion Mr. Ashley departed from his usual custom sufficiently to assist in the liberal absorption of champagne. When his Broadway friend went away Mr. Ashley sauntered again through the office of the hotel. He was beckoned to by one of the clerks.

"Mr. Ashley, how long have you been in New York?" queried the gentleman behind the diamond stud.

"Near eight year," responded that unfortunate gentleman. "Never was here afore, and never [illegible]."

"Do you know the person who just left you?"

"Yes. Met him two nights ago at the Madison Square. I couldn't buy a seat, and he offered me one of his. Said his friend hadn't come, and he would be glad to accommodate a stranger, so we sat together. Seems to be a nice sort of a chap."

"I have no doubt of that," continued the clerk, with a slight air of superior knowledge, not unblended with sarcasm. "That young man is Hungry Joe, one of the most celebrated confidence operators in America."

"You don't say," drawled the Western man slowly and with some astonishment. "Well, I'm darned."

He went thoughtfully away. That night the young man with the thin lips and the handsome clothes called for Mr. Ashley after dinner. As they came through the office the occidental innocent took out a large pocket-book filled to repletion with money, drew from its inner recesses about $500, and deposited the wallet, with the balance of its contents, in the hotel safe. His companion viewed this proceeding with a passive face but a gleaming eye, and the two sauntered together. Mr. Ashley returned to the hotel just in time to take his morning ride on horseback. He slept until about four in the afternoon. Then he drew $200 from his wallet and left.

"You are fully warned," observed the clerk, as he handed over the amount, "and it is your own fault if you lose any money to Hungry Joe."

"Correct," responded Mr. Ashley, stuffing the bills into his pocket.

His next appearance in the hotel was a little after midnight, and this time he got $200 away in the wallet, with the declaration that the New York sharps might be pretty still on bunko, but they were a little behind the times on draw poker. "In my country," he explained, "two deuces and a bowie will open a jack pot every time."

Mr. Ashley passed several days in quiet and seclusion. A full week went by before he drifted out again with his companion of the compressed lips. The next day after that he drew a round $1,000 from the safe, and seemed annoyed when the clerk smiled a broad and knowing smile. "No game ever phazed me," said Mr. Ashley, in a dogged way, "and a man who can hold up his end with cow-boys isn't going to be bested by any broadcloth brigade that was ever hatched." There was a lull of eight or ten days in the proceedings, when Mr. Ashley drew another check. A couple of days later he drew still more. That afternoon he went [illegible] with his gentlemanly companion. His face had been suffused with sadness all the morning, but it was noticed that he seemed somewhat brighter on his return from the drive. That evening Hungry Joe and two of the well known Broadway confidence men spent several hours in earnest conversation with Mr. Ashley. That gentleman's weak eyesight necessitated for him to wear [illegible] that well down [illegible] When the three [illegible] the lobby [illegible] about the [illegible] Hungry Joe [illegible] at which [illegible] the clerks were [illegible] to [illegible] where they [illegible] the following [illegible]

[illegible] Mr. Ashley [illegible] Broadway [illegible] precisely eleven days when he came in from a carriage that was loaded with trunks and [illegible] of all sorts of appliances of ocean travel. He signed himself on the register, "Benjamin Ashley, London." The clerk looked up hurriedly as if to apologize for not recognizing his guest, then looked surprised, muttered a hasty word or two, and assigned the stranger to a room, all in a confused and preoccupied way. This was apparently another Benjamin Ashley. He was tall and slender, and well dressed, and pale. But he spoke with a slightly American-like English accent, not unlike that of the other Benjamin Ashley. The clerk was pretty well puzzled, and for a night he took good care to have the stranger's full name and address [illegible] in the list of arrivals published daily in a periodical devoted to that purpose and carefully read by the order and fraternity. The clerk was [illegible] the next day, and as he had expected, one of the first calls was from the thin-lipped young man, who took care to have his name sent up to Mr. Ashley's room. Word came back that Mr. Ashley would see the gentleman in the drawing-room, and thither the clerk followed after a moment. Hungry Joe was sitting in a large armchair and the tall man from London came into the apartment. The New Yorker carelessly bestowed a passing glance on Mr. Ashley and looked away. The Englishman, however, seeing no one in [illegible] except the clerk, advanced courteously and said:

"Did you wish to see me? I am Mr. Ashley."

"Eh?" queried Hungry Joe, with a startled look. "You're not Mr. Benjamin Ashley?"

"Precisely."

"Not of Kansas?"

"Yes, of Abilene, Kan. How can I serve you?"

The thin lips of the confidence man were rather white by this time, and they were more firmly compressed than ever. He regarded the tall Englishman in a dazed fashion for a few moments. Then he asked:

"Do you own a large cattle ranch twenty-five miles south of Abilene?"

"I believe I do. Why do you ask?"

"Been to Europe to have your eyes doctored?"

"Yes. I have been abroad four months. But my young friend, these questions are rather odd. Please explain yourself."

"Odd!" echoed the Broadway man. "Well, I should think they were. If you are Benjamin Ashley, and you own a cattle ranch, the cleverest man in this country has given me a deal, that's all. Why, it isn't two weeks ago that me and two friends bought a half interest in that ranch, and, by George! the man who sold it stepped in this same hotel."

Mr. Ashley seemed rather astonished by this information, and beckoned the clerk, who had been listening to their conversation quite intently. That individual gave a careful description of the previous Mr. Ashley, and the New York sharper told how he had won some $3,200 from the man, who was on his way to Europe for the benefit of his eyes. He had represented himself as the owner of the Ashley ranch, and at his request the speaker had telegraphed the Abilene Postmaster, who had replied, giving details as to the property, which is valued at about $40,000, and had added that Mr. Ashley himself had gone abroad for medical treatment. The man had represented that he wanted to make certain expenditures in Europe, and that his card-losses would prevent unless he could dispose of an interest in his ranch. He produced deeds to establish his ownership, and they seemed satisfactory even to the lawyers. Thinking he had a chance to get $25,000 worth of material for $14,000 the victim had taken two friends in with him, and by clubbing together they had raised the necessary amount.

"Really," observed the Englishman, when the recital was finished, "I am very sorry for you, but you have unquestionably been swindled. For my part, I shall not have the slightest difficulty in establishing my identity. As for your friend, the bogus Mr. Ashley, he is probably one of my cow-boys, Henry Barnes by name. The description certainly fits that person. He came to the ranch, let me see, about fourteen months ago and asked for a job. Now I remember he wasn't much like the other boys, but I needed more help, and I took him on. He may have been in hiding for some crime, for all I know. But on the plains we care not to pry into such matters. He did his work all right, and seemed rather a quiet, sensible fellow. As for his companions, though, we never trusted them. I [illegible] that the plaguey scoundrels [illegible]

"He does," said Hungry Joe, mournfully.

"It was an expert, perhaps, you come to think of it, and he did the work of that sort for me. He was a cherry sucker, sure."

"And Barnes, the cuss who got off with the money?"

"Is my partner, sir, his interest in the ranch being held by the defrauded confidence operator, sir."

"What's worse," he went away full of my champagne, [illegible] "[illegible] an old and [illegible] there's [illegible] he's."

Struggling Lives.

You, reader, who are blessed with a comfortable home—who are well fed and warmly clad and sheltered—you can hardly realize to what straits and make-shifts many a poor mortal is reduced to live honestly, or even live at all. Women there are, delicate, cultured, refined, and all unused to physical labor—women nursed often in the lap of luxury, but thrown suddenly and helplessly upon the world by some social or domestic volcano that engulfed home and friends and left them stranded and alone to struggle with the hard conditions of cruel and relentless poverty. We have seen them thinly and poorly clad, with pinched faces from lack of nourishing food, boarding themselves in cheerless and isolated rooms, and eking out a bare pittance honestly earned with needle or pen—patient, often, and hopeful in their sad and lonely lot. Let their more fortunate sisters, born to affluence and comfort, with every luxury within their reach, imagine themselves suddenly reduced to such extremities, and can they wonder that many a tempted one is led into a gilded life of sin? Truly, society is out of joint, and there is need for a larger measure of charity in the world. We wonder if the favored one of earth are aware that there is but little [illegible] in the goodness of one who has never been sorely tempted.

Why is it that so many neglect coughs and colds until they get consumption? Why is it so many die of consumption? It is because they will not come and be healed. Every one knows a sure conqueror of throat and lung diseases is Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, and that it can be got of any druggist.

Small Pox and Vaccination.

A writer on vaccination says, "Small-pox and varioloid could be entirely driven from the face of the earth by vaccination and revaccination and re-revaccination at proper times. It is a well settled principle in pathology that two diseases cannot exist in the system at the same time. Also, it is admitted that a milder form of a disease will prevent or modify a severer type of a disease of a similar nature.

As an example, a child who has had "simple scarlet fever," or measles, seldom, if ever, afterwards has "malignant scarlet fever," unless, it may be, in some cases where some disease of another character may have eradicated the effect of impression made upon the system by simple scarlet fever or measles. The vaccine disease will modify, and always prevents small-pox proper. The contagion of small-pox is conveyed from victim to victim across street and from house to house, by the air, and is also conveyed by bed-clothing and wearing apparel of small-pox patients, and by letters written by an affected hand, and in so many ways that it seems almost impossible for the unvaccinated to escape. Persons who have never been vaccinated are liable to take small-pox from small-pox, and from varioloid. Persons who have been vaccinated are liable to take varioloid only from exposure to small-pox, but will not take varioloid from varioloid."

No disease will trouble you if you keep your blood pure, your kidneys strong, your bowels regular and your mind clear by an occasional use of that great reviver and supporter of health and strength known as Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. Its praise should be in every mouth! Its merits should be known by all!

AYER'S
Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs; none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 67 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me.
HORACE FAIRBROTHER."
Harrisonburg, Va., July 13, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little girl, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved our darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours, MRS. EMMA GIDNEY."
150 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."
Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."
Reliance, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."
Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

Home Politeness.

A boy who is polite to his father and mother is likely to be polite to every one else. A boy lacking politeness to his parents may have the semblance of courtesy in society, but is never truly polite in spirit, and is in danger, as he becomes familiar, of betraying his real want of courtesy. We are all in danger of living too much for the outside world, for the impression which we make in society, coveting the good opinions of those who are in a sense a part of ourselves, and who will continue to sustain and be interested in us, notwithstanding these defects of deportment and character. We say to every boy and to every girl, cultivate the habits of courtesy and propriety at home—in the sitting room and the kitchen, as well as in the parlor—and you will be sure in other places to deport yourself in a becoming and attractive manner. When one has a pleasant smile and a graceful demeanor, it is a satisfaction to know these are not put on but that they belong to the character, and are manifest at all times and under all circumstances.

Rochester, N. Y.

I have been a great sufferer from rheumatism for more than twenty years, at times suffering most excruciating pain. I have used nearly every remedy I could hear of, or that was recommended by sympathizing friends but have never found any relief from their use until I commenced with the Rheumatic Syrup, which I have been using for a short time; but it is helping me so much that I now have faith that it will cure me. It has already done me more good than any remedy I have ever used.

HUMAN BLOOD.—On the purity and vitality of the blood depend the vigor and health of the whole system. Disease of various kinds is often only the sign that nature is trying to remove the disturbing cause. A remedy that gives life and vigor to the blood, eradicates scrofula and other impurities from it, as Hood's Sarsaparilla undoubtedly does, must be the means of preventing many diseases that would occur without its use. Shall We Let the Child Die?

A hard-hearted political economist, looking at a pale and puny child feebly gasping as it lies upon a pillow, says that the child might as well die. It is so weak and poor that its life will never be worth much anyhow. There are already a good many people in the world who are of not much account anyhow. And what's the use of adding to their number another weakling, who has but slender chance of ever amounting to anything?

Now ask that child's mother what she thinks about letting the child die. About this time the hard political economist had better get out of the way. "Let my child die? Not! No! As long as there is a remedy to be found that will save that child, the child shall not die! I'll spend my last dollar to save the child!" Well, try a bottle of BROWN'S IRON BITTERS on that child. See the poor little fellow pick up strength. He revives. He will live. Hosts of other children have been brought almost from death to healthy life by Brown's Iron Bitters. Your druggist sells it.

Rheumatic SYRUP.

The Greatest Blood Purifier Known!

RHEUMATISM CURED. Rochester, N.Y., Apr. 6, '80. Rheumatic Syrup Co.: Gents—I have been a great sufferer from Rheumatism for four years, with different physicians, for seven or six years and hearing of the success of Rheumatic Syrup I concluded to give it a trial in my case, and I cheerfully say Syrup. After taking it for a short time I found it to be free from pain, and my general health is very well as ever. A. C. Ellis.

SCROFULA CURED. Port Byron, N.Y., Feb. 20, '83. Rheumatic Syrup Co.: I had been doctoring for three years with different physicians, for scrofula, as some time I concluded to give it a trial in my case, and I commenced taking your syrup. After taking the use of Rheumatic Syrup. I feel no pain since using the time, to my surprise I began to have felt no pain since using the fitted to its use. I can walk without crutches. Continuing its use a fourth bottle, I think it the best remedy for the blood and debilitated system. S. Chester Park, M.D.

NEURALGIA CURED. Fairport, N.Y., Mar. 12, '83. Rheumatic Syrup Co.: Gents—Since November, 1882, I have been a constant sufferer from neuralgia, and have not known what it was to be free from pain until I commenced using your Rheumatic Syrup. I feel as well as any person, and have not been troubled with that disease since. Mrs. Wm. Strand. Mrs. W. B. Chase.

The December number of the American Agriculturist contains about 100 engravings, which is twenty-five per cent. more than that in any other illustrated periodical in this or any other country. These illustrations are engraved expressly for the paper by leading artists, covering a large variety of rural subjects as well as farm inventions and contrivances. These engravings alone in any single issue of the paper are worth far more to every farmer and housekeeper than the subscription price for five years. Notwithstanding the American Agriculturist is fully worth four dollars a year the subscription price will remain at $1 50 during 1884.

We are indebted to Hon. S. P. Rounds, Public Printer at Washington, for a copy of his first report for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1883. It is complete in all details and gives a better idea to an outsider of the volume of business transacted in the government printing office than anything that has ever come under our notice. Mr. Rounds is certainly the right man in the right place.

We have received from Cassel & Co. a copy of their new etching entitled "Evening by the River", which will be presented to each subscriber to the Magazine of Art for 1884 without extra charge. The etching will not be offered for sale but the entire stock will be reserved for subscribers to the magazine. Write to Cassel & Co., 739 Broadway, New York City.

An aged citizen of Galesburg, who has heretofore borne a good character, was caught stealing from a store in that village a few days ago. He was arrested and fined. He has a respected family.

Robert Snyder, a well known citizen of Petoskey, has been arrested on complaint of the officers of the Petoskey lodge of I. O. O. F., who charge him with embezzling $98 of the lodge funds. He was held for examination.

The state grange unanimously adopted a resolution expressing its disapprobation of the action of the legislature in refusing to submit the prohibitory question to a vote of the people. It was also resolved that the practice of licensing the sale of liquor at fairs was a burning shame.

The executive committee of the state grange has been instructed to make arrangements for the purchase of salt from salt dealers who are not connected with the Michigan salt association. The grangers evidently want the benefits of free trade in salt even if they do not want it in wool.

A HOME PAPER.

Some sensible remarks have been made on the subject of taking home papers, which apply to the people of every locality:

Few, yes very few people fully appreciate the worth of a good family paper. A fresh clean local paper is worth as much each year in a family as three months' schooling. Every family in the land ought to take at least one good local weekly paper, and when the day's work is done the parents or some member of the family should read aloud, and at intervals stop and talk over with the children the contents of the paper, which helps to strengthen the memory.

Mothers can do more in an hour's social family reading and visiting with their loved ones to cultivate their minds and morals in a year than is often done in a year's schooling, and where only one paper is taken in a family it should be your own county paper, for that brings the news from your townsmen and local friends and helps build up your interest. A good paper costs only from two to four cents a week, and is worth many times that amount. There is no family so poor but can better take a paper than do without. If the father is in the habit of smoking I have no doubt but it would be better for him to do'nt three cents worth less tobacco each week, or if he is in the habit of drinking liquor, take one drink less per week, or as we hope the father uses neither tobacco nor liquor, cannot the family use two or three cents worth less of tea or coffee each week and be the better for it and take the paper."

Harper's Bazar.

ILLUSTRATED.

Harper's Bazar is at once the most brilliant and useful household journal in existence. It is the acknowledged arbiter of fashion in this country. Its fashion plates are the newest and most stylish, and its pattern sheet supplements and economic suggestions alone are worth many times the cost of subscription. Its illustrations of art needlework are from the best sources. Its literary and artistic merits are of the highest order. Its stories, poems and essays are by the first American and European authors. Its choice art pictures would fill portfolios, and its humorous cuts are the most amusing to be found in any journal in America. A host of brilliant novelettes are promised for 1884.

Franklin as a Writer.

His pen was as ready as his purse in the service of all human kindness. And what a pen it was! It could discourse metaphysics as clearly and lucidly as to make them seem plain moralizing. It could tear a sophism to pieces by a mere query. It could make a simple fale read like a subtile argument. He could be grave and he could be gay in a breath. He could spend as much wit and humor on a "Craven Street Gazette"—which was meant only to amuse an old landlady, away from home, and probably out of joint before her return from Rochester—as on a State paper designed to fire America and sting England. In another tone, he translates into human language, for the amusement of a court lady, the reflections, in the garden of her house, of a gray-headed ephemera, full seven hours old, on the vanity of all things. His "Petition of the Left Hand," might have been composed by Addison. In it, the left hand bewails the partiality which educates the right hand exclusively. Some of Franklin's fables and tales have been absorbed into the thought of the world, that their source is absolutely forgotten. Only in this way can we account for what was doubtless an unconscious plagiarism by an eminent sanitary authority, last year, of Franklin's "Economical project for diminishing the cost of Light." The economy consisted simply in rising at six o'clock instead of nine or ten. Ideas such as Franklin's never become superanuated. Not every one who uses the expression, "to pay dear for one's whistle," knows that the dear whistle was a purchase made by Franklin, when seven years old, with a pocketful of pence. Franklin's store was too abundant for him to mind, though some of his fame went astray. "You know," he tells his daughter, "everything makes me recollect some story." But it was not recollection so much as fancy. His fancy clothed every idea in circumstances. When the illustration had served its turn, he was indifferent what became of it. Franklin did injustice to himself when he fancied he wanted any such mechanical aid. His English had been learned from the "Pilgrim's Progress," and the "Spectator." It had the force of Bunyan without his ruggedness. It had the serene light of Addison with tenfold his raciness and vigor. It sparkled with sarcasms as cutting as Voltaire's, but all sweetened with humanity. Many of his inventions or adaptions—such as "colonize"—have been stamped, long since, as current English. But he did not covet the fame of an inventor, whether in language, in morals, or in politics. In language, he was even declared a foe to innovation. Writing to Noah Webster, in 1789, he protests against the new verbs "notice," "advocate," and "progress." He had as little ambition to be classic as to be an innovator in English. He wrote because he had something at the moment to say, with a view to procuring that something should at the moment be done.—Edinburgh Review.

The Youth of Our Land.

There really ought to be some law against the sale of dime novels to young boys. Instances occur almost daily where the minds of young boys have become so distorted by reading trash that they are ready to slaughter their fellow beings in large quantities. A boy who reads about some avenger of the prairie who chops and splits his cord and a half of Indians regular every day, or some pirate whose scuppers run off enough blood every minute to make a hundred dollars worth of blood sausage, gets into an abnormal condition of mind and is wholly unfit for the solid work and low wages of real, every day life. He begins to accumulate pistols, daggers, and other old junk, and longs to run a poniard into some false Spaniard, and twist it around, while he hisses through his set teeth some drivel that he has read in a novel. Such a boy will not hoe corn. Near Peru, in Illinois, the other day, a sheriff found a cave where a number of these boys whose minds had become jaundiced had established a sort of pirate's glen. The pirates were not at home, being away probably on an expedition to capture a dark-eyed Spanish beauty, or a buxom strange beauty, and the sheriff entered the place and took an account of stock. All around were the sinister looking weapons of death, and the treasures and spoils of war, among them were twelve bottles of beer. This in itself ought to teach us that there is no such thing as realizing what novels tell about. There never was a novel yet that told about the duke pacing back and forth with a clouded brow in the elegant drawing room of his castle, and then going to the sideboard and draining a flagon of lemon beer. Not any. The duke always drains a flagon of fine old Rhenish wine, seven hundred years old, before he sets out to mutilate a couple of townships of people. A boy ought to see by this that if he is going to try and follow the duke's example he will have to use old Rhenish wine instead of lemon beer. And where would be the fun in slaughtering those two townships of people with a skin full of lemon beer or pop? It would be insipid. And not only that, but ridiculous. Suppose the duke should draw his rapier to run a person through the body, and just as he was about to say, "Die, villain," the gas from the lemon beer should come up in his nose. He would feel like a fool. A boy who reads a novel, and becomes all wrought up and excited, never thinks of this. Neither does he think who it is that writes the novel. If he could see the author of the novel—who is some poor devil in a New York garret, who has starved himself half to death for money to buy whisky, and who changes his quarters every month to save rent—he would be ashamed to be seen reading such stuff. The poor broken down scribbler who writes about the brilliant diamonds of inestimable value that flashed upon the bosom of the countess, is probably wearing a sheet of writing paper for a shirt front.—Peck's Sun.

"Mamie," said he, and his voice was plaintly low, "will you be my wife? Will you cling to me as the tender vine clings to the—" "Yes, I catch on," said she.

An ear for music is generally accompanied with an eye for the beautiful, a tongue for the true, and a mouth for all the good things of this world.

SAVING MOTHER.

The farmer sat in his easy chair
Between the fire and the lamplight's glare
His face was ruddy and full and fair
His three small boys in the chimney nook
Claimed the lines of a picture book.
His wife, the pride of his home and heart
Baked the biscuit and made the tart
Laid the table and steeped the tea
Deftly, swiftly, silently.
Tired and weary, weak and faint
She bore her trials without complaint
Like many another household saint
Content all selfish bliss above
In the patient ministry of love.

At last, between the clouds of smoke
That [illegible]
There [illegible] to pay
And if there should come a rainy day
They would be mighty handy. I've heard it said
They'd give something, put by. For folks must die
And there's funeral bills, and great stones to buy
Enough to pound a man, pretty nigh
Besides, there's Ed and all those out West
To be provided for, among we get
So, if I were you, I'd tell you what I'd do
I'd [illegible] as ever I could
Extra fires don't do any good.
I'd be [illegible] of coal, an' savin' of oil
And run up some candles once in awhile
I'd rather be sparin' of coffee an' tea
For sugar's high
As all go to pay
And you'd a good enough drink for me
I'd be kind of careful about my clothes
And look out sharp lest the money goes

An' as to the carpet you wanted new
I guess we can make the old one do
And as for the washer an' sewin machine

A City of Perfumes.

A writer in the Pall Mall Gazette says: The Tunisian Arabs have a passion for flowers, and as soon as their spring commences even the poorest and raggedest may be seen with delicately scented blossoms stuck above his ear, the stalk peeping from the folds of his turban and the flower pendant over his dark cheek. I have been told by those who have thirty years' knowledge of these people, that they will almost go without bread to buy flowers. And there is something in the sight of a gaunt, toil-worn Arab, whose sole garment may consist of a piece of coarse sacking and a tattered old turban, with a bunch of delicate spring blossoms drooping their cool freshness against his swarthy cheek, which has a strange mingling of sympathy and pity and admiration.

The perfumes distilled at Tunis have been famous from time immemorial, and I really think the Tunisians are right when they declare that their roses are sweeter than all others. There is one very large, rather pale rose, in particular, from which the famous attar is extracted, which exhales an odor so powerful and yet so delicate that it seems a figure of speech to speak of the "odors of Paradise," and one can understand that the Mohammedan's heaven would hardly be complete without it. But at Tunis it is not only the rose which is made to yield up its sweet breath, to be afterwards imprisoned in cunning little caskets and sparkling crystal flasks enriched with gilding, suggesting to the [illegible] fancy of the Arabian Nights' [illegible] traveler, and who is there who is not in a measure haunted by that wonderful book from the moment he finds himself among Oriental scenes? the imprisoned spirit of some fairy in eternal subjection to the powerful genii man. The odors of the violets, jasmine, the orange flower, and many others are extracted with equal skill, and in the Bazaars mingle their scents with the perfume of sandal wood and other sweet smelling woods, whose names I do not know, and with that of the curious musk odoriferous dark substance which the natives call amber.

If you go to buy perfumes the vendor will perhaps offer you a little ivory box, Arabian Nights again, or porcelain vase containing a scented unguent for the hair, or may be a string of beads to hang around your neck, apparently thinking it of small consequence in what way you perfume your person so that the desired odor is given off to the senses. In Arab households incense and sandal wood are frequently burned on charcoal braziers. The Arabian women of the higher class are extravagantly fond of highly scented carnations, bracelets, etc., and a lady told me that on being introduced, into the apartment of a newly married wife she saw suspended on the wall a gorgeous kind of necklace, almost as large as a collar of the Order of the Golden Fleece, formed of scented woods and amber enriched with pearls and beads of pure gold, finely worked. This ornament perfumed the whole apartment, and my friend was informed that its well to do husband it was always to be found on the chamber of the newest wife.

A distinguished scholar and writer recently said: "I flounder in a sea of scraps." In these days, when the papers contain so many fine sentiments, beautiful descriptions, touching incidents, items of importance and matters of permanent interest, culled from all departments of life, there is scarcely a day in which something does not strike the eye which the reader wishes to preserve, in order to remember and perhaps to use. One of the first things a bright boy or girl should make is a scrap-book of things which interest most. If you have no book, put your selections in different envelopes, according to subjects. The newspaper is a circulating library, with a little of everything in it, and a little for everybody. Make sure of your part of what you read.

On one occasion while the English naturalist Gould was wandering along the banks of the Thames with a party of friends, a rare laugh was created at his expense. He had climbed a tree for the purpose of exploring the contents of a nest. On suddenly looking down at a hollow formed by two branches of the tree, and which at the time contained a pool of water, he exclaimed: "As I'm a living man, if there is not a large owl here in this hole, looking straight at me." The excitement was intense, but was instantly turned to a shout of merriment, when the naturalist on putting down his hand to seize the supposed owl, discovered that it was simply the reflection of his own image in the water.

Read for a Purpose.

It is a mistake to suppose that the more a person reads the wiser he will grow, as a matter of course. I know a young girl of perhaps fourteen, who is a devourer of books of the story sort, such as fill most of our Sunday-school libraries. Every spare minute she gives to the business, and travels through the volumes at a most rapid pace. But it seems exactly like pouring water through a sieve. Not a valuable idea stays in the mind. The whole attention is absorbed in finding out "how the story turns out," with no reference whatever to its teachings. Daniel Webster, when a boy, obtained more information from a farmer's almanac than she would from whole shelves full of books read in that manner.

Indeed such reading weakens the mind instead of strengthening it. Nor does it soften the heart toward real suffering to have the feelings touched and even greatly moved by fictitious sorrows. Even high admiration of self-denial and moral heroism in a favorite character leads to no corresponding action in the readers' life. Rather all demands upon her sympathy and self-denial make her only peevish and irritable. Have you never seen an absorbed reader of fiction weeping over a pathetic tale, but indignant when a weary mother called her off to attend to neglected duties. How angrily the thread of ever-day work was taken up, and how little her presence contributed to lighten the burdens! Any reading that has such an effect on the minds is an evil of a decided character and of most serious magnitude. A well-written story which has a decided point to it is a relaxation for both mind and body; but stories of perverted moral sentiment, where black is invariably painted white, and vice versa, are only pernicious, destroying both soul and body.

Read for a purpose, and make the points of the book your own. If a story is read for recreation, let it be a good one in the truest sense, and do not make such reading the sole literary food. When we have found an author who sets our own minds at work in a laudable direction, we have opened a good mine. There are some writers who stop us, in effect, in every half page or less with new trains of thought which their words have awakened; and better still, they set us to doing as well as thinking. Cultivate such helpful friends and you will then secure the noblest end of reading, and will have paved the way for high improvement. After the habit is once well formed of reading for a high and noble purpose, it will be found a source of enjoyment never dreamed of in the old days when reading was only an amusement.

How Does He Sleep?

One of the most important things to know about any man upon whom you are going to place any dependence, is how he sleeps. Sleeplessness may sometimes be involuntary. There may have been some shock to the man's nerves which has made him insomnolent, but sleeplessness is more frequently voluntary. Men choose to push their studies or their work into those hours when they should sleep. It does not matter for what cause any man may do this, the mere fact of not sleeping spoils his case. He may spend his nights in the theater, in the study, or in the prostrated meeting. It will make no difference; the result to the body will be the same. The sleep was not had, and for that the man must pay.

One man may do with a little less sleep than another, but, as a general rule, if you want a [illegible], a lieutenant, a lawyer, a physician, a legislator, a judge, a president or a [illegible], do not trust your interests to any man that does not take eight good, solid hours of sleep out of every twenty-four. Whatever may be his reason for it, if he does not give himself that he will pay some time just when you want him to be strong.

The intellectual and moral connections of sleeping have, I think, not been sufficiently appreciated. Men and boys have been in the habit of "burning the midnight oil." Nor this "midnight oil" is a delusion and a snare. The student who is fast asleep at twelve o'clock every night and well awake every morning at seven o'clock is going to pass another student of the same intellectual ability who goes to bed every night at two and rises before five. In sleep the plate on which the picture is to be taken is receiving its chemical preparation. And it is plain that that which is the best prepared will take the best picture.

Men who are the fastest asleep when they are asleep, are the wildest awake when they are awake.

Great workers must be great resters.

Every man who has a clerk in his employ ought to know what time sleeping hours are. The young man who is up at two, three and four o'clock in the morning, and must put in his appearance at the bank or store by nine or ten o'clock, and work all day, cannot repeat this process many days without a certain sickness coming into his system which he will endeavor to steady by some cordial stimulus. It is this way that many a young man begins his course to ruin. He need not necessarily have been in bad company. He has lost his sleep, and losing sleep is losing strength and grace. Rev. Dr. Deems.

Sun-Spot Speculations.

Enthusiasts who make a special study of sun-spots and attendant phenomena believe that the corner stone of a new science is being laid by discoveries pointing to an intimate connection between solar and terrestrial meteorology. Just what the connection is they are not yet able to clearly define, although electricity is suspected of being the agent through which the effects are manifested upon our planet. It is known that the gaseous envelope of the sun is affected by eruptions of such prodigious magnitude as to be utterly beyond our power of conception, these disturbances appearing to us in the form of rapidly changing spots and protuberances. The eras of the spots—or sun-storms—occur at remarkably regular intervals, a complete cycle of the various stages of activity from maximum to minimum and again to maximum being performed in about eleven years—the so-called "sun-spot period." The sun-spot physicists claim a coincidence of the periods of maximum spots and years of great atmospheric and physical disturbance in the earth. The year 1881 was one of great solar disturbances, while it was marked by violent storms and earthquakes upon our globe. Further than this, these scientists claim to have recently detected by simultaneous observation minor atmospheric changes as the result of corresponding movements in the sun. Many difficulties attend these observations, but the Astronomer Royal for Scotland and others believe that the state of the sun will some day become an important factor in weather forecasts and like calculations.

We Mean What We Say.

Practical Proverbs.

I wouldn't gin a cent for de man who quotes old proverbs an' adopts second-han mottoes," began Brother Gardner, of the Detroit Limekiln Club, as the crunching of harvest apples suddenly ceased. "Dis am an aige fur ebery man to hold his own plow, an' who am content to let some one else hold it must be satisfied wid cobs in place of co'n. Ef I was so poo' an' low-down dat I had to pick rags, I would have my own maxims an' mottoes. Instead of sayin' 'Doan' put off till to-morrow what kin be dun to-day,' I would have it: 'Now, ole man, you git right up in dust an sling mo' rags dis week dan any oder chap kin in a month.' De odder day I met Comeback Jones. You know he am 'bout sixty y'ars old, an' bout as hard up as a woodchuck in a b'ar's grip. I axed de ole man how he was keepin' up wid de pure cheshun, an' he replied, 'Wall, ize mighty hard up; but dey say it am a long lane dat has no turn.' Jist fink of an ole man wid one No. 13 in de grave waitin' for a turn in de lane to bring him heaps to eat an' lots to w'ar?—All frew life he has carried dat second-han sayin' wid him, an' am yet a believer in it. Why didn't he have one of his own? If he had said forty years ago: 'Doan' foller any lane, but cut across lots,' de wolf wouldn't be arter him to-day. A man who hes de will to make a motto hes de pluck to make it a success. Buckle down to bizness' an a better motto dan any book kin give ye. Let me, in closin', quote some of de mottoes an maxims belongin' to members of dis club:

Sir Isaac Walpole—'Doan' drap fifteen cents in reachin' fur a dollar.'

Waydown Bebee—'When ye can't dig frew a wall climb ober it.'

Giveadam Jones—'Git dar,' if it takes a leg.

Pickles Smith—'Ye can't swim a'ribber by sittin' on a bank.'

Samuel Shin—'Sot yer alarm-clock fur six in de mornin'.'

Trustee Pullback—'If de road am up hill, stiffen yer back-bone a little mo'.'

Kyan Johnson—'De man who w'ars his hat on his ear shows de empty side of his head.'

Brutus Jackson—'Hoe co'n wid yer hans and arms 'stead of yer mout.'

Elder Toots—'Take a job at fust sight, but doan' trade hosses till ye fink it ober.'

Missed the Train.

It was a colored man. His back was all dirt, one tail of his coat was gone, and every button had been ripped off his vest. He had two limps and a hitch as he came out, and there was a new French shade of sadness in his voice as he toed the mark and said:

"I missed de train, sah."

"Yes, it looks like it. Is your name Jim Scott Green?"

"Yes, sah."

"What train did you miss?"

"I doan' jist remember what train it was."

"Whar was you going?"

"Down the road."

"What road?"

"Dat's what I can't memoret, sah."

"Well do you remember of getting on a drunk?"

"No, sah. Maybe I called fur lemonade, an' dey gin me whisky, but I doan' exactly 'member it. All I recollect is dat I missed de train."

"I think you got the train all right. You were training around pretty lively when the officer got hold of your collar."

"I allus walks in my sleep, sah."

"Well, that's bad for you. You broke a window, kicked in a door, and raised a big row. Have you observed the state of your wardrobe?"

"I has deserved dat I am all broke up, sah. Dis suit ob close cost me seben dollars cash, an' I doan' believe it would sell fur six. Did dey roll me down stairs?"

"No; you resisted arrest and the officer had to mop you around a little."

"He did? I wish I'd bin dar to seen de fun. Kin I step out an' see my partner 'bout two minits?"

"No, sir; you can step up to the workhouse for sixty days."

"Shoo! Why, dat upsets me from gwine to Bufferler."

"Can't help that. Please fall back."

"Can't I settle dis lawsuit fur fifty cents?"

"No, sir. The omnibus will be along to you in about twenty minutes. Call the next case." Detroit Free Press.

The Leading-Strings Fallacy.

From the moment a child is born he is treated on the principle that all his instincts are essentially wrong, that nature must be thwarted and counteracted in every possible way. He is strapped up in a contrivance that he would be glad to exchange for a straight-jacket, kept for hours in a position that prevents him from moving any limb of his body. His first attempts at locomotion are checked by being put in leading-strings, he is carefully guarded from the out-door world, from the air that would invigorate his lungs, from the sports that would develop his muscles. Hence, the peevishness, awkwardness and sickliness of our young aristocrats. Poor people have no time to imitate the peculiarities of their wealthy neighbors, and their children profit by what the medical profession would undoubtedly call neglect. Indeed babies are still better off. They are not on bull-beef, and kicked around like young dogs; but they are not swaddled, they are not cradled, and not dosed with paregoric; they crawl around naked, and soon learn to keep out of the way; they are happy, they never cry. If we would treat our youngsters in the same way, only substituting kisses and bread for kicks and beef, they would be as happy as kids in a clover field, and moreover they would afterward be hardier and stronger. Every week the newspapers tell us about ladies tumbling down stairs and breaking both arms, boys falling from a fence and fracturing their collar bones. From what height would a young Comanche have to fall to break such bones—not to mention Southsea Island children and young monkeys? The bones of an infant are plastic; letting it tumble and roll about would harden the bony tissue; guarding it like a piece of brittle crockery makes its limbs as fragile as glass. Christian mothers reproach themselves with neglecting their duty to their children if they do not constantly interfere with their movements, but they forget that in points of physical education Nature herself is such an excellent teacher that the apparent neglect is really a transfer of the pupil to a more efficient school.

MEDICAL ADVICE.

Take the open air, the more you take the better;
Follow nature's laws in the very best way;
Let the physic go to the bay of Biscay;
Let alone the gin, the brandy and the whisky.

Freely exercise, keep your spirits cheerful;
Let no dreams of sickness make you ever fearful.
Eat the simplest food, drink the pure cold water;
Then you will be well, or at least you ought to.

Coloring a Pine Floor.

The Art Interchange gives the following directions for coloring a pine floor which is to be partially covered with rugs: Buy at any painters' store turpentine and linseed oil (not boiled). Ask them to put a little Japanese dryer in the turpentine. Buy either burnt sienna or Vandyke brown, or both, according to the color of the rugs and the tint on the walls. These colors come put up in tin cans, smaller but otherwise similar to tomato or fruit cans. After your floor has been washed thoroughly clean, is free from dust, and dry, begin by opening your can and mixing, in another receptacle, the oil, turpentine and paint. Remember, the oil is to thin your paint, the turpentine to dry it. The mixture should be so thin that it will run with liquid readiness. Lay it on with a brush as thick as your hand, stroking the brush the way of the grain of the wood. Protect your hands with old gloves, and go over the floor with a rag. In fact, you will need two rags, one pretty well charged with paint, to rub in every crevice, and another rag to rub off any superfluous paint. Mind your stops, or, rather, put some mind in the way you stop. Do not stop in a straight line across the grain of wood, but carry your brush irregularly down, taking a hint from nature's lines in the wood you are preserving with paint. By mixing the burnt sienna and Vandyke brown you will secure a rich color without needing to mix the paint in a thick form. Your mixture should be so thin that the grains of the wood will show through. If you have too much turpentine the paint will rub off. If you have too little the room will need more days to dry. Do not use much oil as turpentine evaporates. Do not economize the oil, and be as sparing in rubbing as your strength will permit.

To keep the floor on a stained floor it is recommended once a week to wipe up the floor with a mop dipped in buttermilk or sour milk.

Writing for the Press.

There are thousands of young folks who long to write for the papers and get well paid for it. From the first they think they ought to receive three or four dollars a column, valuing their attempts by the labor expended upon them rather than by their capacity for pleasing the public. Now to get handsomely paid one must write handsomely; to write handsomely one must know what the public knows, or would like to know, and be able to tell it in such a style that the public will be eager to hear it. There are thousands who long to write, but have no special aptitude or preparation, or resource for writing, just as there are thousands who long to be rich, but cannot compass their desires in that direction, and thousands who long to be beautiful, and vainly exhaust fashion, corsets and all, in the attempt. Meantime, those who are found to succeed at writing, and have it in them to succeed, will keep on steadily and quietly at their books and pens, climbing up slowly, it may be, but steadily, to place and pay, first deserving success and then attaining it—just as men grow rich by small accretions at first, and larger accretions afterward. There is an immense reading public, and there must be an immense army of writers to supply the demand. As education and intelligence advance, the demands on writers for higher grades of literary work and new species work will advance, and the more difficult it will be to fill the highest place of honor and emolument in the world, for after the pen is the power. But there is room for all, and some more than enough. Why not you as well as another?

What Common Sense Does.

Common sense is a quality of mind [illegible] presents men in rings, oddness, [illegible] and eccentricity. It clothes him with dignity, invests him with power, and elevates him with superiority. It is [illegible] that is often erratic [illegible] genius, course, not [illegible] of trickery. Genius [illegible] element of true manhood [illegible] of royalty. [illegible] and results in [illegible] to the highest [illegible] but step [illegible] and hindrance [illegible] good [illegible] Common [illegible] of [illegible] extremes [illegible] but step [illegible] and hindrance [illegible] good [illegible] Common [illegible] and approach [illegible] of [illegible] up and [illegible] good for [illegible] misfortune [illegible] something to [illegible] the prop is not [illegible] as cup [illegible] and [illegible] without [illegible]

Such [illegible] it does no more resemble self-made men who have fought their way to position, making difficulties their stepping stones, and deriving determination from defeat, than vines resemble oaks, or spattering rush-lights the stars of heaven. Efforts persisted into achievements teach a man to self-reliance, and when he has proven to the world that he can trust himself the world will trust him.

It is unwise to deprive young men of the advantages which [illegible] their own energetic action by [illegible] them over obstacles which [illegible] mount alone.

A Rare Talent.

The faculty of drawing out of persons with whom one is conversing the best there is in them—brighter things even than they suppose themselves capable of—is the rare gift with which Nature has endowed some women. George Eliot was a most charming person in conversation, though she was a women of few words, because of her intuitive insight into the thoughts of others. A few words would put her in possession, not of what they said, but of what they would fain have said, and she would so improve upon it that ordinary people went away charmed with her who had made them for once at least feel themselves to be wise. Long afterward, perhaps, she would call to their remembrance the wise or witty things which they could hardly believe themselves to have said, and which they assuredly never would have said but for her quickening influence.

BY ANDREW MARVEL.

O say! I'm astonishing that changes
Since I was never married,
When all the girls wore homespun frocks
And spinning-wheels and distaffs
With bonnets made of braided straw
That tilted backwards on the chin,
And knew to hold quietly (?) in the mouth
And fastened with a pin.

But nowadays the ladies wear
Such high three-story hats,
With feathers swinging all around
To scare up the bats.
Their frocks that fall so free
And trailing behind,
They remind the child of a peacock
Yet still more of the wind.

[illegible]

[illegible] Whooping Cough

[illegible] Astronomy is a backward science. We are told that a railway was to run from the earth to the nearest fixed star and the fare was one penny for every hundred miles, and it was safe to take a mass[illegible] sold to the ticket office equal to twice the national debt, or $3,800,000,000. It would not be sufficient to pay for a ticket to the nearest fixed star aforesaid. If this be the case, it matters very little to us whether such a railway is ever constructed. It would be discouraging to go to the ticket-office with a mass of gold equal to $3,800,000,000, and be informed that the fare was $5,678,032,000. If the ticket agent wouldn't trust until we got back we'd be compelled to forego the trip. Northern Herald.

The Union Square Uncle Tom's Cabin Co., has achieved a wonderful success. Overflowing houses have everywhere greeted it. Tickets are selling fast and if you wish good seats purchase them early.

P. W. Adams, Esq., of Delaware, is in town for a few days. He came out on business connected with his father's estate and will remain until next week. We always enjoy a friendly visit with "Waller." We echo not only our own feelings but the sentiment of many others in saying, come often and stay as long as you can.

"Where can I find a piece suitable to speak at school next Friday afternoon?" "What shall I read at the literary society or church entertainment to-night?" When will something new appear fit for humorous or dramatic recitations?" are questions that are continually asked of friends and acquaintances by children, amateur readers and professional elocutionists. The humorous poet and lecturer, Eugene J. Hall, makes an effort to supply this want in a series of original humorous and dramatic recitations. They are issued in numbers at ten cents each. No. 1 is now ready.

The Grand Traverse Herald of Dec. 13th, is a triple sheet containing 20 pages, and is probably the most extensive single edition of a newspaper ever issued in Michigan outside of Detroit. The citizens of Traverse City have reason to be proud of their Herald. A history of the Grand Traverse Region, written by Dr. M. L. Leach, one of the pioneers of Northern Michigan, has been commenced in the Herald and will appear in numbers during the coming year. The paper will be a good one for any Michigan man to read, who takes an interest in the history of his own state.

The fall term of school which closes to-morrow has been a very successful one in many respects. The per cent. of attendance has ranged from 94 to 97, the average being 96. The average tardiness has been only one per cent. Not one teacher has been absent from duty for a single hour during the entire term. One hundred dollars have been added to the piano fund, which now reaches $175, and a piano has been taken on trial from Whitney, of Detroit. Not only Prof. Hammond and the teachers but our citizens also have reason to congratulate themselves on the prosperous condition of the schools.

Manager Baker of our telephone exchange has received notice from headquarters that arrangements have been perfected with Prof. Harrington of the University, at Ann Arbor, for the furnishing of standard time by the use of an automatic machine which gives the beats of the clock at the Observatory. This time may be had on Tuesdays and Fridays, between 8 and 9 A. M., the charge for which would be the usual tariff to Ann Arbor for a communication or message of five minutes duration. This will be an excellent arrangement and we presume there are parties in Tecumseh who will be glad to avail themselves of it.

A Card of Thanks.

We wish to tender our hearty thanks to the public for their generous patronage during the past two weeks; for the many pleasant acquaintances we have made, as well as the privilege of meeting several of our old patrons and friends, and renewing the acquaintance of former years. It is our intention in the near future to have the pleasure of a return visit, notice of which will be given in this journal. Yours Respectfully,
DRS. A. W. & MRS. E. T. FLOWERS.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

Merry Christmas to all.

Have you provided a turkey for next Tuesday?

C. F. Bliven, of Deerfield, has made an assignment.

John McConnell had his horse and cutter out yesterday.

Notice the "ad" of Hough & Hosmer's about wax dolls.

The M. & O. road will soon put on another passenger train.

Mrs. E. F. Smith, of Toledo, made her Tecumseh friends a visit on Tuesday.

A good way to settle your Christmas dinner will be to go and see Uncle Tom.

Forty new box cars to be used on the M. & O. road arrived at Marshall on the 14th.

L. F. Wheeler is engaged to give a lantern entertainment at Clinton on Christmas Eve.

Manchester had quite a serious blaze last Tuesday morning, a hardware store burning up.

The Adrian Grange will hold a Christmas festival and social at their hall, on Tuesday evening, Dec. 25th.

Prosecuting Attorney Salsbury was in town last Friday and favored the HERALD with a friendly call.

The Detroit Times is well liked in this community and has already got a good list here. Thirty-eight copies are now sold.

The post office department at Washington has issued orders requiring the postmasters to run their offices on standard time.

Ann Arbor complains that the deputy sheriffs and tramps are in collusion, the former jailing for the fees and the latter getting jailed to keep warm.

That Tecumseh is blessed with many enterprising business men is evidenced by the fact that many of them advertise freely in the newspapers of the neighboring villages.

Our new club list is appreciated, and judging from present appearances, the people of Tecumseh and surrounding towns will not be slow in availing themselves of it.

Col. N. B. Eldredge, member of Congress from this district, has notified Dr. Rynd that the effort to secure the appointment of a pension board at Adrian has been successful, and that Commissioner Dudley will take the necessary action at an early day. Senator Palmer has seconded the Colonel's efforts in this matter, which is one of justice to veterans in Southern Michigan, who have heretofore been at the mercy of a board of Buckeyes at Toledo.

William Hayden is putting some new apparatus in his mill which will be a great improvement. A patent wheat register is attached to the ceiling, through which the wheat descends into the first set of rollers. New and improved bolts have been connected with the fine cut rollers, which it is claimed will produce an extra fine grade of flour. Mr. Hayden adopts every improvement in milling machinery or apparatus at the earliest opportunity.

At the annual meeting of the Odd Fellows' Mutual Relief association of Michigan held in Adrian last Wednesday, the following were elected trustees: E. H. Whitney, Lansing; J. B. Alwood, Camden; L. N. Burt, Kalamazoo; G. W. Westerman, J. Q. Adams, J. L. Kirk, T. W. Davis, and Niles Peterson, Adrian. The trustees elected the following officers: President, E. H. Whitney; vice president, L. N. Burt; secretary, George W. Westerman; treasurer, J. Q. Adams. The society is in a very flourishing condition.

The works of the Peninsular car company, located at Adrian, are to be removed soon to Detroit. It cost the citizens of Adrian $7,000 to secure the location of the works in that city and the benefits accruing to the city by reason thereof have been very great. There is naturally considerable feeling manifested at their removal. The company contend that the expenses of the branch shop at Adrian are out of proportion to the profits derived by the company and hence they cannot afford to run a separate establishment there. The removal will undoubtedly take place at an early day.

Last Thursday evening, Mr. D. J. Durrell, master mechanic of the M. & O. road, came over from Toledo on a locomotive, and remained over night at Tecumseh. We enjoyed a very pleasant visit with him that evening. He is well pleased with his new position, and believes that the M. & O. is destined to become at an early day one of the best lines of railway in Michigan. During his stop here he had an interview with John Cupples, and engaged his services to run an engine on the new road. Mr. Durrell's headquarters will be transferred to Marshall at an early day. He left on the morning train west on Friday, and Mr. Cupples went with him to take possession of his locomotive.

Prices on dressed and live hogs are advancing.

Don't fail to see Uncle Tom's Cabin the greatest of all Southern Dramas in its superb Revival by the Union Square Co., at Opera House, on Tuesday evening, Dec. 25th.

The man David Young, who was so severely injured by a horse at Abe Hanford's about two weeks ago, has been taken to his home in Raisin, and is now about the house doing well.

The Union Square Uncle Tom's Cabin Co., are positively the only Co. carrying the grand transformation tableau "Beautiful Gates Ajar" in America, which occupies the entire stage to produce it.

Dio Lewis's Monthly for December is on our table, which is the fifth number of this newperiodical. It increases in worth with each number and is destined to attain a large circulation. Terms only $2.50 a year.

Adrian Press: The schools and the churches now run by standard time. The school begins at half past eight instead of nine, and church service commences at 10 o'clock in the morning, and half past six in the evening.

O. B. Bowen, Esq., of Addison, came down on the M. & O. last Tuesday and remained over night. Glad to see him. He got here with some less travel then when he came over to attend the railroad meetings three years ago.

Evening News: Willard Stearns, of the Adrian Press, says he will see Bogole further in tartarus than a pigeon can fly in a week, before he will support him. Willard is a Sunday school superintendent, but draws his similes from the world's people.

The Morenci Observer began its ninth volume last week. It is no disparagement to our other county exchanges to say that the Observer is among the best of them. We heartily wish the Allens many more years of journalistic prosperity.

Willard Stearns, of the Adrian Press, was in town Tuesday, and dropped in to pull our ears a bit. Stearns is round enough for a good alderman, and is feeling happy over the fact that his paper will soon be domiciled in new and commodious quarters.

Mr. Thomas Marshall, of Franklin, has rented his farm to his son Alonzo. "Lon" was formerly of Franklin but left seven years ago. We are glad to see him back, for he is a first-class young man and has many friends in this vicinity who will wish him success.

The pay car on the M. & O. went over the road Tuesday with John Cupples on the locomotive foot board. While the train stopped at the gravel pit to pay off, he ran over home, two blocks off, kissed his wife and the babies, and was back in time to go steaming down the road.

The Presbyterian Sunday School will hold a Christmas concert at the church on Monday evening, Dec. 24, commencing at 7 o'clock. The committee have arranged a good program. Ten cents will be charged at the door to raise money to buy singing books for the school.

Manchester Enterprise: On Saturday, A. F. Freeman, Esq., received a quantity of oranges from Mr. Swan, of Tecumseh, who has an orange grove in Florida, and he very generously passed them around, therefore we came in for a sample. They were very juicy and fine flavored.

Last Friday while a son of Elijah Wilson was handling a colt, the colt kicked him on the leg inflicting an ugly cut above the knee. Dr. H. W. Catlin was called and dressed the wound. Mr. Wilson was in town yesterday and said the boy was doing well and was in skillful hands.

The old furniture headquarters of Wm. McCowen is now crowded full of furniture adapted to the wants of this community. His goods are none of the shoddy kind, made for show and not for use, but reliable goods and as for prices, he sells them cheaper than other dealers ask for their tumble down articles. Buy once of McCowen and you will buy your furniture at no other place afterwards.

Christmas and New Year's cards cheaper than ever at the HERALD office.

Mrs. Tom Navin, of Adrian, is now in New York preparing to go on the stage as Rosalind. Mrs. N. makes a mistake. She should get Bronson Howard to write her a brand new play entitled "Adrianna or the Mayor's wife." It would draw immensely in this neighborhood.—Jackson Citizen.

The American Farmer and the Tecumseh Herald for $1.75 a year. We have perfected arrangements with the publishers of the American Farmer of Fort Wayne, Ind., that enable us to offer our subscribers a first class agricultural magazine at the bare cost of the white paper on which it is printed. The American Farmer is a 16 page monthly magazine which is rapidly taking rank as one of the leading agricultural publications of the country. Each number will contain useful information for the farmer, his wife, his sons and his daughters. As it comes you should not delay, suppose you try it one year.

Miss Hattie V. Bills, daughter of the late Hon. Perley Bills, and sister of O. P. Bills, is attaining a fine reputation in her chosen profession. Her Tecumseh acquaintances will be glad to learn of her success. The following complimentary notice is clipped from an East Saginaw paper:

The St. Louis Leader of Wednesday speaks favorably of East Saginaw's lady physician. "Dr. Harriet V. Bills, of East Saginaw, operated on Miss Mary Scott of this place, last Tuesday for squint. The operation was witnessed by Dr. Kennedy, who pronounces it skillfully and successfully performed, and he recognizes in Dr. Bills one of the most promising oculists of the State. She has recently returned from a sojourn in Europe, where she has spent the time in study of this specialty.

Not Complimentary

Tom is a Scotchman, and is employed as a porter at the Lawrence house. Saturday afternoon he was detailed to take care of the wants of the Kellogg concert company, in which duty he was so extremely active as to command the approval of Clara Louise herself. According, before her departure for the opera house, she handed Tom a complimentary ticket to the entertainment.

"What's that" said he, with a good broad Scotch accent.

"A pass for you to night," was the reply.

"And what am I to pass with it?"

"You don't understand me, Tom. It is a pass, a ticket to the entertainment where I sing this evening."

"I dinna want it. I'm a waitin' for the nigger show next week."

He didn't get the pass.—Adrian Times.

UNCLE TOM AND CHRISTMAS.

Last Tuesday morning we arose promptly at eight o'clock, standard time, adjusted our toilet, laid in an extra supply of buckwheat cakes and molasses, swept the snow from the front steps, and started for the office. Upon arriving there what did our eyes behold but a huge colored poster covering the editorial table announcing the welcome intelligence that Uncle Tom's Cabin is coming. The cabin will be exhibited at the opera house on Tuesday evening, Dec. 25th. Won't Christmas be a jolly day in this town this year? People can collect their Santa Claus presents in the morning, eat turkey in the afternoon, and go to see Uncle Tom in the evening. Blessings never come singly, and this Uncle Tom troupe is no "ordinary" affair either. It is the Union Square Company, with brand new scenery. In addition to the usual attractions they will introduce the celebrated Rocky Mountain Burro, that Mark Twain rode in his trip over the Rocky Mountains. No lead pencil description can do justice to this Burro. He must be seen to be appreciated.

A CASE OF BLOOD POISONING.

We regret to hear that Dr. C. M. Woodward, an able physician and surgeon of Tecumseh, and a very worthy gentleman, is in a very critical condition from "blood poisoning." About ten days ago he amputated the limb of a Swede, an employe of the M. & O. railroad, above the knee. Gangrene very soon developed, and the doctor, in dressing the diseased limb, was so unfortunate as to prick the index finger of the right hand with a needle. He thought nothing of the accident that day (last Tuesday), but in the night following the most alarming symptoms were manifest. He has suffered very much, not only in the hand and arm, but also from the effect of the poison operating in his system. His family and friends became greatly alarmed and telegraphed Dr. Rynd, who visited the patient yesterday, making very few incisions and advising the required treatment. Dr. Rynd has confidence that all will be well, which Dr. W's many friends sincerely hope. The case is under the immediate management of Dr. H. W. Catlin, who is devoting his best skill to its treatment.

The above is taken from the Adrian Times of Monday. It speaks well for the reputation of Dr. H. W. Catlin, that he should be entrusted with the charge of so formidable a disease as poisoning of the blood, and we hope his medical patient will come out all right under his treatment. Dr. H. W. Catlin was the assistant in the case of amputation referred to, and the Swede is now doing finely under Dr. Catlin's management.

Hubbard's Voice Company designs soon to visit Tecumseh for the purpose of organizing one of their popular Voice Schools. These schools are in the interest of, and will greatly benefit choirs, Sabbath schools and social music. They organize with a free concert.

Deerfield Record: Sam Crist came down from Tecumseh the other day, with a Texas pony. Sunday he became afraid the animal and riding down to John Longe's, called him out and proceeded to show off the mustang's points. The first move was down the road, and the pony took two or three leaps, firmly planted his fore feet in the sand, elevated his hind ones, and suddenly came to a stop. Sam didn't stop. Oh, no! he kept right along. He was in a hurry, too. He was not exactly sent for, but he was sent for. He described a somerset and struck all in a heap in the sand.

Morenci Observer: A rich and withal a gay old widower of Adrian, it is related, met a couple of clever, handsome Morenci girls lately, and in the course of their rapid acquaintance he asked them with his accustomed jocularity, whether there were any desirable, ready to accept, you know, sort of young widows in the village-on-the-Bean. He was politely informed that the woods were full of 'em, so to speak, but the particular kind of female he hankered after must be an adept at making salt rising bread, he wanted no other. Would they, on their return home, let him know if such a delightful creature could be found there? Doubtless he thought the joke would end here, but he failed to calculate on the spirit of fun that ever rules the aforesaid girls, else he would not have made this request, for at a late hour the other evening he was surprised to receive a telegram, on which the messenger boy collected charges. It read very lucidly as follows: "Come over. Widow found. Salt-rising bread." He confesses that the girls are ahead.

A CORRECTION.

EDITOR HERALD:

I notice by last week's HERALD that the "Farmers Club" is much exercised about the board of supervisors, and I would like to correct an error that they appear to have picked up somewhere. Instead of being, as they insinuate, three days in electing a chairman last fall, it was done in less than one hour, and within two hours after the board met. As for those parties who have not paid their taxes yet, if they will take pains to post themselves, they will find that the board of supervisors had no control over the excess of taxes this year. The tax for court-house this year is 80 cents on every $1,000 valuation, and the rest of the amount is made up from the long session of our legislature last winter and the appropriation for the Northern asylum that was made by the legislature of 1881. The election of U. S. senator last winter cost something. As for the "Adrian pauper inebriates," there is one member of that club who could have given a good explanation of that matter if he had thought best. I was surprised to see some men mentioned in the proceedings of that meeting trying to mislead the taxpayers of this county.

There is another item of tax I had forgotten. The highway work tax under the present law has to be spread on the roll the same as other taxes, but it does not cost the farmers any money, though it makes their taxes look big. If they work out their highway tax their receipt for their work pays the tax.

TECUMSEH PEOPLE IN LANSING.

Our friend B. L. Baxter has been for some time acting as clerk for the State Board of Charities at Lansing. Witter Baxter, of Jonesville, is secretary of the Board, and as he is obliged to be away most of the time he has procured B. L. Baxter to take charge of the business during his absence. This is an excellent arrangement for both parties. We take the liberty of using a few extracts from a private letter of his, mentioning the doings of some of our former Tecumseh residents who now reside in Lansing.

L. C. Blood, now nine years from Tecumseh, has a grocery and provision store here, is very much respected and is regarded as doing very well indeed financially. Young Henry, son of Sam'l L. Henry, of Tecumseh, is with him in the store, and has, I think, an interest in it. At any rate he is doing well, making money, and already owns two or three city houses, which he rents.

J. S. Tucker's family resides here. Charley, his oldest son, is married and a clerk, very much respected.

Al. Dingman is one of the leading dentists here and is doing well and quite popular. Mrs. Dingman, Charley Fitzsimmons and wife live out on the farm near the Agricultural College, some three or four miles from here, and are well spoken of. So much for Tecumsehites in Lansing.

Lansing, like Washington, is a city of magnificent distances, but is rapidly filling up. It is some 2½ or 3 miles north and south by 3 to 3½ east and west. There have been over 1000 bushels of wheat, and probably 400 to 500 tons of hay raised within the city corporation this year. Still it has large manufacturing establishments, besides the capitol, state reform school, school for the blind, two fire steamers, and is soon to have electric lights and street railways, and is bound to go ahead in manufactories.

An error appears in our club list as printed last week. The HERALD and American Farmer are taken at $1.75, not at $1.50 as therein stated. Persons who have already given their subscriptions will be accommodated, but hereafter the rate on these two papers will be $1.75. This is cheap enough in all conscience to satisfy the most exacting.

Barney Cavenizen and Tim Curtin forged a receipt with Mrs. Margaret West's name, drew their pay, plus board, from the M. & O. paymaster, and skipped the country. Mrs. West made complaint and John Smith started in pursuit, and now the chaps are lodged in Adrian jail in default of $500 bail. Good piece of work.

The annual meeting of the State Teacher's association will be held at Lansing next week, Dec. 26 and 27. Prof. Hammond will attend, and he expects to take a considerable delegation of Tecumseh teachers along with him. Judging from the contents of the programme, the meeting ought to be a very interesting and profitable one.

What is the matter with our street lamps lately? They seem to be turned very low and burn until mornings. On Chicago street last night six out of seven above Evans street gave no light at all and the seventh lamp was the one in front of the Presbyterian church. Complaints are brought in from other parts of the village also.

Made a Fiddle.

The need of something to cheer and exhilarate in the dreary days and nights was painfully apparent, and gave rise to unheard of attempts to supply the demand. The ingenuity of the Yankee soldier was generally equal to any such emergency, but probably was not more strikingly displayed than in the manufacture of a "fiddle." It was at "Brandy Station," Va., in the winter of 1863-4 that George M. Ott, company C, Second Vermont volunteers, proceeded to make the cheer-giving instrument, and with a hatchet, jack-knife, file and a piece of a junk bottle as his only tools he cut a piece of maple from a stump that grew on the bank of the Rappahannock River and set to work. The back and sides of the fiddle are made of one piece, a regular [illegible] of beauty of maple. Rude as it is, its origin, its tone is remarkably expressive, especially in the rendering of "Old John Brown" and other airs that were offsprings of the wars which seem to revive in the memory of the exciting scenes of its early existence. DR. PENGELLY:
[illegible] overwork has done for my health [illegible] to bear my suffering women, I add my testimony to the [illegible] Zoa-Phora. For years I suffered greatly with a prolapsus, being obliged to use a supporter during all those painful, weary years, but, thanks to your medicine, I wear it no more. I had stood it a few months after using one and a half bottles. I am not well, but I work all the time, and am better than I ever expected to be. You have my letter, and if you anywhere wish to write me for more information, from time to time, full address. Mrs. [illegible]

JERSEYVILLE, ILL., April 23, 1882.
DR. PENGELLY:
Dear Sir:—I am more than pleased with the effect of your Zoa-Phora in our daughter's case. I am surprised to see how she has improved. She is gaining in weight and color, and I think feels better than she ever did; her nerves are steady, and the distress in her side is entirely gone. I firmly believe that Zoa-Phora is all that has saved her life. I am willing you should use my letter, for I am not afraid to tell what a wonderful cure your medicine is. Yours respectfully,
MRS. SARAH HANDOLPH

Mrs. John Spidler,
No. 28 Wilt St, Fort Wayne, Ind.

I have suffered for sixteen years with spasmodic pain in my head and general nervous debility. Recently I had a severe attack of pain in my head, caused by weakness and nervous exhaustion. I thought I should die. My husband said we would test Zoa-Phora thoroughly. He gave it to me according to directions for severe cases, and in less than two hours I had complete relief. I advise all ladies who suffer from nervous or sick headache, or any form of female weakness, to use Zoa-Phora. There is no medicine to compare with it.

DR. A. PRASKI'S
MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.
It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, when the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest healing balm of the age for outward application.
The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.
WHAT IT CURES.
All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.
It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.
Over 40 Years,
This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.
Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

OXYGEN
NOT A DRUG

A NEW TREATMENT.
For Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, Dyspepsia, Catarrh, Headache, Debility, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all Chronic and Nervous Disorders.

A CARD.

We the undersigned, having received great and permanent benefit from the use of "COMPOUND OXYGEN," prepared and administered by DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, of Philadelphia, and being satisfied that it is a new discovery in medical science, and all that is claimed for it, consider it a duty which we owe to the many thousands who are suffering from chronic and so-called "incurable" diseases to do all that we can to make its virtues known, and to inspire the public with confidence.

We have personal knowledge of Drs. Starkey & Palen. They are educated, intelligent and conscientious physicians, who will not, we are sure, make any statement which they do not know or believe to be true, nor publish any testimonials or reports of cases which are not genuine.

DR. B. MINCER,

Scientific Optician!

I have devoted 25 years wholly to a study of the eye, and how to aid vision properly, and I make a specialty of fitting glasses to the eyes that have been injured by cheap, inferior glasses. I manufacture every kind of glasses, and guarantee satisfaction. Read what prominent physicians of Adrian say:

Having for some time past used glasses to improve my sight, without satisfactorily gaining my object, I called on Mr. Mincer, optician, of Detroit, who readily adapted glasses to my eyes, with which I am so well pleased, that I cheerfully speak in his favor. His method of examining and its application in selecting glasses to fit the eye can only be acquired by a knowledge of the useful organ to which must be added extensive experience. He has also adapted glasses to Mrs. Baker's eyes with which she is well pleased. I recommend him to all who need glasses adapted to their wants; poor glasses are an abomination. V. A. BAKER, M.D.

ADRIAN, Nov. 18, 1882.

I have used spectacles bought of Mr. B. Mincer for the past three months, and find them superior to any I have ever used, and can cheerfully recommend him to anyone in need of glasses, and the benefit of his experience in the science of optics to adjust proper lenses.

DANIEL TODD, M.D.

I have investigated the work of Mr. B. Mincer, optician. I have reason to believe that he understands his profession, and adjusts excellent glasses on scientific principles. C. YND, M.D.

REMEMBER!

I will visit every town in Lenawee county during the month.

A Turkish Tobacco Farm.

We were met at the gate by the peasant farmer and proprietor, an open-faced, robust, well-made man, sixty years old, who looked ten years younger, and whose smiling face seemed to say that care, which to a true Mohammedan is sin, had never cast upon him its oppressive shadow. With the proverbial politeness of the Turk we were welcomed and shown up into a room destitute of either chairs or sofas, with the floor strewn with carpets on which, round the sides are couches with low cushions. Squatting on a couch we receive cigarettes and coffee, and the host brings us a pouch containing some of his fresh tobacco, cut by him to test the quality of the new crop. With pride he dwells upon its excellent perfume and the connoisseurs who accompany me test it by the eye and the nose before bringing it to the test of the palate. It is declared an excellent crop, to the evident delight of the worthy cultivator. We then descend to the court yard full of tobacco leaves drying in the sun. These leaves are plucked from the plant according to their class for each stalk contains five [illegible] leaves; before the heat of the midday sun, and, as plucked, the leaves from each plant are left in a little heap upon the ground under the shade of the plant. When the day's plucking is completed, the pluckers go round, and gathering up all the little heaps, take them home, where they are placed leaf above leaf against the inner wall of a shed in a row of about nine inches high by about the same broad. Three days they so lie until the extra moisture on the leaves has, as it is described, got to the ground. Then a worker, most frequently a girl or boy, seated on the ground, passes the leaves one by one upon a needle fifteen inches long, three-edged, and threaded with a cord. When the whole surface of the needle is covered he draws it through, and goes on until he has covered a cord of about twelve feet in length. These cords are suspended in the open air upon wooden frames—each cord apart, about nine inches from the other—and thus suspended they remain for about fifteen days exposed to the sun and air until they are so crisp that the leaves break to the touch. The frames, rods and hooks are ingeniously constructed, all of wood of natural form and dimensions, not touched by a plane, and all the work of the peasant. Nearby, under a shed, in a place ready upon which the rods will suspended leaves can rapidly be transferred in the event of rain. When the leaves are sufficiently dried the cords and leaves are removed to the ceiling of the adjoining shed and hung from wooden hooks about a foot apart, the two ends of the cord having been tied, and the circle thus formed is suspended from its center. So suspended the leaves remain for two or three months, until the dampness of the autumn air makes them pliable. Then they are removed, one by one with the hand from off the cord, and packed leaf over leaf with the greatest care into little bales. In spring a natural fermentation sets in, and it is under this fermentation that the leaves acquire their deep yellow tint. During the fermentation the bales have to be constantly turned. The fermentation over, about the middle of May the tobacco is ready for delivery. Merchants in Xanthi wait its delivery with impatience, and in a few months hardly any remains in the hands of the cultivators. The packages as received by the merchants are opened and carefully classified into three categories—A, B and C. The Austrian-Hungarian Regie receive nearly a third of the whole crop, and the rest is distributed among the other countries of the world. Russia getting the largest share. But before it reaches the vast majority of smokers the choice leaves are mixed with "Kirchi Yaka," and even inferior qualities, and it may be questioned whether 100 smokers abroad enjoy the unmixed article. When it is mentioned that the best leaves are only from three to five inches in length, and that a cord of them twelve feet in length only weighs a pound and four-fifths, some conception may be formed of the myriads of leaves which have three times passed, one by one, through the hands of the workers. It is a work of patience, but it has its reward.

Notwithstanding the great excellence of these choice tobaccos to-day those who remember them twenty years ago acknowledge that their quality has deteriorated since then. The cause of this deterioration was easily explained to me. Encouraged by high prices and an ever-increasing demand, cultivators have gradually been extending their culture outside of the favored belt of land. This extension is only to the limits of 500 to 1,000 yards, and yet the deterioration is sufficient to be observable. This slightly deteriorated produce is mixed with the choice and diminishes the quality of the whole. The gradual deterioration is likely still to go on, and it is only owing to the unambitious characteristics of the Mussulman cultivators that the deterioration does not proceed more rapidly.

To attain the finest smoking of "Yaka" tobacco, the connoisseur requires to blend the qualities of the different villages according to the nature of the year's crop. Thus, to smoke "Gelepli" tobacco alone would give but a poor conception of what the finest smoking may be. In "Gelepli" may be found a high perfume, while in that of another village strength and taste, or what the modern Greeks more aptly call "aroma," must be sought. It is this science of blending which is the most delicate, and the number of connoisseurs equal to the task is few. In Xanthi itself such thorough connoisseurs may be counted on the fingers of one hand.—Constantinople Cor. London Times.

If you must have a best girl, by all means get one from Cleveland, O. It is alleged to be on record as history that a young lady of that city recently confessed that she so adored a dentist, the homeliest man in the city, too, that she had had five sound teeth pulled for the sole privilege of being near him a few moments.—N. Y. Journal.

KING OF THE BLOOD.

The Most Thorough Purifier of the Blood Yet Discovered.

Cures Salt Rheum, from a Common Eruption to the worst Scrofula.

It purifies the Blood.
It invigorates the Liver.
It regulates the Bowels.
It strengthens the Stomach.
It gives vivacity in place of lassitude, cheerfulness in place of gloom, and robust vigor in place of debility.

Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Disordered Liver, Constipation, Nervous Affections, General Debility, in short all the numerous diseases and discomforts caused by impure blood are speedily conquered by this powerful corrector, the chief and sovereign of all ancient or modern medical discoveries—KING OF THE BLOOD.

Its name is its best description as it is a royal conqueror of the 25 stages of health and vanquishes all diseases from the Blood.

It banishes PIMPLES, SALT RHEUM, SCALY ERUPTIONS, ULCERS, SCALD HEAD, FEVER SORES, and all SCROFULOUS DISORDERS.

It checks CONSUMPTION in its early stages. It has frequently cured it when advanced.

It disperses TUMORS and CANCERS without the Surgeon's knife.

It cures DROPSY, general or partial.

It cures FEMALE WEAKNESS and DISEASE.

It reduces in a safe and effectual manner all swellings, external or internal.

It eradicates the effects of Venerial Disease and Mineral Poisons, and establishes a sound constitution.

Many certificates, much further information and full directions for using, will be found in the pamphlet, "Treatise on Diseases of the Blood," in which each bottle is enclosed.

Price $1 per bottle containing 12 ounces, or full 50 doses. Sold by dealers in medicine.

If your druggist does not happen to have it on hand, request him to order a supply of it for you, as it will be cheaper than for you to order direct of us, and less trouble.

EIGHT THOUSAND DOLLARS CASH.

STATEMENT OF S. L. GROAT.

I have been afflicted with Rheumatism for the past twenty-five years; I have been so lame for the last three years that I have been obliged to use crutches all this time. I have tried every Patent Remedy I could hear of and have paid out to doctors over eight thousand dollars, and I can solemnly say that I have never taken a medicine that has given me as much relief as Wilson's Lightning Remedy. And I consider it the best remedy for Inflammatory or Acute Rheumatism that exists, and will give relief quicker than any other known remedy. My son was affected with the disease, and after taking the first dose he experienced a relief, and was perfectly cured of the disease after taking eight doses. S. L. GROAT.

BULL DOG LETS.

A man who had travelled abroad,
Was heard very plain to speak out
"I have chewed in all lands,
But the finest of brands
Is the 'Bull Dog' without any doubt."

A man up at Kalamazoo
Said no decent tobacco he knew
But the "Bull Dog" he tried
Was so well satisfied
He bought a whole caddy to view.

A resident at a way-station
Was grumbling about his location,
He said: "I'd not mind
If I only could find
'Bull Dog Plug' in the port of Canada."

An old man who used it betimes,
Saw a "Bull Dog" sign over a door
He said: "While I'm by,
I'll procure a supply,
And bought all they had in the store."

An old miser, not noted for charities,
Said his son nearly died of consumption.
But his health was renewed
When the "Bull Dog" he chewed,
That he died was the common presumption.

But the speedily increasing demand
Shows the chewers do all understand,
Though "Bull Dog" don't cost
All the fills we endorse,
'TIS THE FINEST BY FAR IN THE LAND.

DIED.

LINDSLEY.—At her home in Saline township, a little north of Macon village, on the 6th of December, 1883, Miss Mary Ann Lindsley.

She was born May 14, 1841, at the homestead, in Saline township, where she died. Her parents had settled there in 1834. When she was sixteen years of age her father died, and since the decease of her mother in February, 1880, she has been the faithful aid and kind companion of her only brother, who because of this long-continued and intimate companionship keenly feels the blow, and together with a sister and her children mourns the departure of the beloved one. For she had many excellent qualities, and had won not only the affection of her kindred, but also the friendship and esteem of many others. Testimony to this fact was borne by the large attendance at the funeral services, which were held on Saturday, Dec. 8th, at the family residence. The pastor, Rev. J. A. De Spelder, preached on 2 Tim., 2:11, "It is a faithful saying: For if we be dead with Him, we shall also live with Him."

The remains were laid to rest in the family burial-lot, in the Hutton cemetery, Saline.

ESTATE OF EDMUND HAND.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, on Monday, the 17th day of December, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three.

Present, Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Edmund Hand, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of William W. Osgood, administrator of said estate, praying that he may pay the debts of said deceased, his funeral expenses and expenses of administration, thus far incurred, and praying for the allowance of his final account for an assignment and distribution of the residue of said estate to and among those legally entitled thereto and for his discharge.

Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the 14th day of January next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

ESTATE OF JOSEPH TAYLOR.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, on Monday, the 17th day of December, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three.

Present, Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Joseph Taylor, late of Ravenswood, in the County of Cheshire, England, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Homer L. Stewart, alleging, among other things, that the property of said deceased is at least in part a mortgage upon real estate in said County of Lenawee, owned by him, and which is not exempt from dower, and that it is part due and that it becomes necessary for administration upon said estate for the collection of said mortgage and praying that administration of said estate may be granted to Edwin R. Wood, or to some other suitable person.

Thereupon it is Ordered, That Monday, the 14th day of January next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the next-of-kin of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said Petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said Petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

THE SUN

NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of THE SUN have gone out from our establishment during the past 12 months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of all THE SUNS printed and sold last year you would get a continuous strip of interesting information, common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the moon, then back to Printing House square, and then three-quarters of the way back to the moon again.

But THE SUN is written for the inhabitants of the earth; this same strip would girdle the globe twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of THE SUN during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and if his wife or his grandfather has spent a further hour, this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading, night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

THE SUN is, and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without the fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the republican party must go, and must go in this coming year of our Lord, 1884. If you know THE SUN, you like it already, and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know THE SUN, it is high time to get into the sunshine.

CATARRH IN THE HEAD

TRADE MARK.

Can positively be cured by using DR. P. HALL'S CATARRH REMEDY. A new compound, entirely different from all other preparations. It is in the form of a fine ointment which is easily applied in the nostrils and ears, and reaches the seat of the disease by absorption. Pleasant to the smell, and most efficient in operation. For Hay Fever, also impaired Hearing, Sight, Smell and Taste, produced by Catarrhal disease, it is a positive cure. The most noted Physicians and prominent Druggists all over the land have given it their endorsement. We have the unsolicited testimonials of hundreds of prominent and reliable men, who have been permanently cured. Do not be humbugged by nostrums, prepared by the inexperienced and unreliable, but insist upon having this Excellent Remedy, compounded by a Physician who has made this disease a study for 30 years. Two to four bottles generally sufficient to effect an entire cure. Satisfaction guaranteed or Money refunded. It is a positive cure for Ear-ache. For sale by Druggists. Also sent by mail, postpaid, upon receipt of 50c; single bottle, package of two bottles $1.00. Circulars and testimonials free.

Address DR. P. HALL, Wholesale and Retail Druggist, 630 State Street, Erie, Pa.

CAUTION.—Beware of counterfeits or imitations. The above Trade Mark will be found on every bottle and do not buy without it.

DETROIT

Cement Sewer Pipe Works.

E. M. CASEY, Proprietor.

To those who have never witnessed it, the process of cement pipe manufacture is quite interesting. A few moments' ride by Michigan avenue car from the center of the city will land one almost before the door of the above named establishment at 256 Trumbull avenue. One may see here large quantities of solid looking pipes, and upon inquiry learn that some are intended for wells, others for chimneys, sewers, drains, etc. Special attention is called to their Well pipe from 12 to 20 inches in diameter, the latter size being large enough to admit a man to work inside thereby saving expense in excavation.

Here is another problem: A person on assuming the liquor agency of a town received $58 cash and $59.50 in liquor. He bought $282.85 stock, and sold $293.55 worth during the year, and turned over $81 in liquor at the end of the year, and was to receive $69 salary. Did the town owe the agent or the agent owe the town, did the town make or lose, and how much?

The Beal gas well is still boiling, not hot water as many papers reported it, the boiling being occasioned by the escape of natural gas. A gas-pipe was inserted and resulted in a nice blaze at the top. Mr. Sweet has set up his boring machine at the well, and is boring down with an 8-inch auger. When about 30 feet down the auger struck a stone, which was removed by attaching a cap and two or three feet of lighted water-proof fuse to three pounds of "Hercules" powder, and lowering the same to the point of contact. "It shook the ground for rods around."

There is an apparent oat swindle going the rounds, and the farmers are biting nicely. The scheme is to sell a farmer five or more bushels of hulless seed oats at $10 per bushel and take his note for a year. The other party agreeing to come around before the note is due and sell twice as many bushels for the farmer at the same price per bushel. We will not give our version of the catch, but leave it for those interested to figure out. They will be more likely to remember it, and avoid other similar schemes.

We have just returned from a visit among friends at Caro, the county seat of Tuscola county. Caro is a lively, go-ahead village, about the size of Tecumseh, pleasantly situated on the Cass river, which is somewhat larger than the river Raisin, and affords ample water power for mills, &c. The country west of the river is an old, thickly settled country of well-to-do farmers. The first attempt at an agricultural fair was last fall, in competition with the regular county fair at Vassar, which it fully equaled, and is destined ere long to be the place for holding the county fairs.

We took a stroll over the poor-house farm and through the buildings, under the guide of the superintendent, and found everything in ample order and only 20 inmates. The country east of and bordering on the river is comparatively new, but is being thickly settled; "the woodman's ax" can be heard in every direction. It is a portion of the burnt district of two years ago. A large portion of the timber lies in every conceivable shape, just as the fire left it, and consists of beech, maple, ash, elm, hemlock, cedar, now and then a pine, and here and there an oak, which are being cut into wood, ties, lumber, fence posts, telegraph poles, &c., and command a good price. Some 12 or 15 families from Macon, Saline and Clinton availed themselves of the low price of these lands after the fire ($6 to $15 per acre), and are clearing up pleasant homes within sight of the county seat.

We met a number of our old acquaintances at a surprise party at "Lime" Grady's the night before our return. "The woods were full of them;" they came on foot cross-lots, in wagons and buggies, to the number of about 40, happy as larks and had a jolly time. It reminded us of "the scenes of our childhood." Al. Rowland, Wm. Lamb, Aaron Wixon and "Frier" Wixon were among them. Al. Rowland sends his regards to everybody, and especially to John Hicks, with whom he was engaged in the lightning rod business for 12 years.

FARMERS' CLUB.

Friday evening, Dec. 21st, 1883, the club met at I. H. Schreders. The attendance was very good. The program was a good one, and was well carried out in proper order.

Singing by the choir.
Recitation—Mamie Rector.
Music—Grant Schreder, Henry Horton.
Essay—I. H. Schreder.
Declamation—Henry Horton.
Select reading—Charles Griswold.
Music—Grant Schreder, Henry Horton.

The whole program was so well rendered that it is entirely unnecessary for the secretary to give any one especial praise, for all did well.

QUESTION DISCUSSED.

What is the most profitable land fertilizer and the proper method and time of applying? Opened by Mr. John Fisher, who said if he was going to answer the question short, would say barn-yard manure, but had no doubt but that there were many other fertilizers that it would pay the farmer to use.

Mr. Kehoe thinks barn-yard manure the most profitable, but we don't have enough of it; has been told by good authority that bone meal gave good results, but pretty expensive; but his choice for far off fields would be clover; would apply manure in the spring for corn, but would apply all he could in the fall for wheat.

Mr. Rector—The more plaster you sow the worse you are off; as to salt, thinks but little of it; says the best fertilizer we have is barn-yard manure; don't care when you apply it, it does good.

Mr. George Griswold said he was here over fifty years ago, and is sure that our lands will produce from one-third to one-half more now than when the country was new; thinks he can trace it all, or nearly all, to the application of plaster and clover; had been informed by some that had used salt that they had received much benefit from it, not only in yield, but in heft of berry.

Club adjourned to meet at John Gilespie's on Friday evening, Jan. 4th, 1884.

Program for the next meeting:

Music by the choir ("Don't forget the old folks.")
Declamation—Willie Fitzsimmons.
Select reading—Mrs. F. A. Horton.
Music—Grant Schreder, Henry Horton.
Recitation—Ida Rector.
Singing—Lizzie Henderson, Kittie Griswold.
Essay—Austin G. Hall.
Music—Grace Gilespie.
Subject for discussion—Does fall ploughing pay?

F. V. HORTON, Sec'y.

A Grave Question.

Gen. Innes, the Michigan railroad commissioner, in his report has this to say of the C. & W. M. R. R. Co., abandoning the railroad between Nunica and Holland: "It becomes a grave question for consideration whether a company, having once constructed a line of railroad under the franchises granted it by the state, and opened it for the public use, and by its location through a district of country induced people to make settlements, to build and to invest large sums of money with the expectation that the railroad was a permanent improvement from which the advantages usual to railroads were sure to be realized, can of its own pleasure, abandon its road, take up the track, and leave the people and business communities on its line without the facilities to which good faith and frequently large contributions of material aid entitle them. If a street or public highway once opened and dedicated to the public use by the private owners of land cannot be vacated without due process of law, there would seem to be still stronger reasons why a great public use like a railroad should not be abandoned by the corporation that built it without full indemnity to the people damaged by the abandonment. The question will be brought to the attention of the court by the attorney general.

The Ministry and Divorce.

As we have said, divorce is only the safety-valve to relieve society from the pressure of other evils. But it needs to be spoken against by every lover of purity and good order. Especially should ministers cry out against it, and against the evils which lie back of it. It is time for them to take an advanced position on this and all other questions of reform. Some seem to think that clergymen should not discuss bad laws and evil customs; they seem to think that a minister, when he takes orders, loses his rights as a citizen. But ministers are regarded as leaders and public teachers. They can arouse the public conscience on this question. As the New York Tribune well says: "Unless that is first aroused, laws will not help us."

But ministers are in a position to do more than cry out against divorce and its causes. They can act. They can make their influence felt in a way that will lead the public to have more respect for the obligations of the marriage relation. They can refuse to marry improperly divorced parties. In the same editorial from which we have already quoted, the New York Tribune justly and pointedly says: "The protests of clergymen will have an influence. Indeed we are inclined to suspect that the silence, the indifference, nay, worse, the connivance of ministers, has had more effect than almost any other single cause in producing a state of things which all the churches lament. Any divorced person, however guilty, can find a clergyman to perform an illegal and morally bigamous marriage without asking inconvenient questions. There are ministers—many of them—who will marry anybody, just as there are lawyers who will take any case. Some of these lax parsons would not deliberately make themselves accomplices in crime; but they reason that they may throw upon the contracting parties the whole responsibility for the transaction, and that the clergyman may assume that 'it is all right' or they would not come to him. It is no wonder that the laity lose respect for the churches when preachers seem to care so little about public morals."

This is a pointed arraignment; but not more pointed than just. Let ministers take a bold stand, and act as well as teach.

Our Duty in Regard to the Liquor Laws.

There are those so much opposed to the principle of licensing iniquity that they will do nothing to help execute a license law. We think that this is all wrong. We do not hesitate to maintain that prohibition is the true principle. From five years residence in a state where it has been the policy for a number of years we know that it does lessen the evil; it makes it impossible for the rumseller to flaunt his business in the faces of decent people. And the time is coming when prohibition will triumph in this land. The politicians are afraid now to submit the question to a popular vote, and since the election in Ohio they will dread it still more. But it will come. All the politicians and schemers in the earth and under the earth cannot prevent it. But our motto is a half loaf is better than no bread.—In the state of Michigan we have as good a license law as could be framed. It prohibits the sale of intoxicants to those who are intoxicated, to those who are habitual drunkards and to minors. It could not go further without prohibiting entirely. The other provisions are stringent.

But we have only to read it once to see that its provisions are being violated every day in every village and city. We ought to enforce it. We shall awaken public sentiment on the temperance question, and bring about prohibition sooner by compelling our rumsellers to obey the law. Every public prosecution will help to educate our people. Besides, winking at lawlessness on this subject, encourages lawlessness in other directions. If we can not have the best laws, we owe it to our country and to the rising generation to execute sternly every law upon our statute books. There is no reason why the keeper of a saloon should not be compelled to obey the law just as strictly as other citizens.

The laws can be enforced if the people take it in hand. When the officers will do their duty, one active citizen can make it so warm for Mr. Rumseller that he will not dare to openly violate the law. This has been proved by the example of D. Q. Barry, pastor of the Baptist church in Clayton. Who will have the courage to follow his example?

Try Buckingham's Dye for the whiskers; it is an elegant, safe and reliable article, cheap and convenient for use, and will not rub off.

A CAPTURE

I caught it; yet I am not proud,
I have no smallest will
To vaunt myself and seek applause
For having displayed skill.
It cost no skill; the easiest thing
In life it was to do;
I caught it without use of baits,
Snares, nets, tricks old or new;
And still I am not vain of that,
As may be I have been
Sometimes at a facility
That made me quick to win.

I caught it; yet I am not proud,
And you are quite unfair
To say that I parade it, though,
And show it everywhere.
I'd rather not; it's not my fault
The capture will obtrude—
Though I would hide it if I could—
Persistently and rude.
O! who am I to was claire
And step braggart and boldly
I caught it, but am not as meek,
For I have caught a cold!

Ella W. Baker, in Springfield (Mass) Republican.

AN INTERESTING PATIENT.

Two men sat in a pleasant room in a city boarding-house, chatting confidentially. Both were young, somewhere between twenty-five and thirty, and both were enthusiastic students of the noble profession of medicine. They had become intimate at college, and a strong friendship existed that had known no jar or break. Dr. Wilfred Atkinson was a Western man, coming from Illinois; while Dr. Frederick Read claimed a New England town for his birthplace.

It was Fred Read who said:

"You will accept this offer?"

"Accept it?" cried his friend. "I should think so. It is what I want most in the world. You see, I have always been more interested in the study of insanity than in any other form of disease, and to be resident physician in an asylum, where I have only made weekly visits, gives me opportunity for study that I could never have elsewhere.

"Yes. I know all that; but it will be very confining. I think I prefer general practice, after all. But you may expect to see me often. How I shall miss you, old fellow!"

And then the talk drifted into other channels, until Dr. Atkinson discovered that it was time for his train to be where his new home and field of duty lay.

"You will come over often," he urged, in parting from his friend; "and if I am busy or away, make yourself at home. The grounds are large, and very pleasant, and if you meet any of the patients, be sure those who are allowed to roam about inside the walls are harmless. Some of them are absolutely sane on every point but one, touch that, and off they go. But the eyes tell the story."

"Yes; it is hard to hide it there."

"And contradiction brings out the truth. As long as the delusions are humored they are generally amiable enough; but once cross them—whew!"

"I shall come over often and hear the results of your experience. My enormous practice takes about three hours a day."

In pursuance of this promise Dr. Read took the train about once a week and spent an hour or two with his friend, finding him generally busy, as his duties included a general superintendence of the asylum and details that were quite independent of professional work. Still, he took it all as a part of his new life, and gave his mind as fully to ordering groceries and towels as he did to writing prescriptions and studying cases.

But Fred, as he became familiar with the place, began to share his friend's interest in the study of mental disorders and would often spend hours roaming through the wards and grounds with only a few words to Dr. Atkinson.

It was when June was young and the air soft and pleasant that Dr. Read, strolling about in the prettiest part of the grounds, saw a lady in a summer-house whose face attracted him at once. It was a very pale face and the large dark eyes were languid, while the slender figure seemed weak as if from recent illness. But it was, too, a beautiful young face, shaded by waving brown hair, and with purely oval outline and regular features.

"A new patient," was Fred's mental exclamation. "What a lovely face!"

Then he sauntered over to the summer house and spoke to the lady. To his consternation, she started, gave a quick, gasping sob and fainted. It was not a very long insensibility, and under Fred's quick treatment the large eyes opened, and she whispered:

"O, I am so sorry to trouble you! But I have been very ill, and you startled me."

"I was very much to blame," he said, penitently, "and I hope you will pardon me. Are you well enough now for me to run up to the house for a glass of wine?"

"I am well enough, but I do not need it," and she sat up again and took up a piece of needle work that had dropped from her hands. Her fingers still trembled, and a pretty flush came a moment into her pale face, as she said:

"Are you one of the physicians here?"

"Only by courtesy," he replied. "I have the run of the place; but Dr. Atkinson is the physician. Old Dr. Hare is the head doctor, but he does very little."

"Yes, I know. It is a lovely place, is it not? Out here I mean. Inside," and she shuddered, "the sounds are often dreadful. But the doctor at home thought a change of air would be good for me, and so mamma sent me here."

"Change of air," thought Fred. "Poor little thing! Quite unconscious of her infirmity."

And he chatted away with her, discussing the weather, the beauty of the grounds, the songs of the birds in the trees around them, and so gradually drifting to books, to comparisons of opinion, and criticism. And all through a delightful hour Fred vainly tried to discover the one point upon which the new patient was insane. Whatever it was, it evaded him and he looked as vainly for any wandering or vacancy in the soft brown eyes that met his own, full of intelligence.

They were still conversing when one of the nurses came down the path leading to the summer house.

"Miss Bessie," she said, "Dr. Atkinson sent me to say you had better lie down now for an hour or two, and he has sent some medicine to your room. Let me help you!"

Dr. Read being a physician, made no attempt to detain the fair patient, noting with sincere sympathy how weak she was, and how wearily she leaned upon the nurse's strong arm.

He did not feel inclined to have any jesting about his interest, such as his friend was wont to indulge in, when ladies were the subject, so he said nothing of his experience, and joined Dr. Atkinson in his "rounds" without hinting at any desire to see one especial patient—a desire not gratified, for there were only familiar faces in the wards.

But the summer house was soon found to be Miss Bessie's resort. It was in a secluded part of the grounds, shaded by a thick clump of trees, and provided with a rustic table and comfortable chairs. Here the young girl made a cozy nest for herself, and the place looked home-like with her work-basket, her books, knitting or sketch book, her cushions and footstool.

"The doctor said I must be in the open air as much as possible," she told Fred, one day, "and as no one seems to care much for this summer-house, I have appropriated it. Sometimes I have visitors," and her face saddened, "the poor patients here, you know, but they do not like the cure, and soon leave me."

She never passed a word with her companions. Fred noticed, often speaking pityingly of those more heavily afflicted. But this phase of mental delusion was very common. There had been one very sweet-faced, elderly lady of whom Fred had grown quite fond, and whose mental infirmity he did not discover for several weeks. But one day, passing another patient, she had turned to Fred saying:

"That poor soul we passed is not quite right here," touching her forehead; she fancies she is the Queen of Sheba," and she drew herself up with stately dignity and said: "while every one knows I am the Queen of Sheba."

For Fred had not, when July closed, found out the delusion of the sweet little girl he called "Miss Bessie." She had gained perfect health in the two months of quiet and open air, but while her eyes had lost their weary expression, they never stared or wandered, but were always steadily tranquil, or lighted only by the animation natural to interesting conversation.

In those two months Fred had scarcely seen Dr. Atkinson. His superior in office, Dr. Hare, had gone away for a summer vacation, and a new wing was being added to the building. With the entire care of the house and the patients, the direction of the workmen, the work of selecting furniture, carpets and other necessaries for the new building, the resident physician had scarcely a moment to call his own and Fred frequently did not see him at all during his visit.

It was in July that Dr. Read suddenly awoke to the appalling conviction that he was deeply in love with the inmate of a lunatic asylum. He had deluded himself with the thought that it was pity, professional interest, even curiosity, that drew him again and again to the summer-house, where he was sure to meet a warm, if shy, welcome, and where the hours flew by in utter content.

But so simple a matter as the reading of a poem had opened his eyes to the truth. It had become quite a common thing for him to read scraps of newspaper intelligence, little bits from one of the books on the table, or a selection from a favorite work he brought with him, while Bessie sewed or knitted, and listened to him. And on this particular July day he had read a little love poem nestled in the corner of a newspaper. It was not a wonderful production of genius, but it was pretty and tender. Looking up Fred saw a pair of blushing cheeks, downcast eyes, trembling fingers, and his heart stood still.

He read the truth in a flash. He loved the lovely girl before him, and she—alas! she returned his love. His first feeling was one of keen self-reproach. What if he had added to the mental infirmity that had caused this beautiful young creature to be sent to an asylum? Would she forget him, or—dreadful possibility!—would the whole reason give way if he deserted her?

He scarcely knew how he reached his boarding-house; but once there he sat down and looked the situation squarely in the face. His own share of the affliction he put aside for the present. He was a man, and he could bear his trouble manfully. That he loved, where his love must die, was, in a great measure, his own fault and folly; but that he had won a pure, sweet heart only to wound it, caused him bitter pain. Long meditation brought him to one resolution. He must see Dr. Atkinson, make a clear confession, and have his opinion of the danger to be anticipated.

"He knows where the weakness I have failed to discover lies," Fred thought, "and he can tell me whether it is safe to break off my visits suddenly or gradually."

It was not an easy matter to catch Dr. Atkinson, or, having caught him, to secure his attention, but something in Fred's troubled face aroused his friend's anxiety, and he turned his back for the time upon his manifold duties and shut himself in his private office with Fred.

At first he listened gravely enough, but as Fred proceeded his face became more and more amused, until, to the consternation of the penitent speaker, he threw himself back in his chair and broke into a roar of laughter.

"O," Fred said, "it is funny, is it? I do not see it in that light. Even if this poor girl is insane——"

"Stop!" interrupted his friend. "Don't get angry, my dear fellow. You really love her, you say?"

But Fred was too angry to answer.

"And she loves you, at least you think so, and you want to know if it is a curable case, and—well, I will not torment you any more. Your charmer, Fred, is not a patient, nor, as far as I know, a lunatic."

Fred gave a long sigh, but only looked his eager questions.

"She is my sister, Bessie Atkinson, who has had a long winter of illness from typhoid fever, and is making me a visit. I thought she was quite safe from intrusion in that summer house, as the attendants have orders to keep the patients away from there, and I did not think of you! But since you have been prowling around so long, perhaps you had better come now and be introduced in form."

"One moment, Will. I have been a puppy, it seems, in taking her love for granted, but if I have won it?"

"I am her oldest brother, and her father died years ago. I am quite sure that what I approve my mother will sanction, and you must know nothing could please me better than to know Bessie has a lover I esteem so highly as I do you!"

"And—you will not tell her—will you? my awful blunder?"

"I can't promise. I'll try to keep the secret, but—" and the doctor roared again, "the idea of Bess as a raging lunatic! Well, there, I won't tell her at all events, until you have told her something far more interesting."

And he kept his word so loyally that Bessie Atkinson had been Bessie Read more than a year before she knew that her husband had ever considered her an interesting patient in a lunatic asylum.—N. Y. Ledger.

If you feel yourself growing weaker, your strength failing, the functions of your body becoming impaired, take warning in time! Your blood is starving for want of nourishment. Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla is food for the blood. It purifies this stream of life and strengthens every part of the body, rebuilds a broken down constitution, produces dreamless slumber, and restores wasted energies and a shattered nervous system. A trial bottle will convince. No other remedy equals it.

An Improbable Lie.

"It is getting late," remarked the President of the Philadelphia Lying Club, "but I cannot adjourn the meeting without telling you of a serious case which will, I think, be of great interest. In a certain town, about a hundred miles from this city, lives a young lady, not yet nineteen, with the face of a Hebe, the figure of a Venus, the mind of a Minerva, the soul of a Psyche, and who sings like a bird and plays like an angel." "Not at all improbable," murmured an unmarried member who is in love. "But that is not all," added the President. "She has many times been known to go into the kitchen and help with the ironing, while her mother stayed in the parlor and played the piano." Amid the scene of wild confusion which followed the President made his escape.—Detroit Free Press.

Why is it that so many neglect coughs and colds until they get consumption? Why is it so many die of consumption? It is because they will not come and be healed. Every one knows a sure conqueror of throat and lung diseases is Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, and that it can be got of any druggist.

V. W. Bruce, editor of the Big Rapids Current, has dislocated his right elbow by a fall. He is thus doubly afflicted, as he left one leg on a southern battle field.

A Life Saving Present.

Mr. M. E. Allison, Hutchinson, Kan., Saved his life by a simple Trial Bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery, for Consumption, which caused him to procure a large bottle, that completely cured him, when Doctors, change of climate and everything else had failed. Asthma, Bronchitis, Hoarseness, Severe Coughs, and all Throat and Lung diseases, it is guaranteed to cure. Trial Bottles free. Large size $1.00.

No disease will trouble you if you keep your blood pure, your kidneys strong, your bowels regular and your mind clear by an occasional use of that great reviver and supporter of health and strength known as Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. Its praise should be in every mouth! Its merits should be known by all!

AYER'S PILLS.

A large proportion of the diseases which cause human suffering result from derangement of the stomach, bowels, and liver. AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS act directly upon these organs, and are especially designed to cure the diseases caused by their derangement, including Constipation, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, Dysentery, and a host of other ailments, for all of which they are a safe, sure, prompt, and pleasant remedy. The extensive use of these PILLS by eminent physicians in regular practice shows unmistakably the estimation in which they are held by the medical profession.

These PILLS are compounded of vegetable substances only, and are absolutely free from calomel or any other injurious ingredient.

A Sufferer from Headache writes:

"AYER'S PILLS are invaluable to me, and are my constant companion. I have been a severe sufferer from Headache, and your PILLS are the only thing I could look to for relief. One dose will quickly move my bowels and free my head from pain. They are the most effective and the easiest physic I have ever found. It is a pleasure to me to speak in their praise, and I always do so when occasion offers.

W. L. PAGE, of W. L. Page & Bro.," Main St., Richmond, Va., June 3, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S PILLS in numberless instances as recommended by you, and have never known them to fail to accomplish the desired result. We constantly keep them on hand at our home, and prize them as a pleasant, safe, and reliable family medicine. FOR DYSPEPSIA they are invaluable.

J. T. HAYES," Mexia, Texas, June 17, 1882.

The Rev. FRANCIS R. HARTSHORN, writing from Atlanta, Ga., says: "For some years past I have been subject to constipation, from which, in spite of the use of medicines of various kinds, I suffered increasing inconvenience, until some months ago I began taking AYER'S PILLS. They have entirely corrected the costive habit, and have vastly improved my general health."

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS correct irregularities of the bowels, stimulate the appetite and digestion, and by their prompt and thorough action give tone and vigor to the whole physical economy.

How Watch Cases are Made.

A plate of SOLID GOLD 14 2-10 karats fine is soldered on each side of a plate of hard nickel composition metal, and the three are then passed between polished steel rollers. From this plate the various parts of the cases—backs, centers, bezels, etc. are cut and shaped by dies and formers. The gold is thick enough to admit of all kinds of chasing, engraving, and engine-turning. The composition metal gives it needed strength, stiffness and solidity, while the written guarantee of the manufacturers warranting each case to wear twenty years proves that it contains all the gold that can possibly be needed. This guarantee is given from actual results, as many of these cases have been worn perfectly smooth by years of use without wearing through the gold.

DUBUQUE, IA., Dec. 14, 1880.

I have used one of your James Boss' Gold Watch Cases for seventeen years. I bought it second-hand and know of its having been used before I got it, but do not know how long. It looks good for ten years longer. Did not suspect it was a filled case until so informed by a jeweler a short time since. I most cheerfully recommend your cases to be all they are represented to be, and more.

Catarrh

At this season of the year everybody has a cold, and some very bad ones. By frequent exposures the membranes of the nose become very sensitive, and catarrh and influenza are epidemic. Relief may be obtained by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

For many years in succession, beginning so far back I don't remember when, I had the catarrh in my head. It consisted of an excessive flow from my nose.

Ringing and Bursting Noises

in my head. Sometimes the hearing in my left ear was affected. Five years ago, about this season of the year, I began to use Hood's Sarsaparilla. I was helped right away, but I continued to use it until I felt myself cured.—Mrs. A. H. Caulfield, Lowell, Mass.

Jeremiah Brownell, auctioneer and extensive seller at Victor, Ontario county, N. Y., writes: "I have used Hood's Sarsaparilla for my catarrh, and it has helped me. I consider Hood's Sarsaparilla one of the best remedies for blood disease to be obtained."

100 Doses One Dollar

"I have been troubled with that distressing complaint, catarrh, and have been using Hood's Sarsaparilla, and find it one of the best remedies I have ever taken. My trouble has lasted ten years, and never could get any relief until I commenced to use Hood's Sarsaparilla.—Martin Schofield, Chicago, Ill.

Danger from Catarrh

Depends upon the amount and extent of the scrofulous infection. Unquestionably many deaths from consumption can be traced to neglected catarrh. There is a violent distress, prostrated coughing spells, the eyes weep, the nose discharges copiously, and the head seems about to split.

In such cases Hood's Sarsaparilla corrects the catarrh by its direct action in discharging the poison from the blood through nature's great emunctories, so that healthy, sound blood reaches the membranes and is wholesome.

Where the Old Maids Come In.

"Do you know, sir," inquired an American tourist of his companion while doing England, "can you inform me the reason for the fresh, healthful appearance of the English people? Their complexion is far superior to ours, or our countrymen over the herring pond."

"Well, I know what Prof. Huxley says."

"And what reason does he advance?"

"Well, Huxley says it is all owing to the old maids."

"Owing to the old maids! You surprise me!"

"Fact. Huxley figures it out in this way. Now, you know the English are very fond of roast beef."

"But what has that to do with old maids?"

"Go slow. This genuine English beef is the best and most nutritious beef in the world, and it imparts a beautiful complexion."

"Well, about the old maids."

"Yes, you see the excellence of this English beef is due exclusively to red clover. Do you see the point?"

"All but the old maids. They are still hovering in the shadows."

"Why, don't your see? This red clover is enriched, sweetened and fructified by bumble bees."

"But where do the old maids come in?" said the inquisitive American, wiping his brow wearily.

"Why, it is as plain as the nose on your face. The only enemy of the bumble bee is the field mouse."

"But what have roast beef, red clover, bumble bees and field mice got to do with old maids?"

"Why, you must be very obtuse. Don't you perceive that the bumble bees would soon become exterminated by the field mice if it were not for——"

"Old maids?"

"No, if it were not for cats, and the old maids of Old England keep the country thoroughly stocked up with cats, and so we can directly trace the effect of the rosy English complexions to the benign cause of English old maids: at least that's what Huxley says about it, and that's just where the old maids come in. Science makes clear many mysterious things, and don't you forget it."—Texas Siftings.

A Bird that Turns Somersaults.

There's a pretty little bird that lives in China, and is called the Fork-Tailed Parus. He is about as big as a robin, and has a red beak, yellow legs, black tail, and red-and-yellow wings. Nearly all the colors are in his dress, you see, and he is a gay fellow. This bird has a trick known by no other birds that ever I heard of. He turns somersaults! Not only does he do this in free life on the trees, but also after he is caught and put into a cage. He throws his head far back, and over he goes, touching the bars of his cage, and alighting upon his feet on the floor or on a perch. He will do it over and over a number of times without stopping, as though he thought it great fun. All his family have the same trick, and they are called Tumblers. The people of China are fond of keeping them in cages and seeing them tumble.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla marvelously braces up the system; purifies and invigorates. Every invalid needs it.

WOMAN AND THE BABY.

What a puzzle the little child is in the domestic economy!

How the mother gives of her own life and strength to support the life of her blessed little youngster!

How the child kicks, and laughs, and crows!

How the child grows, and is heavier and heavier every day.

And yet she lifts him, and tosses him, and plays with him, and takes care of him by day and by night.

Is it any wonder the mother breaks down? Her back aches. Her stomach fails her. Her liver is bad. Her blood is thin, and she says she feels poorly. Yes, yes, poorly—very poorly. Give mother a bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters. She needs the iron in her blood, which that will put there. She must have strength, or she will be a confirmed old invalid. Brown's Iron Bitters helps worn and weary women into new life, cheerfulness, and vigor. Tell all the mothers you know. 9

Rheumatic SYRUP.

The Greatest Blood Purifier Known!

RHEUMATISM CURED.	SCROFULA CURED.	NEURALGIA CURED.
ROCHESTER, N.Y., Apr. 6, '83. Rheumatic Syrup Co.: Gents—I have been a great sufferer from Rheumatism for six years and hearing of the success of Rheumatic Syrup I concluded to give it a trial in my own case, and I cheerfully say that I have been greatly benefitted by its use. I can walk with entire freedom from pain, and my general health is very much improved. It is a splendid remedy for the blood and debilitated system. R. J. SHEPHERD PARK, M.D.	PORT BYRON, N.Y., Feb. 20, '83. Rheumatic Syrup Co.: I had been doctoring for three or four years with different physicians, for scrofula, as some called it, but found no relief until I commenced taking your Syrup. After taking it a short time, to my surprise it began to have no effect. Continuing its use a few weeks, I found myself as well as ever. As a blood purifier I think it has no equal. MRS. W. SYLVIA [illegible]	FAIRPORT, N.Y., March 12, '83. Rheumatic Syrup Co.: Gents—Since November, 1882, I have been a constant sufferer from neuralgia, and have not known what it was to be free from pain until I commenced using the Rheumatic Syrup. I have not felt no pain since using the fourth bottle. I think it the best remedy I have ever heard of for the cure of rheumatism and neuralgia. W. B. CHASE.

ESTATE OF JOHN F. SCHREDER.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the city of Adrian, on Thursday, the 6th day of December, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three.

Present, Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of John F. Schreder, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Susan C. Arner, praying for the probate of an instrument now on file in this office, purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, and that administration of said estate may be granted to Israel H. Schreder and William H. Arner, the executors in said will named, or to some other suitable person.

Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the 21st day of December, A.D. 1883, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are requested to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

NORMAN GEDDES, Judge of Probate.

THE HERALD FOR 1884

Advertising has become a necessity to business success, and if the trader and speculator find the use of printers' ink a paying investment, why should not the newspaper? [illegible] the same method to make him a big wages. Newspapers have become a necessity in every household. No well regulated family in these days thinks of getting along with only one newspaper. The paper for families must have his trade or a agricultural journal, a city political weekly and a local sheet; the housewife needs a lady's magazine, the children sign for a juvenile paper. The HERALD will seek to fill only one of these fields, that of a local newspaper. But it shall be our aim to make improvements in that direction and to fill that special field more thoroughly than heretofore. We shall give no chromos nor statuary, nor organs, nor sewing machines to subscribers during the coming year. Recognizing the tendency of the times towards cheaper rates, we shall accommodate ourselves to it. We have chosen twelve publications, giving a good variety for family needs, have secured special terms on them, and can offer them in connection with the HERALD at "rock bottom rates." No such rates have ever before been offered to our patrons. Under this club offer, however, we shall not accept elm wood or hard cider, or potatoes, or turnips on subscription. These rates mean "cash down" with the order. The table below gives the name of each paper clubbed with the HERALD, the regular subscription price of the outside paper, and the club price of the same in connection with the HERALD. A glance at the figures will show the remarkable offer which we extend to our patrons for the New Year. We shall be prepared to take subscriptions for any paper or magazine published at reduced rates, but our special "rock bottom" offer will be confined to the papers named in the appended list. Having done our part to give our friends the lowest figures on their reading matter for '84 we respectfully ask them to return the compliment and swell the subscription list of the HERALD during the ensuing two months beyond any number hitherto reached in its history.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

This really remarkable periodical for its cheapness, and literary and artistic merit, commences its seventeenth volume with the January number, and a more attractive one has never been issued by any of its contemporaries. The first of a series of articles is given by Everet A. Duckinck, "New York, Past and Present." Mrs. Ann S. Stephens contributes a charming Christmas story, "Half a Dollar," and Etta W. Pierce continues her most interesting serial, "A Dark Deed." There are articles by Victor M. Hollingsworth, N. Robinson, A. S. Fuller, Noel Ruthven, Edward A. Heis, Sarah K. Bolton, Professor Edward P. Hallock, Millie W. Carpenter, etc. Short stories, descriptive articles, narratives, adventures and poems by popular writers, to last the 120 quarto pages are brilliant with literary and artistic gems. Besides the more than 100 illustrations, the number is embellished with a beautiful colored plate frontispiece, "A Day Dream." The price is only 25 cents a number, or $2.50 a year, postpaid. Address Mrs. FRANK LESLIE, Publisher, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

Crime and Its Punishment.

We are making some strange history in this country. The daring robberies of the James brothers and their associates, the bold deeds of our western cowboys in robbing stages and express trains, and the awful murders being committed here and there with impunity—these and other crimes will make strange reading for coming generations. They will equal the thrilling stories of pirate life which we used to read when we were boys.

The record of crime in our country has become simply enormous. We cannot pick up a daily paper whose pages are not stained with human gore, accounts of murders, shocking murders committed in cold blood and in many instances without any conceivable motive. Undoubtedly, our civil war has had much to do with the increase of crime in our country. Its awful carnage hardened our people to blood letting, and prepared them to weigh lightly the value of a human life. But it is now almost a score of years since the war closed. The hardening caused by its bloody battlefields ought to have yielded ere this to the influences [illegible] Christian enlightenment. But to-day our people are less secure in person and property than they were fifteen years ago. Crime is undoubtedly on the increase.

There is but one way in which we can account for this. A sickly sentimentalism has sprung up among our people which excuses crime and sympathizes with criminals. Men have cried out from pulpit and platform against the penalties of God's laws, until people have come to look upon all penalty as severe. The idea has been publicly proclaimed, that the best way to prevent crime is to deal gently with our criminals. The result is that in some states capital punishment has been abolished; in most of the others it stands as practically a dead letter. Criminals are not punished. Murderers are arraigned, tried and acquitted, on the ground of temporary insanity or some such sentimental plea. Or if convicted, heaven and earth are moved for a reprieve or a commutation of the sentence. Then, if imprisoned for life, all that is necessary is for some one to start a petition for their pardon, and our respectable, influential business men will all sign it. The executive grants the pardon, and the hardened wretch is turned out to find another victim.

The time has come to stop this nonsense. The states which have not the death penalty ought to re-enact it as speedily as possible. Then all good citizens ought to unite in helping to execute every law. They ought to refuse to sign petitions for reprieves and pardons. They ought to watch the rascally lawyers who work upon their sympathies in the jury box. What we need to-day is courage on the part of our citizens to say that every criminal shall pay the uttermost farthing of every penalty incurred, and then stand by it in spite of lawyers and circulators of petitions, until our laws become a terror to every worker of iniquity.

The way to prevent crime is to punish it, and punish it promptly. It is said that in the days of Alfred the Great, of England, strings of pearls could be safely stretched across the streets of London. That was not brought about by maudlin pity for criminals, but by infallibly catching the evil doer, and giving him his deserts. Pity is thrown away upon men who can deliberately weigh out so much gold against so much human blood. The only way to touch them is to let them end their career as decently as possible on the gallows.

There is hope for us in this state. The increase of crime is so manifest and the persons of our people so insecure that our newspapers are beginning to clamor for the restoration of the death penalty. Says the Detroit Evening News, editorially: "It is time at last to set up the gallows and call in the hangman." And again, "It would cost the state about $20,000 if the Governor should call an extra session of the legislature and restore capital punishment, but human life would be a great deal more secure." Says the Michigan Christian Advocate, editorially, "Society has, can have but one possible means of repressing crime in so far as it relates to those who have been addicted to its commission, and that means is in repressing by imprisonment and by capital punishment. And it is the immediate interest and duty of every citizen to cooperate to secure these ends. * * * Much of the increase of crime is due to a maudlin sentiment which has gained control of society. Capital punishment has been abolished by a false sympathy which pleads the cause of the criminal in opposition to that of the victim."

We are glad to see this awakening of the public conscience. It forbodes good for the future. Certainly as it has been, the murderer could snap his gory fingers in our faces and tell us that hanging was played out. Let us hope that a better era is dawning. Certainly the public conscience needs awakening. What we need is a revival of the doctrine that crime must be punished according to its demerit, that the law must be enforced and every penalty executed. The sickly sentimentalism which would spare the wretch whose life is a constant menace to the welfare of society, needs to be rooted out. We believe that it will be done. We believe further that when the Legislature shall meet again the death penalty will be restored in the state of Michigan.

But there is one thing which we ought never to forget. Laws do not execute themselves. We have a duty as citizens. We ought to take a firm stand on the side of law and order, and see to it that so far as we are concerned the law shall take its course, and every criminal be punished. Let there be an end of listening to the pluns of dishonest lawyers and of begging petitions. Let us stand by our officers in the discharge of their often disagreeable duties.

The Proper Grounds for Divorce.

Whether we regard marriage therefore, as a civil or a religious institution it is not absolutely indissoluble. Having been instituted as has been said, for the good of mankind, if, for any cause, it cease to promote the welfare of its subjects, if it crush their interests, and deprive them of happiness, then it may very properly and ought to be dissolved. In other words, [illegible] not to enslave men and women, but to bless them, it should not be perverted into any such uses. The man or woman who has been unfortunately bound to a body of death, ought to have some mode of escape. This is found in divorce. We must admit that such a necessity was not contemplated in the original institution. From the beginning it was not so. And there would have been no need of anything of the kind had it not been for human weakness and sin. If there were no deception, if men and women were always just what they profess to be, there would be no need of it at all. But to compel a man to live with a woman who has grossly deceived him is to banish happiness from his life. To compel a woman to live with an idle, drunken, worthless husband, who fails to bring her and her children the support which he owes them is still greater cruelty if possible. There are properly three causes for which divorce ought to be granted: gross deception or the procuring of the marriage vow under false pretenses, infidelity to the marriage vows, and a failure to fulfill the obligations of the covenant. This is, will be said, adds to the scripture ground for divorce. To this it may be replied that it does in form but not in fact. Jesus said that "the Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath." That is a divine precept and is not to be so construed as to injure those to whom it was given. By parallel, therefore, the divine teaching is not to be so interpreted as to make marriage a curse instead of a blessing. It is but in accordance with his teachings to annul the covenant whenever it requires the sacrifice of the dearest interests of one or both of the parties concerned.—Marriage Guide.

The sanctity of the family is the hope of the world. It is better that two should suffer through life than that a too easy door should be opened for those led by passion or desiring license. The boys say on the train, "Chicago, thirty minutes for divorce!" I heard that myself. In this state a man can go and commit adultery and with witnesses secure a divorce, and his wife will be free, and may be wish never to marry again. But divorce should be granted on other than the Scriptural ground. A woman ought not to be obliged to live with a hog. Drunkenness ought to be a cause. So too if a man is notoriously corrupt in any way, or if he is convicted of a criminal offence. But the causes should be very few. Cruelty should be one, but not mere failure to agree in temper. Laxity of divorce laws makes great evils.—Rev. H. W. Beecher.

It seems to me that the New Testament confines the cause of divorce to adultery on the part of one of the parties to the marriage, still I can conceive of additional reasons why divorce should be granted. For example, take the case of a wife whose husband is a confirmed drunkard and who daily abuses her. When she married him she thought she was marrying a man and she hoped a gentleman. She did not know she was marrying a beast who would make her life wretched. I would not have a woman tied to such a brute all the days of his or her life. So also when a man is convicted of a crime and sent to State Prison, I do not think a woman should be compelled to resume her marital relations with him after he has served his sentence. She should be allowed a divorce if she desired it. There may be other causes, but think the generality of them may be included under the headings of personal abuse and defamement of character by crime.—Rev. Thos. Armitage, D.D.

Harper's Bazar.

ILLUSTRATED.

Harper's Bazar is at once the most brilliant and useful household journal in existence. It is the acknowledged arbiter of fashion in this country. Its fashion plates are the newest and most stylish; and its pattern sheet supplements and economic suggestions alone are worth many times the cost of subscription. Its illustrations of art needlework are from the best sources. Its literary and artistic merits are of the highest order. Its stories, poems and essays are by the first American and European authors. Its choice art pictures would fill portfolios, and its humorous cuts are the most amusing to be found in any journal in America. A host of brilliant novelettes are promised for 1884.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—The Dakota lands set apart for educational purposes are valued at $82,000,000.

—There are more Baptist churches in East Tennessee than post-offices or grist mills.—N. Y. News.

—An English clergyman writes that there are 1,000 unemployed clergymen in the Church of England, many of them are both able and willing to work, and who cannot find anything to do.

—Mrs. Florence E. [illegible], who is to [illegible] in New York [illegible] persons of learning [illegible] get earning their [illegible] N. Y.

—President Robinson of the Vassar College observatory, has had [illegible] a massive [illegible] made of solid oak [illegible] years' service up on Vassar Hall.

—Among the amendments made in the Episcopal prayer-book, the words "Lord, save our rulers" are to be changed to "O, Lord, bless and preserve these United States."—Chicago News.

—The Telegraph, of Macon, Ga., says: "Every week there are additional evidences of the need for technical schools. A gentleman engaged in manufacturing said in our office that he had vacancies in his business that paid from $1,500 to $3,500 a year that he could not find the men in the State to fill."

—The Amherst Senate is composed of four seniors, three juniors, two sophomores and one freshman, chosen by ballot. This body has entire jurisdiction in all questions of discipline. They even overrule former decisions of the Faculty, and the President holds that they have thus far exercised their power wisely. The Senate recently decided in favor of permitting the students to engage in inter-collegiate sports, which the faculty had interdicted.—N. Y. Examiner.

—A school for teaching foreigners the English language has been opened in New York in the Five Points House of Industry by the Young Men's Hebrew Association. The school will be open five evenings in the week, and the system employed will be simply to make the pupils speak English by allowing them to speak nothing else. No word of a foreign language will be tolerated in school hours, and when a man fails to understand a sentence spoken to him, he must find it out by instinct or by persistent questioning. Over two hundred names are enrolled on the list of members.—N. Y. Tribune.

—The last paragraph of the will of the late Rev. Dr. William Shelton, of Buffalo, touchingly says: "I will also (in taking leave of life) add that my parishioners have ever been kind and considerate of my welfare; and, through the period of more than half a century in which I have most imperfectly served them, they have been respectful and dutiful. For all which I can only add my hearty thanks, asking their forgiveness for my neglects, and giving my final benediction. God bless, preserve and keep you and yours, and may you always be preserved in the unity of the church, which has ever been one, figured by the ark of the flood."

PUNGENT PARAGRAPHS.

—Most people are perfectly willing to be good when they get too old to be bad any longer.—N. Y. Herald.

—Oscar Wilde has received many thanks from Mary Anderson for writing a play for her. They reach him in this shape: "Declined, with many thanks."

—"I hev allus noticed," observes Aunt Tabetha, "that the boy who lets his mother bring in all the kindlin' wood and build the kitchen fire is the mourner that hollers loudest at her funeral." And then she added thoughtfully: "Mebbe it is, and it is because he misses her the most."—Boston Post.

—Elder sister (Geraldine), why did you take so much trouble to snub that handsome, manly young fellow we just met? Geraldine: O, that's Harry Hardlines. He hasn't a cent to his name, and he's got a mother to support; and that sort of thing isn't good form, you know, nowadays."—Boston Post.

—The father's prayer:

"I cannot sing the old songs,"
Sighed a jaunty old roué,
While at an orchestral organ
Her fingers she did stroke.
"Thank heaven!" growled the parent,
With manifest zeal,
"An' pray the Lord the new ones
Just so you cannot feel."
—Yonkers Gazette.

—A trade circular, under the title, "What will the Coming Girl Wear?" contains a description of the articles likely to constitute the wardrobe of the future. It is a description sufficient to convince anybody that what the coming girl will chiefly wear is a hole in the pocket-book of the man who supports her.—Brooklyn Eagle.

—There is a pertinent German story of recovery from a trance. A man died, as it appeared. He was about to be buried when he came to life and burst the lid of his coffin. He was hastily removed from the grave and rapidly recovered health. During his seeming death he heard all that was said about him. He changed his will.

—"Good morning. Is Mr. Black in?" "No, sah, he's gone to his business, sah." "Well, is Mrs. Black in?" "Dat depends, sah. What does ye want wid her?" "Why, here's a milk bill of thirty-two dollars I'd like her to settle." "She am got in, sah." "But I know she is in." "Can't help it, sah. De orders am dat she am never in for milk and meat bills and sich. Good mornin': I has to go; she am callin' me."—Kentucky State Journal.

The Bride Who Didn't Die in an Old Chest.

The fair Imogene D'Eustis had been wedded to the knightly Sam Higgins. The clergyman had been handed two dollars in cash to pay for the splicing, the guests were filling themselves up with eatables, and everything was sliding along as smoothly as a cider-mill sailing down on a spring freshet, when all at once the bride was missing.

Her nearly frozen husband looked under the table, but she was not there.

The guests separated to search. Some looked down the well, others down cellar, others in the hen-coop and smoke-house, and finally the pig-pen. No Imogene.

Then some said that she had been abducted, while others scoffed at the idea of a girl weighing 196 pounds and having a scream which could be heard two miles, being carried off in broad daylight.

A detective was called in. He looked at her old shawl, measured the length of her shoes, and decided that it was a mysterious affair. He would take the case if desired, but would not promise any satisfactory solution under a year and a half.

The fair Imogene's father hadn't behaved much excitement up to this point. The wedding feast was the first square meal he had tackled for six months, and he wanted to fill up before giving way to emotion. He was now full. He turned around upon the excited and distressed guests, commanded them to hush their hullaballo and disappeared up stairs.

When the coy Imogene slipped away from the feast it was to see if her husband would miss and follow her. She slid up stairs, mounted to the garret, and after brushing the cobwebs off her nose she advanced to the big blue chest in the corner. This chest had been made to hold her father's Government bonds and was hooped with iron and provided with a spring lock, which never cost less than a dollar. Her mission was to hide in the chest and see if her husband would be soft enough to climb up there and throw up the lid and call peek-a-boo. As the reader knows, he wasn't the man to catch on.

The old man D'Eustis walked up stairs and made his way to the garret through the same trap-door the bride had used. He thought she might be up there to take a last farewell look at the bunches of catnip, moldy school-books and broken spinning-wheels. He could not see her. He called aloud, but the whistle of the tug on the river was the only answer. He turned to go, but something whispered to him that perhaps he might find a plug of tobacco or a bottle of stomach bitters in the old chest. He advanced with beating heart and threw up the lid.

"Why, pop, is this you?" cried the fair Imogene, as she sprang up and ripped her bridal dress clear down the back.

"Yes, this is me!" growled the old man, "and what the jimcracks are you doing here?"

"Hiding from Sam."

"I'm a tarnal mind to box your ears, big as you are! Here you've raised a regular city convagation all over the house, spoilt a dress which cost me fourteen dollars with the making, upset your mother, and scart old Mrs. Spigot into a fit!"

"Please, pop,—"

"You git! Drap yourself through that trap-hole, skip down there and tell the crowd that you don't know beyond when the fang's nuffed."

And the bride got. And her husband was so mad that he burned up a free railroad pass to Chicago, and his mother cried, and her father went off down town to play poker, and taken all in all, the coy bride and the old chest and the spring lock business didn't pay ten cents on the dollar.—Detroit Free Press.

The Pleasure of "Picking Up" Things.

"Why do you practice shoplifting? Surely the profits are seldom large, compared to the risks you run."

"Right you are," was the answer. "I am what we get on the 'snake' for it, but the racket of it fetches me. Ways, sometimes I don't clear enough to pay me for my go. Yet it's jolly, and I like it for the excitement. Playing euchre's now-a-days to it."

"Where does the pleasure come in?"

"Well, women naturally like shopping. They have fun going about the big stores and looking at things. I like that kind of thing, too, but besides that I get anything I like for nothing, and that's more fun. There's the racket of watching the dabbed-down clerks and the dizzy floor-walkers. I wait until they are looking another way and calling out 'Cash, cash,' to the hungry little girls and then I style slip something I think would look much better in a pawn-shop under my cloak and all's serene."

"Isn't the risk very great?"

"Of course it is. But there's where the pleasure is. There is the same sort of risk in gambling, and I have a passion for it. When I get what I aim for I'm just as happy and contented as a clam in high water. Oh—it's an immense racket, if you ain't caught," and the shoplifter sank back to think over her probable term of imprisonment.—N. Y. Truth.

Just Too Utterly Too, Too.

A consumptive man, knowing that his life was rapidly drawing to a close, called his wife to him and said:

"Madeline, you know that I am about to die; shall you ever think of me when I am gone?"

"O yes, darling," sobbed his wife. "I never can forget you, and I will ever see that your grave is kept green."

"Yes, my dear, I know you will; but I have one last request."

"What is it, darling?"

"Do not keep it that vulgar, low-down, common green, like Simpson's grave, which is so distasteful to the eye. Keep it a rich, delicate olive green."—Texas Siftings.

Another writer rises to remark that there are more lawyers and physicians than are needed in this country. Those professions would not be overcrowded if parents did not push sons into them who have not the requisite qualifications necessary for success.—N. Y. Times.

Then and Now.

Looking over some old papers in the pension office the other day, the difference between the old-time and present methods of granting aid to soldiers became very noticeable. Now, almost any old soldier easily obtains relief; then it was a matter involving the clearest proofs. In some cases even abject poverty seemed necessary before Government interposed to give relief. One case, from the long correspondence and interesting character of the claimant, is a sample of many. The papers are very voluminous. They begin in 1819, when Colonel Paul Dudley Sargent, of Sullivan, Maine, asked for a pension. His memorial showed that in 1775 he lived in Gloucester, Mass., where he organized a body of minutemen. From his forwardness in the independent cause he was blacklisted and compelled to flee to Amherst, N. H. Here he organized a regiment of militia, and so ready was he that, before daylight on April 19, 1775, he was on his way to Concord with his command, which afterwards became a part of Washington's army, and was the first body of troops to enter Boston after the evacuation the next March. Here he fitted out the first privateer of the Revolution. It carried nine guns and took several prizes, with the proceeds of which Sargent paid his troops out of his own pocket. In June he marched to New York, was in all the battles there, so that his regiment was reduced from 727 men to 197. He took part in the battle of Trenton, and soon after resigned his commission for ill-health, but kept on fitting out privateers, of which he sent forty-seven sail to sea. In later years his property was lost by misfortunes, and at the time spoken of he was reduced to poverty, living upon the scant proceeds of a ferry at Sullivan, the sole use of which had been granted him by vote of the county. The pension was granted at first, but soon taken away, on the score that he was rich. He made an indignant protest, and filed an inventory at the War Department by which it appeared that he was worth $1,770, every little item of household furniture appearing scrupulously in the schedule. The pension was refused although ample testimony was shown that the old veteran, now seventy-six years old, owed about $2,000. In 1832 he made another effort. His ferry had been superseded by a bridge, his occupation was gone, and the schedules annexed to his inventory showed that his scanty property had diminished to $[illegible], of which $200 represented the tumble-down house in which he lived, with his wife, three maiden daughters and a grand-daughter. His letter to John C. Calhoun, then Secretary of War, was most pathetic, and reinforced by the testimony of judges of various courts to his deserving condition, and of creditors to debts ten times the value of his home. Still nothing was done. The handwriting of the correspondence showed the growing infirmities of Colonel Sargent, who in 1826 sent again in trembling characters the [illegible] last schedule to be made by Paul Dudley Sargent, a colonel in the Revolutionary War. I have not any property, nor any income whatever. For fact, I have been living for four years on charity and the sale of my [illegible] which is now entirely gone." At last convinced that he was not too rich to be pensioned at the age of [illegible] years, and after he had waited in distress so long, the officials granted him $20 a month, but too late to do him much good, for he died soon after. That is the record of the pension given so grudgingly, and withheld till [illegible] from the man who led the first New Hampshire troops to Concord, fitted out the first privateer, and gave all his private means without stint to the cause of independence. It is in striking contrast to the prodigal bounty now shown in dealing with the yet young survivors of the late war.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

About People Who Use Tobacco.

A tobacconist furnishes the following as the result of observation of his customers. An even-tempered, quiet man never goes to an extreme in choosing a tobacco; a nervous man wants something strong and furious; a mild man something that smokes and fuddles more. There is a great deal in the way men handle their cigars. If a man smokes his cigar only enough to keep it lighted, and relishes taking it from between his lips to give a curl of blue smoke into the air, set him down as easy-going. He has keen perceptions and delicate sensibilities. He will not create trouble, but is apt to see it out when it is once begun. Beware of the man who never relinquishes the cigar from the grip of his teeth, and is indifferent whether it burns or dies. He is cool, calculating, and exacting. He is seldom energetic physically, but lives easily off of those who perform the labor. A man who smokes a bit, rests a bit, and pumples the cigar more or less is apt to be easily affected by circumstances. If the cigar goes out frequently the man has a whole-souled disposition, is a devil-may-care sort of fellow, with a lively brain and a glib tongue, and generally a ding fund of anecdotes. To hold half the cigar in the mouth and smoke indifferently is a lazy man's habit. They are generally of little force, and their characters are not of the highest strata. A nervous man, or one under exciting influences, fumbles his cigar a great deal. He is a kind of popinjay among men. Holding the cigar constantly between the teeth, chewing it occasionally, and not caring whether or not it has been lighted at all, are characteristics of men with the tenacity of bull dogs. They never forget anything, and never release a hold. The fop stands his cigar on end, and an inexperienced smoker either points it straight ahead or almost at right angles with his course.—Pall Mall Gazette.

After having played a bar or two of "Midsummer Night's Dream" at a concert in Memphis recently, Herr Sternberg suddenly ceased, looked up at the gallery, then made a little bow to the audience, and declared that he could not play while peanuts were being cracked and that the gentlemen so engaged must cease or he must ask to be excused. There was a dead silence and Mr. Sternberg resumed. As the Appeal reporter critically remarks—the peanut has no soul for music.

Chestnuts.

It is the time of the year when people who have never been taught any better go chestnutting.

Chestnuts do not grow wild out West. Let the mighty West remember that with a grateful heart on Thanksgiving Day. On the boundless prairies the chestnut only grows in the train-boy's basket.

The chestnut is the home of the rioting worm. No self-respecting worm will live in the ground if he can find a chestnut. He enters it by a hole which cannot be perceived, and once in the nut he riots in solitude and abundance, until some incautious man reads the riot act to him. A chestnut without a worm is as great a rarity as a bee without a sting.

Where all the chestnuts come from, goodness only knows. I don't. They don't grow on the trees. The Prince went out one day, with the little ones at the parsonage. He came home with half a peck of beautiful brown chestnuts. I smiled at the child's enthusiasm, and said to his mother:

"I will go out with him myself, and get a couple of bushel."

I did go out with him. I took some things to bring the nuts home in; to-wit, a grain sack, a large double-decker market basket, and a box; the aggregate capacity of these vessels was two and one-half bushels. Dr. McLain and Louie accompanied us, with a somewhat larger equipment.

The proportion of the chestnut burs to chestnuts is as the leaves of the alders to the trout in the brook. Just about. You walk over acres of hulls, you turn them over, you look into them, you stumble and fall on them. At last your heart bounds with joy. You find a bur with a chestnut in it. You get all the needles on the bur into your two thumbs while you extract that chestnut, and then the ever-present worm looks out and denounces the barbarity of eviction.

I carried the chestnuts home that night in my pocket. The grain bag I folded up and hid under my coat. I threw the box away and the basket I filled with bleaky nuts. After it was full, a native drove past and I looked at me kindly.

"There's lots and bushels of shellbarks down on the other road about a mile," he said, with a peculiar emphasis on the shellbarks.

"Well, what's there to me?" I asked with a sinking heart.

"Pig nuts," he replied, "they're no good, nobody ever gathers them."

I lied, in his saying that I kept a pig and had gathered these nuts for feed, and the native left in ingenuous and drove on.

"What you mighty, all dem nuts over de fence for?" the Prince demanded.

I told him there were motives in the human heart that sometimes shaped our actions, too deep and intricate for him to comprehend, and then the Doctor and I gathered up the children and trespassed across a field to a forbidden chestnut tree, escorted by a whole herd of cattle and a Mr. Durham, who pawed the ground in another field and talked bass at us through the rails. We made a great raid at this tree. The venerable old monarch of the forest was about two thousand years old, and its branches had a spread of about twenty acres. It was cloudy with burs, but we got some nuts and ten worms.

I know what the worms are for. They are to keep people from eating the chestnuts. Men do not for the worms many people would eat chestnuts who cannot now be induced to taste them, and a great amount of suffering would thereby be entailed upon the human race. Of all the awful, tiresome, maddening things in the world to eat, a chestnut is the lingeringest. A man may start in on a chestnut say about the 10th of October. He can chew it all that day, and from time to time make desperate efforts to swallow fine fragments of it. It will make him cough all night, and he can resume the process of mastication early in the morning, and keep it up all the next day. It will last him that week, and Sunday he cannot sing at church without blowing dessicated chestnut all over the pew in front of him. He's lucky if he finally gets that chestnut chewed and swallowed by the end of November. I always hated it, and since I have met it in its native haunt I am less than ever a friend of the chestnut.

Recalcitrant Preachers.

It is related that when Rev. Dr. Ellis, Rev. Phillips Brooks and Rev. Dr. Brooke Herford were on their way home together from Liverpool to Boston, on the first Sunday out the captain of the Cephalonia endeavored to arrange for religious services, and asked the three famous clergymen to decide among themselves which should preach. Mr. Herford at once excused himself, saying he had preached steadily during his vacation and now wanted at least one Sunday's rest. Then Mr. Brooks suggested that Dr. Ellis, being the oldest, ought to preach. "O, no," said Dr. Ellis, "it would be nonsense for me to preach when everybody wants to hear you." And so, after half an hour of disclaimers and compliments, the end of the matter was that there was no preaching at all. "Well," said the captain, with a sigh, "I did what I could. But isn't it singular? Three fire-escapes aboard, and nobody saved from the burning!" Chicago Journal.

—A Jacksonville (Fla.) paper records the death of Miss Kittie Worrall from grief and prostration. The young girl was to have been married. The bridegroom and all the friends were assembled at the house and the hour for the ceremony fast approaching, when the young man excused himself from the company on the plea of having forgotten the wedding ring and left the house and has never been seen since.

—It is said that one New York produce firm has paid an average of fifty dollars a day for a month at a time for telegrams to Chicago, and the telegraphic business of five firms with their Chicago correspondents costs $110,000 a year. And yet less than half a century ago all the world's business was transacted without the wire.—N. Y. Evening Mail.

A Few Bank-Note Stories.

On one occasion the Bank of England proved much too accommodating for its own interests. Somewhere about the year 1840 one of its own Directors, a man of wealth and of unimpeachable honor, bought an estate for £30,000, and for convenience sake obtained a note for that amount. On returning home, just as he was about to put it under lock and key, he was called out of the room, and placed the note on the mantel-piece. On coming back, a few minutes later, no note was to be seen. No one had entered the room in his absence, and, after an anxious search, he came to the conclusion that the precious bit of paper had fallen into the fire and been consumed. Hurrying off to Threadneedle Street he told his colleagues what had happened, and they gave him a second note upon his undertaking to restore the lost one if it should come again into his hands, and, in case of its being presented by anybody else, repay the amount to the bank.

Thirty years afterward, when he had long been dead and his estate distributed among his heirs, the supposed non-existent note turned up at the bank counter, where it was presented for payment. All explanation of the circumstances connected with it were lost upon the presentee—the note had come to him from abroad in the course of business, and it must be honored without delay. There being no help for it, he was paid the £30,000. Application was made to the representatives of the defunct Director to refund the money, but they promptly disclaimed their liability, and the bank perforce had to put up with the loss. The story goes that it was discovered (how or when we are not informed) that the builder employed to pull down the dead man's house, preparatory to rearing a new one on the site had found the note in a crevice of the chimney, and kept it and his own counsel until he thought it was safe to reap the reward of his patience and unscrupulousness, and so become a rich man at a stroke.

The executors of Sir Robert Burdett found no less than £270,000 worth of bank notes scattered here and there about his house, some slipped into bundles of old papers, some between the leaves of books, without a memorandum anywhere to appraise them of the existence of such valuables, much less of their whereabouts. A little better advised were the executors of the gentleman who left behind him a scrap of paper marked, "Seven hundred pounds in Till," although they failed to interpret its meaning until they had disposed of all the dead man's belongings. Then one of them recollected that his library had contained a folio edition of Tillotson's Sermons, and wondered if "Till" had any reference to it. The books had been sold to a bookseller, who luckily had not found a customer for them, although he had sent them on approval to a gentleman at Cambridge, who had returned them as not answering his expectations. The executor bought the Tillotson back again, and going carefully through the volume, recovered notes to the amount of $2,500.

The watchman of a factory at New Haven, America, afforded the administrators of his estate no clew whatever as to the hiding-place of the savings of which they believed him to have died possessed. Overhauling his clothes preparatory to selling them by auction, one of them threw an old overcoat aside, when a dirty piece of cloth dropped out of one of the pockets. On examination this was found to be wrapped around a large cartridge-shell within which lay notes of $1,800 value, which, but for a mere chance, might unexpectedly have enriched a purchaser of second-hand clothing.

Some sixty years since a Bank of England £5 note was paid into a Liverpool merchant's office in the ordinary course of business. On holding it up to the light to test its genuineness the cashier saw some faint red marks upon it. Examining them closely, he traced some half-effaced words between the printed lines and upon the margin of the note, written apparently with blood. After a long and minute scrutiny he made out the words: "If this note should fall into the hands of John Dean, of Loughill, near Carlisle, he will learn hereby that his brother is languishing a prisoner in Algiers." The merchant immediately communicated with Mr. Dean, and he lost no time in bringing the matter before the Government. Inquiries were set on foot, and the unfortunate man discovered and ransomed. He had been a slave to the Dey of Algiers for eleven years when the message he had traced with a splinter of wood dipped in his own blood reached the Liverpool counting-house. Liberty, however, came too late; the privations and hardships of the galleys had sapped his strength, and although he was brought home to England, it was but to die. All the Year Round.

A curious story comes from Brentford, England. A servant of Dr. Ferry was sent out to carry a message. She was short-sighted, and failing to return it was feared she had fallen into the canal. It was dragged, but without success. Several days later an old barge woman suggested that a loaf of bread, in which some quicksilver had been placed, should be floated on the water. This was done and the loaf became stationary at a certain point. The dragging was resumed at this point and the body found. The superstition is said to be centuries old, but no one had seen it tried there for many a year.

After twenty-two years of exile at Siberia the Russian writer, Tchernischefski, has been allowed to return to his home to "husband out life's taper in its close." The poor man is now sixty years of age, but it is hardly necessary to say that his long years of exile have made him look more like a centenarian than anything else. He is hardly able to walk and scarcely weighs a hundred pounds. Tchernischefski was exiled during the riots of 1862.

Some girls can't catch on to the fashionable walk. Why, girls, that's easily done, when you know how. Just walk along slow and lazy like; give a little shove to the right and left at each step; act as if you had no elasticity in your step, as if each foot were held back by stiff mud, and the wind was kind of blowing you back at each step, and you have got it.—Newport Journal.

Weight by Measuring

The following rule for finding out the weight of an animal by measuring may prove convenient. See that the animal stands square, then take his circumference behind the shoulder-blade—this is the girth. Then measure from the bone of the tail which plumbs the line with the hinder part of the buttock, and direct the string along the back to the forepart of the shoulder-blade; this will be the length. Then work the figures thus: Suppose the girth of a bullock 6 feet 4 inches, length 5 feet 3 inches, which multiplied together make 33 square superficial feet, and these multiplied by 23—the number of pounds allowed for each superficial foot of earth [illegible] five feet in girth make 770 pounds. When the animal measures less than [illegible] and more than seven feet in girth, [illegible] the number of pounds to be estimated for each superficial [illegible] [illegible] square feet, [illegible] the number of pounds allowed for carcass [illegible] feet in girth make 770 pounds. The measures of cattle, sheep, calves and [illegible] in this way will give the weight of four quarters of the animal, making the offal. A deduction must be made for animals half fat, of one second, or twenty from those that are fat. For [illegible] that has had [illegible] allowed in addition to the [illegible] upon every twenty.

Japanese Life.

[illegible] the Japanese is so to speak more than godless with him. Though he has no soap he washes [illegible] once a day—he washes but once a week. His candles are made of vegetable wax. He uses a [illegible] well stuffed [illegible] covering and mattress. A square [illegible] cases—made of wood—makes his pillow. He goes to that [illegible] in the [illegible] that [illegible] carefully [illegible] hair [illegible] in a long [illegible]. No [illegible] Japanese. No [illegible] unfortunately. [illegible] with the men shaved in [illegible]. They are coming now to wear it in European fashion. They are adopting all European customs.

On levee day I saw the reception at the Mikado's palace in Yeddo. Every one presented had to come in full dress. That dress does not become the Japanese figure. He looks awkward in it. His legs are too short. The tails of his claw-hammer coat lag on the ground and the black dress trousers wrinkle up and get baggy around his feet. His European fashioned clothes have been sent ready-made from America, England, and in no case did I see anything approaching to a good fit. Yet he smiled and looked very happy, though he could not get his heels half way down his Wellington boots, and his hat was either too large or too small for his head. His saving grace did looks pleasant. Nothing can make him grumble, and he has not learned to swear. He is satisfied to be paid his pay and never asks for more. As a New York cabman he would be a veritable living curiosity.

Beauty.

[illegible] against [illegible] beauty saying you [illegible] the [illegible] to the exclusion of those moral qualities, mind and [illegible]. Well, beauty alone will sink your dinner [illegible] and [illegible] a time [illegible] but [illegible] and tend [illegible] in our carriage. The [illegible] said:

[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]

Well, put yourself to that which time [illegible] from you, during the [illegible] and sound mind, ready with the character and capabilities of your choice. See to it that she possesses a [illegible] of grasping the ordinary questions of the day, and that a portion of her [illegible] on reading some [illegible] and [illegible] well [illegible] about which, hence [illegible] sweetness of temper is not incompatible with firmness or moral courage and a woman possessing these attributes will not belong to the rapidly [illegible] class, but on the contrary [illegible] and develop into noble wives and [illegible] in friendship, and devout [illegible] capable of exerting both home and in society, the best of [illegible] influence for the right and for [illegible].

If to these high and independent qualities is added beauty, then your choice is indeed blessed of God. Take such a one to your heart and while be engaged in fitting and adorning yourself worthy to be the possessor of such a priceless gem.

What Has It Done For You?

The skeptical Mr. Bradlaugh was once lecturing in a village in the north of England, and at the close challenged opposition. Who should accept the challenge but an old Irish woman in the most antiquated attire, who went up to the lecturer and said: "Sir, I have a question to put to you." "Well, my good woman, what is it?" "Forty years ago," she said, "I was left a widow with eight children unprovided for, and nothing to call my own but this Bible. By its direction, and looking up to God for strength, I have been enabled to feed myself and family. I am now tottering to the grave; but I am perfectly happy, because I look forward to a life of immortality with Jesus in heaven. That's what my religion has done for me. What has your way of thinking done for you?" "Well, my good lady," rejoined the lecturer, "I don't want to disturb your comfort; but"—"Oh! that's not the question," interposed the woman; "keep to the point, sir. What has your way of thinking done for you?" The infidel endeavored to shirk the matter again, the feeling of the meeting gave vent in uproarious applause, and Mr. Bradlaugh had to go away discomfitted by an old woman.—The Lutheran.

A. P. Updyke, of Franklin, entertained a large crowd of relatives and friends Christmas.

Mr. and Mrs. Culver, of Hudson, and Miss Alta Updyke, of North Adams, were from abroad. The dinner was excellent, the cigars fragrant, and the tree was loaded down with useful, as well as ornamental presents.

Mr. Frank Skinner, of Springville, was found dead Christmas night; the supposition is that he took his own life, as he has threatened to do so several times. On the fatal night the family went to attend a Christmas tree, and, when they reached home he was in the lounge dead. Recently he gave one man Jessup forty dollars, asking him to see that he was properly buried after he was dead.

John R. Clark will lecture under the auspices of the W. C. T. U., at Lenawee Junction, on the evenings of Jan. 3d, 4th and 5th, 1884. His subjects will be "To and Fro in London," "Blunders, Big and Little," and "Among the Masses."

The Carman Family Concert at the Baptist church on Christmas night was a grand success and was listened to by a crowded house. The proceeds were $110 which will net a handsome sum for the Poor Fund. We believe a repetition of the concert a few weeks hence would be a good investment.

Col. O. T. Beard, late of the Detroit Post and Tribune, has engaged to write a serial story for the Detroit Echo, in which he will expose some phases of the rascality in high quarters by which the public are plundered, and by which immense fortunes are amassed at the expense of the common people. Col. Beard has already achieved a high repute as a story writer, and the forthcoming serial will alone be worth twice the cost of a year's subscription.

The Monroe Democrat says The News is wrong about its predictions of an open winter, based on reports of muskrat hunters of Monroe and Macomb counties. The Democrat on behalf of its muskrat hunting constituents and on the word of a member of the old Shawnee canoe club, who is now breeding muskrats, says the rats are building their houses bigger and warmer than ever, and an awful winter may be expected. Take due warning and double your coal orders.

The most recent advancement in educational matters in Macon is the Excelsior spelling school, held at Pennington's Corners, in the hall familiarly known as the "do-drop." To attract people to this place of lore, a glass set, valued at $3.50, is offered to the one that can guess the nearest how any given word might be spelled. The generous "profisser of this spellin' skule," as he is pleased to style himself, charges a very reasonable admission fee, to meet current expenses. The words are pronounced and spelled according to the most modern system, the "profisser of this spellin' skule" being judge. For instance, sterile is spelled stee it, and flageolet, flag-o-let, and considered correct. Connoisseur is pronounced con-noy-sur and admitted to be right. Aurelia is given as a-rel-ya, and said to be authentic, and in this manner the nomenclature of the English language is exhausted. The "profisser of this spellin' skule" should choose "Omnia vincit labor" for his motto, and then strive for immortality.

Burglars went through Geo. Keyser's saloon last night. They obtained an entrance through a window in the rear, and after getting inside rifled the money till and made their escape. They obtained a pretty good haul, somewhere in the neighborhood of $150.

Judging from the number of the Social Reformer before us we should say that Rev. Geo. W. Hudson is an adept at handling the editorial quill. We feel moved to drop this hint:—Double the size of the Reformer, charge fifty cents per year therefor and push the paper.

The Detroit Evening News, acting on the principle that it is more blessed to give than to receive, renders to the country press about fourfold what it asks in return. It gives us pleasure to say a kind word for the News; and to wish it increasing success during the coming year. The fact that 180 odd copies are taken in Tecumseh, shows that it has many friends here besides the HERALD.

Aaron Norcross, of Franklin, returned home last week from an absence of nearly a year and a half. He has been visiting among acquaintances in Indiana, Ohio, New York and away down in "Jarsey." Mr. Norcross has his own views on politics as usual, and is warming up for next year's campaign. He weighs thirty-one pounds more than when he left Michigan although we are at a loss to know where he put it.

The American Agriculturist for January, 1884, opens in excellent style, the 43d volume of the leading farm journal of the world. It abounds in reliable advice on very many important and seasonable topics. Among the instructive full-page engravings we find, The First Snow Storm, Talking Over the Crop Prospects, and A Poor Show for Bunny. Mr. Trumble presents portraits of six of the leading types of Tramps. Other fully illustrated articles are, Plans of a Small Barn, Preventing Cattle from Browsing, Pigeon Houses, Feeding Boxes, Wash Room, and other instructive articles. Price, $1.50 a year. Single numbers, 15c.

We have just received a handsome little book with the title, "One Thousand and One Riddles," which contains the material for much fun and home amusement in the way of riddles, conundrums, enigmas, and hints for acting charades. If parents desire to have their children amused, and also amuse themselves, they cannot do better than to send for this book. It contains 128 pages, with enameled paper cover, and will be sent by mail, post paid, to any address, upon receipt of 15 cents, by J. S. Ogilvie & Co., publishers, 31 Rose street, New York.

The Detroit Evening News has just put in a second of the famous Scott presses, with a capacity of 24,000 copies per hour. When both its presses are running, which is from about 4:30 to 5:15 o'clock each afternoon, papers are turned out at the rate of 48,000 per hour or 800 per minute, and in case of necessity even this number can be increased to 1,000 per minute. The News is the first and only paper in Michigan to require anything like such rapid facilities. Notwithstanding the competition of two new cheap papers in Detroit, the circulation of The News shows no appreciable decline.

The initial number of The Social Reformer issues from the HERALD job rooms this week. It is a neat four page, twelve column little sheet, edited and published by Rev. Geo. W. Hudson, A. M., pastor of the M. E. church of this village. The name reveals its character. It is devoted to the interests of social virtue and domestic happiness, and is printed for gratuitous distribution. This number contains several vigorous articles upon topics of current interest such as Divorce, Mormonism, the Liquor Traffic, the Criminal Epidemic, Capital Punishment, etc. It is well worth a careful perusal. Sent free in any number by addressing, Rev. Geo. W. Hudson, Tecumseh, Mich.

A PLEASANT CHRISTMAS EVE.

A concert was arranged to be given on Christmas eve, by the Sunday School of the Presbyterian church, to purchase music books for the school. At the closing drill on Monday afternoon the hard worked committee of arrangements were not over sanguine of success. The juveniles were more intent on fun than disposed to be drilled. The good ladies sighed and said, we shall fail. But the hour came, the children were in their places, the best friends of the school were present, the concert began and the committee were cheered. The first peal of the organ was like the smell of gunpowder in battle. The programme was judiciously chosen. The opening anthem by the choir, and the pieces by the school were well rendered. The song by Mr. Timothy Strong, the recitation by Miss A. Gray, the instrumental Trio by Mr. H. McNair, J. Richards and F. Hilman, the duets by the Misses L. Jones and M. Eccles and by the Misses L. Lang and C. Powers, were all enjoyed, as indeed was everything presented. But Santa Claus was a large contributor to the enjoyment of the occasion, the more so, as it was not supposed he would be heard from. A despatch came from him early in the evening, saying he would be glad to visit the school and give presents to the primary class, if they would send him word. Of course he was asked, by return despatch to come. Later the good old Gentleman availed himself of the wires again to say he had met with an accident. His reindeer team had broken loose from his sleigh and runaway, and he must go after them. But the sleigh, with two of his grand-daughters in it was just north of the town and if they would send for it they might have it and the presents. Two gentlemen volunteered to go for it. At the close of the singing programme they arrived. The doors were thrown open and in came the sleigh drawn up the central aisle by the gentlemen who had rescued it, and being hoisted on the platform with the grandchildren in it, presents were distributed by them to all the younger classes of the school. Our faithful Superintendent was remembered in a present and several of the teachers by their classes. And so ended, with heartily sung doxology a very enjoyable and not unprofitable occasion.

A POINT IN MEDICAL ETHICS.

The following we copy from the Journal of the American Medical Association of Dec. 22d, 1883, from a correspondent at Tecumseh, Mich., who says:

"In the County of . State of Michigan, within thirty miles of its university, the worthy rulers of said County (Supervisors) let out the job of medical attendance upon the poor to the lowest bidder, in each Town, Village and Township. The town of in this county, has almost three thousand inhabitants. The contract physician for the poor, who, by the way, has practiced medicine in the town for thirty years, receives $19.50 per year for medical attendance, and furnishes medicine. If no bids were made the Supervisors would allow each physician half fees for whatever business he might do among the poor of the towns. Now, Mr. Editor, is there anything in the above asinine transaction contrary to the National Code of Ethics? or is it in accordance with the go as you please code of New York? Please give us some light."

As man is only possessed of what light God has given him, I am not surprised that the above esteemed correspondent calls for what he has not, that is "light." To clear up some misapprehension on his part, I will say that the worthy rulers of the county do not "let the job" of medical attendance upon the poor; we have superintendents of the poor who attend to that business. The "job was let," for the past year at $19.50 per year. There were three bids sent in from this township, two of them for $20.00 and the third at $19.50, and if I am not mistaken in the identity of the esteemed correspondent, he was one of the physicians who furnished one of the twenty dollar bids. For a number of years the poor of this town were well taken care of without any of this artificial assistance and I presume the poor could still be well cared for on the old plan. I presume further that, the taxpayers, who have some "light" on the subject, will not relish the plan of having the physicians band together in a scheme to levy their fees, even at half rates, on the tax roll of the town although a one half fee might not be in violation of the National code. The scheme suggested by the esteemed correspondent would certainly be a good one to enable physicians to collect their bad debts, but in that case the physician would have to get an order from the Supervisor before he took charge of the case. During the last year, before the plan of "letting the job" was adopted about five years since, over $[illegible] in bills were sent to the supervisors from physicians of this town for medical attendance upon the poor, and we are informed that the present incumbent of that position had no hand in that attempt to levy his fees on the tax payers. As the communication in the Medical Journal is scattered broadcast over the entire country I deem it but just that the esteemed correspondent should be favored with some "light" on the subject he essays to discuss.

CITIZEN.

Country roads have not kept pace with national development in other respects, and the day is not distant when the subject must be taken up in earnest and a system inaugurated by which what is expended upon them one year is not entirely dissipated before the next year comes around. The question has been left mainly to the farmers, and their slowness is proverbial, but many of them begin to see their mistake and are ripe for a better system. And it will come before many years.

Suicide at Springville.

Frank Skinner, an aged and respectable citizen of Springville, committed suicide last evening, by taking strychnine. Mr. Skinner lived at Springville with his wife, and yesterday the most of their children, of whom three or four living, were at home to spend Christmas. Last evening the family, including Mrs. Skinner, went to a Good Templars [illegible] Summerhill, in the village, leaving the old gentleman at home. The oldest son, whose name is also Frank, went home before the rest of the family, to get his team, and found his father lying upon the lounge with a bottle labeled strychnine, a glass tumbler and a dipper on the table near by. Dr. Vaughan was at once summoned, but Mr. Skinner was quite dead. The doctor estimated that he had taken at least twenty grains of the poison. For at least a year past Mr. Skinner has been thought to be slightly demented, and there is little doubt that he was suffering from temporary insanity. He was about 70 years old.—Adrian Times.

Mormonism and Inaction.

For more than a score and a half of years Mormonism has been defying the power of our government. Here we are, an enlightened, Christian people, with that relic of barbarism, that pet social monstrosity of the effete civilization of the orient, flaunting its abomination in our faces. For thirty years and over Congress has been crushing out the polygamous hierarchy, and yet it lives to-day, a mighty power in one of our western territories. It not only lives, but it flourishes; it is growing, it is extending its power into other territories. Certainly, Mormonism is very hard to crush, or else it does not say much for the prowess of our Congress. The fact is the course of Congress with polygamy is one of the most noted examples of "masterly inactivity" to be found anywhere. After all these years of opportunity, it is a burning shame to be compelled to say that the work is yet to do.

But after all, the difficulty is largely with ourselves. True, Congress has manifested a lack of courage; but it is our business to spur them on. They come from the people. Congressmen are made by the people. If the people had said, "It must, it shall be done," it would have been done. The trouble is, we have been expecting Congress to do the work without any action on our part. We have been waiting for others to do our work, and as often happens in such cases, the work has not been done. We have too fondly cherished the idea also that Mormonism would die of its own monstrosities when brought into contact with the currents of purer civilization. We have been like the man, who, sickened by a skunk, assured his friend that if he would let it alone, it would sink itself to death. We seem to have forgotten that social vices do not die in that way, that this one started right up under the full blaze of Christian enlightenment. Slavery did not kill itself; neither will Mormonism. It will die hard. It is grasping for political power, and unless checked, it may become as dangerous to our union as was slavery. Unless the people rise up in their majesty and speedily stamp it out, we may soon witness again in our land two hostile civilizations warring together like giants.

We need to throw aside once for all the idea that Mormonism is going to die of itself, and also that other equally unworthy of us, that Congress will do the business while we slumber. We need to realize that Mormonism has a wonderful hold upon its votaries. Let us consider that the Mormon women are the ones who are most degraded by the system, who, according to its precepts, are equivalent at best to the fractional part of a man, and who, by its practices, are made the puppets of lust. Let us consider that these women are the most strenuous supporters of Mormonism to-day. Let us realize that this fact alone throws a mighty charm over its victims. Then let us act accordingly.

What shall we do? Let us send men to Congress pledged to crush out this evil as speedily as possible. Let us make it one of the qualifications of our congressional candidates. This can be done if the people say so. Then if our congressmen forget their pledge when they get to Washington, and spend all their time in trying to make their party strong enough to win the next Presidential election, let us raise funds and send emigrants enough to Utah to outvote the Mormon, and form a state government which can conquer the evil. If we but act the work can be done. We shall find some means of accomplishing it.

We have made arrangements to offer The Ohio Farmer of Cleveland, O., with the HERALD, both one year, for the low price of $2.50. The Ohio Farmer is a 16-page, 64 column paper, has been established thirty-six years, strictly first-class in every respect, and is one of the oldest, largest, most valuable, enterprising, and reliable agricultural weeklies in the country.

The Silver Skulls.

A small boy of Cleveland, Ohio, aged fourteen, has disappeared from a comfortable home in company with two revolvers and a packet of dime novels. It is as yet uncertain whether he will devote himself to the work of exterminating Indians or will embrace the more elegant profession of highway robbery and murder. The latter is probably his choice, for the Indian field cannot be successfully cultivated without a rifle, and as the small boy has equipped himself solely with revolvers he probably intends to become a second Jesse James.

This able small boy left behind him the archives of a secret society founded by himself and called the Society of the Silver Skulls, "silver" being a more precious one if less real than the other metal. In this society were banded together ten small boys, aged from eleven to fifteen years, and their chief occupation was a travesty of blood-curdling writing. The object of the society is not yet known, but we may safely assume that murder and rapine were to be the occupation of its members, and from the earnest manner in which those who took the oath were required to curse their fathers, mothers, and sisters" they doubtless intended to take a rich harvest of revenge for any spankings which they had incurred. [illegible] The members of this society also [illegible] a contingent curse upon their posterity, which shows that they were enough like small boys who looked far into the future. So far it does not appear that the society has done any thing particularly except to murder three small boy named Jason Casey with death for the crime of refusing to join a "Silver Skull," and in the absence of the founder of the society the great may not be carried into execution.

The conduct of the Cleveland small boy reminds one of the nursery epic entitled the "Robber Kitten." The lines of that poem had doubtless read to him in the fellow's baggage to young [illegible]

DR. B. MINCER,

Scientific Optician!

I have devoted 25 years wholly to a study of the eye, and how to aid vision properly, and I make a specialty of fitting glasses to the eyes that have been injured by cheap, inferior glasses. I manufacture every kind of glasses, and guarantee satisfaction. Read what prominent physicians of Adrian say:

Having for some time past used glasses to improve my sight, without satisfactorily gaining my object, I called on Mr. Mincer, optician, of Detroit, who readily adapted glasses to my eyes, with which I am so well pleased, that I cheerfully speak in his favor. His method of examining and its application in selecting glasses to fit the eye can only be acquired by a knowledge of the useful organ to which must be added extensive experience. He has also adapted glasses to Mrs. Baker's eyes with which she is well pleased. I recommend him to all who need glasses adapted to their wants; poor glasses are an abomination.
— V. A. BAKER, M.D.
ADRIAN, Nov. 18, 1882.

I have used spectacles bought of Mr. B. Mincer for the past three months, and find them superior to any I have ever used, and can cheerfully recommend him to anyone in need of glasses, and the benefit of his experience in the science of optics to adjust proper lenses.
DANIEL TODD, M.D.

I have investigated the work of Mr. B. Mincer, optician. I have reason to believe that he understands his profession, and adjusts excellent glasses on scientific principles. C. RYND, M.D.

I will visit every town in the county during the month.

CRYING FOR AID.

Loss of Appetite, Headache, Depression, Indigestion and Constipation, Biliousness, a Sallow Face, Dull Eyes, and a Blotched Skin, are among the symptoms which indicate that the Liver is crying for aid.

Ayer's Pills

will stimulate the Liver to proper action, and correct all these troubles. One or more of these Pills should be taken daily, until health is fully established. Thousands testify to their great merit.

How Thieves Divide.

"Suppose," asked a reporter of a well known ex-detective, "that I had $6,000 worth of diamonds and other jewelry stolen from my house, how much would I have to pay the thieves or their middle-men to get the property back?"

"Well, there are many things connected with the business which might suggest many different answers."

"What business?"

"The business of thieving, for it is a business and has several grades. For instance: The men who robbed Alexander Lewis and David Whitney were not the men who did the Rolshoven work. The perpetrators of that job consider themselves several degrees above 'porch-climbers' who rob dwelling houses, and would not even recognize them on the streets, or elsewhere."

"How do you know all this?"

"I do not absolutely know the facts in the instances cited, but I form my conclusion on my knowledge of thieves of all classes, and their code of ethics. A safe-breaker is an aristocrat when he meets a porch-climber, and in fact they strive to avoid meeting or associating with persons any lower in thievdom than themselves."

"Now to return to the question of returning stolen property for a reward and no questions asked. What do you know of the methods?"

"In the first place, nine out of ten of the safe-blowing jobs are 'put up' by persons living in the town where the work is done. They 'size up' the enterprise and send for some one to do the trick who is particularly good at that kind of work. That some one comes from abroad generally. Thus, it follows, that there are four persons or gangs of persons who know just who does a job as quickly as the news comes that it has been done."

"And who are the persons thus informed?"

"First, the person or persons who 'put up' the job; second, the 'fence' who receives the property; third, the thieves who do the work, and fourth, the associates of the thieves who live in the town they hail from and who know that they left home to do work. Now then all of these parties watch the papers and use every means to 'keep posted in relation to each job, and the minute any reward is offered or any settlement made, they clamor for their 'whack' and generally get it."

"But suppose a thief leaves Chicago, Toledo or Cleveland to do a job in Detroit; how do his associates know where he has gone or what he does?"

"Because they know the thief is out of town and they know the kind of work he does and his methods of working."

"I see. Now how much would a thief get on $5,000 worth of plunder?"

"From forty to fifty per cent. of the total valuation. You see it's this way: The party who 'puts up' the job 'steers' the thief to a 'fence.' We'll say the 'fence' whacks up half-and-half with the thief. Then the person who puts up the job calls on the 'fence' for a divy of fifteen or twenty per cent. of his fifty per cent., and on the thief for a like share of his half."

The statement being a trifle complicated the detective prepared the following table illustrating the point:

Value of property stolen	$5,000
Share received by "fence"	2,500
Share received by thief	2,500
Commission paid by "fence"	500
Commission paid by thief	500
Reward received by party who "puts up" the job	1,000
Profit realized by "fence"	2,000
Profit realized by thief	2,000

Then, to satisfy the thief, provided I wanted to recover my property by paying a reward, I should be obliged to give him the $2,000 he'd realize on a $5,000 haul?"

"Oh dear, no. You would be obliged to pay fees to all the parties I have mentioned. They are all in the job and must have their 'whack' just the same whether they restore the property to you for a reward or whether they dispose of it to a 'fence.' There would be this difference: Considering the safety that would follow all concerned by restoring the property to you and no questions asked, the 'putter up' of the job, the thief and the 'fence' would consent to smaller profits. Accordingly on $5,000 worth of property stolen, you would be obliged to pay $1,000 to $2,000 to get it back."

"But, hold on!" you've left out the 'whack' clamored for by the associates of thieves at his own home."

"That the thief is obliged to settle for after he returns to his home, and if he fails or refuses to do the square thing then some one 'squeals' to our police, an officer picks up the squealer and sometimes works out the 'kick' to conviction. But there is sometimes trouble there, for a man who will 'blow' on a partner will 'settle' with that partner on the shortest notice, leaving the officer entirely at sea and without witnesses or evidence."

"It's a sort of dog eat dog occupation which thieves engage in, isn't it?"

"It certainly is, and in the long run every dog becomes food for some other dog." Detroit Free Press.

A Hard Case.

A curious case, in which an Englishman is concerned, is pending before the courts at Lausanne. A dog began to chase a cat; the cat fled down an air-shaft leading from the street into a wine vault; the dog followed, and both of them fell. In the vault was a large cask of Yvorne, not very securely tapped, and either the dog or the cat knocked up against the tap and the wine began to flow. The wine merchant clearly had a cause of action for the loss of his wine, and the landlord in his turn has sued his tenant for the damage done by the mess. But who is to blame on the other side, the owner of the dog or the owner of the cat? Unfortunately for the Englishman who owns the dog, the cat (like so many of the species) is an "unappropriated blessing," and the wine merchant has laid his action in consequence against the owner of the dog. Pall Mall Gazette.

While the arrangements were being made for a party in Somerville, a few evenings ago, a young lady present innocently inquired: "Is the invitation to embrace the young ladies?" "O no," replied a young man, "the gentlemen will attend to that." And the young lady wonders what the young man meant. Somerville Journal.

KING OF THE BLOOD.

The Most Thorough Purifier of the Blood Yet Discovered.

Cures all Humors, from a Common Eruption to the worst Scrofula.

It purifies the Blood.
It invigorates the Liver.
It regulates the Bowels.
It strengthens the Stomach.
It gives vivacity in place of lassitude; cheerfulness in place of gloom, and robust vigor in place of debility.

Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Disordered Liver, Constipation, Nervous Affections, General Debility, in short all the numerous diseases and discomforts caused by impure blood are speedily conquered by this powerful corrector, the chief and sovereign of all ancient or modern medical discoveries—KING OF THE BLOOD.

Its name is its best description as it is a royal dispenser of the blessings of health and vanquishes the foes that curse in the blood.

It banishes PIMPLES, SALT RHEUM, SCALY ERUPTIONS, ULCERS, SCALD HEAD, FEVER SORES, and all SCROFULOUS DISORDERS.

It checks CONSUMPTION in its early stages. It has frequently cured it when advanced.

It disperses TUMORS and CANCERS without the Surgeon's knife.

It cures DROPSY, general or partial.

It cures FEMALE WEAKNESS and DISEASE.

It reduces in a safe and effectual manner all swellings, external or internal.

It eradicates the effects of Venerial Disease and Mineral Poisons, and establishes a sound constitution.

Many certificates, much further information and full directions for using, will be found in the pamphlet, "Treatise on Diseases of the Blood," in which each bottle is enclosed.

Price $1 per bottle containing 32 ounces, or 50 doses. Sold by dealers in medicine.

If your druggist does not happen to have it on hand, request him to order a supply of it for you, as it will be cheaper than for you to order direct of us, and less trouble.

EIGHT THOUSAND DOLLARS CASH.

STATEMENT OF S. L. GROAT.

I have been afflicted with Rheumatism for the past twenty-five years; I have been so bad for the last three years that I have been obliged to use crutches all this time. I have tried every Rheumatic Remedy I could hear of, and have paid out in cash over eight thousand dollars, and I can honestly say that I have never taken a medicine that has given me as much relief as Wilson's Lightning Remedy. And I consider it the best remedy for Inflammatory or Acute Rheumatism that exists, and will give relief quicker than any other known remedy. My son was afflicted with the disease, and after taking the first dose he experienced a relief, and was perfectly cured of the disease after taking eight doses. S. L. GROAT.

BULL DOGLETS

A Joke we had traveled about,
Was heard very plain to shriek out,
"I have chewed in all lands,
But the finest of brands
Is the 'Bull Dog' without any doubt."

A man up at Kalamazoo
Said no decent tobacco he knew
But the "Bull Dog" he chewed
Was so well satisfied
He bought a whole gross to try.

A resident at a wayside station
Was grumbling about his vocation
He said: "I'd not mind
If I only could find
Bull Dog Plug in this part of the nation."

An old man who used it by force,
Saw a "Bull Dog" sign over a door,
He said: "While I'm by,
I'll procure a supply,"
And bought all the Dogs in the store.

An old miser, not to be coaxed,
Said his son needs chew or cross-examined
But his head he was pelted
When the "Bull Dog" he knew
That he fed was the cunningest pup.

But the speed at which song delivers,
Shows the chewers do all understand
Though "Bull Dog" costs more
All the "dis" we endure
TIS THE FINEST BY FAR IN THE LAND.

THE BLUES.

We get many letters from druggists stating pleasant results from customers of Billious temperaments having used ZOPESA.

Those subject to depression or low spirits, caused by indigestion, or liver troubles will be surprised how rapidly and pleasantly it acts. It corrects the secretions, strengthens digestion. Usually a 10-cent sample convinces one of its value.

ESTATE OF FLORENCE E. SMITH.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss

At a session of the Probate Court for the county of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the City of Adrian, on Monday, the 24th day of December, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three.

Present, Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Florence E. Smith, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of [illegible] E. Smith, administrator of said estate, praying [illegible] administration of said estate [illegible] and praying [illegible] allowance [illegible] and distribution of the residue of said estate to and among the heirs-at-law of said deceased, and for his discharge.

Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the [illegible] day of January, next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

NORMAN GEDDES, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of telegraphic service, having the advantage of connection with the CHICAGO DAILY NEWS, it has at its command all the dispatches of the Western Associated Press, besides a very extensive service of Special Telegrams from all important points. As a News-paper it has no superior. It is INDEPENDENT in politics, presenting all political news free from partisan bias or coloring, and absolutely without fear or favor as to parties. It is, in the fullest sense, a FAMILY PAPER. Each issue contains several COMPLETED STORIES, a SERIAL STORY of absorbing interest, and a rich variety of condensed notes on Fashions, Art, Industries, Literature, Science, etc., etc. The Market quotations are complete and to be relied upon. It is unsurpassed as an enterprising, pure, and trustworthy GENERAL FAMILY NEWSPAPER. We republish here from the columns of the WEEKLY NEWS a few of the voluntary commendations it has received:

WHAT OLD SUBSCRIBERS SAY

About the "Chicago Weekly News" when they renew their subscriptions.

William Cannons, Pontiac, Oakland County, Mich., says: "I think it is the best paper in America."

L. A. Welch, Sullivan, O., says: "It is better than many of the $2 papers."

James P. Malone, 253 St. Charles street, New Orleans, La., says: "In comparing your paper with others I receive, I must say yours, the CHICAGO WEEKLY NEWS, is good, better, best. I would sooner miss a meal than a number of the NEWS. It is the newspaper of the day. It is true to its name."

Alfred P. Foster, Woodhull, Henry County, Ill., says: "It is one of the cleanest papers published."

W. W. Rhodes, Adrian, Mich., says: "I don't want to miss a number. It is the best paper for news I have ever seen."

Peter Lansing, Estonia, Saunders County, Neb., says: "I like THE WEEKLY NEWS. It is full of readable and valuable news, and, although I am in receipt of nine weekly journals, I am constrained to adopt THE WEEKLY NEWS as No. 10, because of its non-partisan attitude in politics, giving me the ungarbled truth concerning the actions of all political parties."

M. E. Davenport, Palmyra, N. Y., says: "It is the cheapest and best paper I ever read."

Mrs. L. Schanan, Hannibal, Mo., says: "I like your paper very much. I get six other papers, but do not like them as well as THE WEEKLY NEWS."

W. R. Law, Mansfield, Tex., says: "I am highly pleased with the NEWS for I get political news presented in it in such a way that I get both sides of a question fairly set forth, which is utterly impossible to get in a strictly party journal of either side."

The above extracts are sufficient to show in what esteem the CHICAGO WEEKLY NEWS is held by its old subscribers.

Our special Clubbing Terms bring it within the reach of all. Specimen Copies may be seen at this office.

COMMISSIONERS' NOTICE.

IN THE MATTER of the estate of Peter B. Adams, deceased.

The undersigned, having been appointed by the Judge of Probate for the County of Lenawee, Michigan commissioners to receive, examine and adjust all claims and demands against the estate of Peter B. Adams, late of Tecumseh, in said county, deceased, hereby give notice that we will meet for that purpose at the late residence of the deceased, in the village of Tecumseh, Lenawee county, Michigan, on the 24 day of February, 1884, and on the 16th day of June, 1884, at ten o'clock a. m. of the forenoon of said days, and that six months from the 16th day of December, 1883, are allowed by the said court for the creditors of said estate to present said claims for examination and adjustment.

Dated December 26, 1883.

JACOB G. ROBERTS,
ZACHARIAH COOK,
Commissioners.

THE SUN

NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of THE SUN have gone out from our establishment during the past 12 months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of all THE SUNS printed and sold last year you would get a continuous strip of interesting information, common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the moon, then back to Printing House square, and then three-quarters of the way back to the moon again.

But THE SUN is written for the inhabitants of the earth; this same strip would girdle the globe twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of THE SUN during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and if his wife or his grandfather has spent another hour, this newspaper in 1883, has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading, night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

THE SUN is, and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without the fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the republican party must go and must go in this coming year of our Lord, 1884. If you know THE SUN, you like it already, and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know THE SUN, it is high time to get into the sunshine.

TERMS TO MAIL SUBSCRIBERS.

ESTATE OF EDMUND HAND.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, on Monday, the 15th day of December, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three.

Present: Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Edmund Hand, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of William W. Osgood, administrator of said estate, alleging that he has paid the debts of said deceased, his funeral expenses and expenses of administration, thus far incurred, and praying for the allowance of his final account, for an assignment and distribution of the residue of said estate to and amongst the persons entitled thereto, and for his discharge.

Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the 14th day of January next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks, previous to said day of hearing.

Cement Sewer Pipe Works.
E. M. CASEY, Proprietor.

To those who have never witnessed it, the process of cement pipe manufacture is quite interesting. A few moments' ride by Michigan avenue car from the center of the city will land one almost before the door of the above named establishment at 256 Trumbull avenue. One may see here large quantities of solid looking pipes, and upon inquiry learn that some are intended for wells, others for chimneys, sewers, drains, etc., Special attention is called to their Well pipe from 12 to 30 inches in diameter, the latter size being large enough to admit a man to work inside, thereby saving expense in excavation.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

BRITTON BUDGET.

I agree with what "Britton Buzzings" says of the two improvements of which he speaks, referring to the changing of the name of the P. O. and burning up the old school-house, and I would say, add the one that stands on the corner by Charles Kniffin's, and the one located just east of Albert Kniffin's, to the flames also. This done, get a permit by special act to convert these three districts in which now stand those old illy-fashioned, unhealthy, and disgraceful school-houses, into a separate school district, and then build a good and respectable school building of modern pattern, that would be a credit to the community at Britton; or, if thought best, in a more central location in the district so formed, and thereby (after the school buildings shall have been erected) curtail the taxes imposed upon the citizens for school purposes, and have a good graded school in the bargain—a thing the village and community are so greatly in need of.

I also agree with this "buzzing knight of the quill" in what he says about the village being a splendid location for a good physician, and in my judgment the right man would be an intelligent and well read graduate of the Homœopathic school. Then I agree with him, too, in what he writes concerning the right man putting up a grist-mill in the village, &c. If I had been educated to believe in shouting, I would respond with such a loud amen to what he says upon this grist-mill question, as to awaken the citizens (farmers) in all the regions round about to what I conceive to be their best financial interests. But as it is, I can only say, I am so sanguine that a first-class grist-mill at Britton would be such a money-making institution, that did I command capital sufficient with which to do it, I would invest twenty or thirty thousand dollars at least in an enterprise of that kind in that village. I think there would be a much greater, as well as much surer, per cent. in an investment of that kind than to put money into a new store-room, however well filled it may be kept with new and fresh saleable goods. I am of opinion that such an outlay of money would be even more preferable, and would, most certainly, pay a much greater per cent. to the dollar than will the capital that was carried over to Canada a short time since and invested in Clydesdale stable horses, and then have them imported to the county of Lenawee for the purpose of making money out of them.

In my judgment, if the Brittonites and the citizens in the surrounding country, especially the monied-men, both in and adjacent to the village, will bestir themselves and see to it that a school-house and grist-mill, such as are herein above indicated, are secured to the village, instanter the healthful prosperity and permanent growth of the borough is secured, but if, Mr. Editor, the Brittonians suffer their rival, two short miles west of them—I mean the village of ——, to get the start of them in securing these two very important public buildings, as it has done in that of the depot on the M. & O. R. R., then is the demise of Britton a foregone conclusion, and in a comparatively short time there won't be enough of it left out of which to get a text upon which to found its funeral oration. O! ye Brittonians, I prophesy as to wise men. Mark the prediction.

In my next I will have something to say about that oyster supper at the church, concerning which "Britton Buzzings" wrote so knowingly and emphatically as well.

VERITAS.

The Sunday school of the Church of Christ, in East Ridgeway, will hold a Sunday school concert in the First Christian church of East Ridgeway, on the evening of January 10th, 1884. An admission fee of 5c. will be charged for children between the ages of 6 and 12 years; 10c. admission will be charged for all persons over 12 years old. Tickets will be on sale in the basement of the church between the hours of 6 and 7½ p. m. of the date named for the concert. Doors to the audience room, in which the concert will be held, will be open at 7 p. m., at which will be stationed ticket receivers, to whom all persons will hand their tickets, who will thereupon be conducted to seats by the ushers. Concert exercises will commence at 7½ p. m., at which time the doors of admittance will be closed. In order to secure seats, all are advised to come early. Should anything prevent any one getting there till after the doors are closed, they will please give the alarm at the doors by three distinct raps, and if there is any room for them, they will be admitted; if not, they will return their tickets to the ticket agent and receive back their money.

GEO. GRIFTON, WM. HYVISON, } Concert Managers.

P. S.—The above named concert is the beginning of a series of entertainments that will be given at stated intervals by said Sunday school, to all of which a nominal fee of admittance will be charged, unless otherwise provided for. The money thus collected, to be expended (when a sufficient amount shall be procured) in a good Sunday school library and other much needed fixtures for successful Sunday school work. We trust, therefore, to have large attendance and liberal support at these entertainments, in all of which we will endeavor to give in return value received.

RIDGEWAY RUMBLINGS.

Leap Year.

Now or never, girls.

Miss Ella Jackson home from the Normal.

Miss Eva Shipman, of Richmond, Macomb Co., passed the holidays with friends here.

Profs. H. C, and E. A. Wilson were home during vacation. They are both hale and hearty and enjoy their school year very much.

A. E. Palmer and family, of Reading, Mich., came home for Christmas. That new boy is one of the finest.

David Coryell now has his new hardware store in full blast. Clark & Son turned over what stock they had in the hardware line, and so the new project is nicely on its feet, and will likely be a good investment.

The newly organized literary society holds its next regular meeting on Friday night, this week. A well arranged program will be presented before recess, and the capital punishment question will be debated afterwards.

A pleasant surprise—or what was to be one, but some one told,—was made to Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Clark last Monday evening. Between thirty and forty of their friends here took a sleigh ride down to Britton and dropped in upon them.

RIDGEWAY RACKET.

At the beginning of a new year, the time usually taken for changes for good or otherwise, another scribe makes a bow and thus says:

Something new in Ridgeway is a hardware store. David Coryell and Harry Smith have a new store pleasantly situated and well filled with goods generally found in that line. If courteous treatment and fair dealing will bring customers, they will get them. It is to be hoped they will receive the patronage they deserve.

Mr. Riggs, of Saline, has rented G. S. Boss's blacksmith shop and appears to be doing well.

Robert S. Houseman had two horses seriously injured by a vicious cow.

The masked tea party, given by the ladies social of the M. E. church, on Friday evening last, under the management of the executive officers, was an enjoyable affair and a financial success. If some of the chronic objectors to such gatherings had been there, they would have seen that it was their imagination that so largely painted supposed faults, warped and biased their judgment. If some of the minor matters were not just perfection, as a whole it was not so very very wrong, as we all wear masks. One thing that social did show, that negro minstrels will draw a crowded audience, while an earnest and eloquent appeal for an attendance but for a single time, during the week of prayer, will result in rows of empty seats. True it is, 'tis a pity 'tis true.

Several former residents of Ridgeway were here during the holidays. To judge by their faces, they received the hearty welcome Ridgeway people know so well how to extend.

SCRIBE.

MACON MUSINGS.

In the year which has just been consigned to history and to oblivion we recognize a checkered one,—happiness and sorrow, sorrow and happiness intermingled. While prosperity and happiness attend us, sorrow came into our midst, reminding us that this life has its ills as well as its blessings. Death entered our neighborhood and removed a few of our most honored citizens, the memory of whom still clings to us, and ever will, like the ivy to the crumbling wall. We must say, however, in reviewing the past year that we have abundant reasons to rejoice, from which fact we take renewed courage to meet the responsibilities of the year confronting us.

Dec. 26th, the Rev. J. A. De Spelder started for his new field of labor, at Orange City, Iowa. His departure deprives the Reformed church of a most efficient pastor and the community of an exemplary member of society.

Judge Howell spent last Sunday in the place visiting his aged father and other relatives.

Dr. Arthur Oven, of Ann Arbor, visited his brother, John Oven, the fore part of this week. He returned to his duties at the University, Jan. 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Coller left Dec. 31, for a visit among friends and relatives in different parts of the State.—They will be gone about two weeks.

On account of the sickness of the pastor, Mr. Kerridge, no services have been held at the M. E. church for a few Sundays past. We are glad to say, however, that Mr. Kerridge is convalescent, and will probably occupy his pulpit again next Sunday.

MACON MUSIC.

John and Charley Curry are visiting their old home and friends in Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Spencer and Hebron Camburn are spending a few weeks with their sister at Douglas, Allegan Co.

Owing to the stormy weather with which we were favored for two successive Sundays the concert intended for Christmas has been postponed indefinitely.

Mrs. Thomas Biddle proved to be the champion speller at the spelling match, and won the coveted glass set.

The anniversary of the temperance crusade was observed by appropriate exercises, wholly of home talent.

Leap year, with all its privileges, has arrived, and is to be duly initiated by the younger class of Maconites by an oyster supper.

SPRINGVILLE SNUFF.

T. H. Mosher received another load of repairs for his mill last Saturday.

Miss Libbie Richardson has departed for the east with her cousin Clarence; their first stopping point was Sodus, York state.

Miss Mary Boocher is expected home this week.

Ira Hayes returned home last Thursday.

Some weeks ago, W. H. Smith, while trying to get a horse up that was cast in a stall, had his leg caught and quite severely injured, and declared it was broken, but being able to stand upon it and hobble around, his declaration was only laughed at, until the other day Dr. Case made an examination and pronounced the small bone of the leg below the knee broken. William thinks he had that as straight as he had the location of the depot.

John Bennett is very sick from the effects of the measles.

Cambridge, we fear, will soon become noted for suicides. Last week Mr. Francis Skinner put an end to his troubles by taking a dose of strychnine, while now we hear of one trying to accomplish the same object by jumping into cisterns, butting his head against the wall, etc.

The ninth annual meeting of the Michigan sportsmen's association will be held in Jackson, Tuesday, January 8th, 1884, commencing at 7:30 p. m. The meeting will convene in the council chamber, and the Hurd house will be headquarters. The M. C. R. R. and branches will carry delegates for one and one-third the regular fare, and other roads will probably do the same. Parties intending to attend should notify their railroad agent, so that the proper tickets may be procured. Each club, a member of the association, is entitled to send five delegates, and it is earnestly requested that there be a good attendance.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to express our gratitude to our many friends for their kind aid and sympathy during the late affliction through which we have been called to pass.

DAVID HARRISON AND FAMILY.

My Little Mistakes.

BY J. FITZGERALD MOLLOY.

The Phelans had a baby. Tom sent me a telegram announcing what he called the happy event, for I had known him since we were both at school, where he was generally called the Fat Boy, and many of the fellows entertained the rooted idea the he was a lineal descendant of the "fat boy" whom Charles Dickens has immortalized in Pickwick.

Tom Phelan was not only a fat boy, but, in accordance with the promise of his youth, he became a fat young man, with a mellow face like an over-ripe pear, and an amply proportioned person. Indeed, it was because of that genial, happy look and general air of comfort which his fatness imparted, that little May O'Rourke fell in love with, and finally married, him. For this sufficient reason Tom thought her the wisest woman of her generation, and quite believed in his inner consciousness that Nature had endowed her with rare and admirable taste.

Twelve months ago I had acted as Tom's best man; he had asked me to stand by him to the last, and I did. I saw him through the painful ceremony [illegible] in the regular way by all the circle's female friends, including eight charming bridesmaids, not one of whom, during the time, vouchsafed me a glance; for by comparison with the bridegroom I was an uninteresting man who had not the heart, the courage, the good taste or sense to take any woman for better or for worse; therefore, in the presence of this noble specimen of humanity, the bridegroom, I was insignificant.

If ever a man was uncomfortable in his life, Tom Phelan was, under the uninterrupted gaze of these fair creatures and of the crowds of the wife's relations assembled for the occasion in all their strength and glory, inside the walls of St. Bride's Church, Dublin.

At the breakfast some one made a long speech, in which so many magnificent things were said with so much grandiloquence that the bride began to weep, and poor Tom, who thought it his duty to harmonize in all things with the feelings of his new-made wife, was about to allow himself to be overcome and shed a few tears also, when he caught the stern and reproachful glance of his new-made mother-in-law, and that one glance decided the matter, and stayed his emotion immediately.

I saw him through it all, poor fellow, as I promised. I was true to my trust, and at the last moment, whilst the carriage which was to convey him and his bride away waited, I extracted a few grains of rice which had lodged themselves in his left eye, and picked up his best hat, which had been rudely knocked off his head by the blow of an old slipper from some friendly hand.

So, as I commenced by stating, they had now a baby, and they made as much fuss and excitement over the fact as if it were the most wonderful, instead of the most natural, thing in life. The day after receiving the telegram I had a letter from Tom, in which he described the infant as the finest baby his sisters, his cousins, and his aunts—and, collectively, their names are legion—had ever seen. It was a boy, and nothing would please him but that I should, a fortnight after the receipt of his letter, cross the channel and stand god-father to his first-born.

No doubt he considered he paid me a compliment, for he seemed to lay great stress on the fact of my being requested to stand in such a position to the "first-born," and gave me to understand the honor would not be so great if I were, in the coming time, asked to hold the same position towards other little types of humanity that, in the course of years, he may expected—nay, hoped—would present themselves.

I was not doing anything to oblige and aid a friend like Tom Phelan, even to getting seasick, and cross over to Kingstown suffering that malady in all its horrors, during which time I did not exactly guess this young Phelan on whose account I had undertaken the journey.

My old friend was waiting for me on the pier, his round face fairly beaming with happiness and brimming over with smiles. I felt at that moment that he must be a complete contrast to myself, for mal de mer always made me look the color of an antique lemon, and certainly did not improve my temper.

"Well, my boy," he said, seizing my hand, and peering [illegible] as if he had mistaken it for a portmanteau, "how are [illegible]"

"Very [illegible] We have had a rough night," I replied, as briefly as I could, whilst I watched two porters disputing for the possession of my portmanteau.

I suppose Tom saw that I was yet suffering from the effects of my voyage and was somewhat out of sorts, for he did not speak to me for some time. When he did it was in a tone of reproach.

"Fitz, you have not asked me how he is," he said.

"He!—whom?" I inquired, rather mystified.

"Your little godson."

"Oh, of course; how stupid I am! I beg your pardon, my dear fellow; how is he? All right, I hope?" ("If the fond parent had only heard my fervent prayers for his heir a few hours ago!" I thought to myself, feeling for the first time in my life a bit of a hypocrite.)

"He is a wonderful big infant, they tell me," said the affectionate parent, with an air of pride and some assumption of indifference.

"Is he?" I asked, with what I hoped was a tone expressive of interest.

Tom was so good natured that he had already forgiven me my want of thought.

"When is it to be, Tom?" I said presently.

"What?" he asked.

"The christening, of course," said I.

"Wednesday," he answered; "and we have decided to leave the selection of his name to you."

"My dear fellow, that is too much responsibility; if I gave the boy a name he disliked, like Christopher or Tobias, or Alonzo or Simon, he would never forgive me when he grew up, but would hate me to the day of his death."

"What nonsense you talk, Fitz! You can talk it over with May, and come to some arrangement."

"One question," said I, [illegible] as we were jumping in our walk towards the brougham that was to carry us to Tom's comfortable home; "shall I have to hold him at the font?"

"Yes—that is, no; upon my life I can't say. Why?"

"Because I have never held one before, and I am sure I should let it fall. I have never seen one having no married relatives or friends—except in a bus or in a perambulator in the streets; and I am rather afraid of them—I am, upon my life. I think they are all bad-tempered and bad-mannered, and have a common habit of working themselves into frightful passions about nothing in particular, just to plague people and make them uncomfortable."

For answer my friend shook his fat sides with laughter, and, when he could speak, said,

"You talk like a bachelor, Fitz."

"You forget, I have not had twelve months' experience of matrimony," I said, hitting him home.

He only laughed all the more at this, my reply seemed to tickle his fancy.

"It would be the best thing in life for you if you had; it would make you a happy man," he said, when he recovered himself. "Take my word for it, you don't know what comfort is till you're married."

"I am not very miserable in my present state of blessed bachelorhood, and in no hurry to make a change," said I.

"Then you are wrong, my boy. Do you know why I sent for you?" he said, looking at me confidently, and, as I thought afterwards, speculatively.

"To stand godfather to your son, of course."

"That is one reason, but I have another. May and I have had a plot. I'm afraid I am spoiling sport by telling you, but I'm hanged if I can hold my tongue."

"I am the victim of your plot, I suppose?" I inquired mildly.

"You are, my boy. We want to make you as happy as ourselves. We married girls, she is just the one to make you as happy as you could be."

"Upon my life, you are awfully good, both of you, but I have no inclination to join the list of martyrs—I mean to—to enter into the holy bonds of matrimony."

"We will say no more about her until you see her."

"When will that be?" I asked, feeling rather curious to see the woman whom my friends had decided was to make me a happy man.

"On Wednesday morning; she is to be one of the godmothers."

There was much ado about that christening. The cake was of a gigantic size, as if ordered with a merciful consideration for the healthy appetites of the sisters, cousins and aunts of Tom Phelan and wife. The previous night a dinner was given to celebrate the event more fitly. I was dressed early, and went down to the drawing-room, where Tom was talking to Mrs. McFum, a little woman with a twinkle in her eyes and a juvenile cap on her head, who prided herself on being connected with the family of the great MacFums, to whom Brian Boru himself was but an upstart, and the lords of Kildare and Leinster but "mushrooms, my dear, if it comes to that," as she used to say with a sense of pride expressed by a sudden backward jerk of her head that made the lace of her cap flutter airily and the roses tremble from exaltation, in more senses than one, on their wire stems. When my host had introduced me, and she had nodded her juvenile cap in recognition of my best bow, she went on with the narrative of what her dear friend Lady Ariadne had said to her when she was last in London, which Tom had interrupted for the purpose of introducing me.

I saw that he was impatient to get away, but there was no use in his striving to stir from Mrs. MacFum just then, who started with a fresh anecdote of what Tom Moore had told her he had said to Lady Blessington when she sang "Believe Me if All," and so I was left to make acquaintance with the guests already arrived, all of whom were strangers to me.

"A charming day this has been," said a young lady, who evidently took pity on my forlorn condition.

"Charming—beautiful," I replied, looking at the speaker, who had the most wonderful gray-blue Irish eyes I had ever previously seen, which had now a merry look in them they strove in vain to conceal.

She gave a pleasant, soft, musical laugh when I had spoken.

"You forget it has been raining all day," she said, looking at me with a quizzing gaze.

"So it has," said I, remembering the fact and laughing with her at my words; all the while I felt myself blushing.

"I only spoke of the weather to break the conversational ice," she said.

"You are merciful," I answered, wondering if she was laughing at me.

"Am I? I saw you were a stranger to us, and Mr. Phelan is being instructed in the pedigree of the MacFums, I suppose, and cannot get away for a quarter of an hour to introduce you," she said, with a friendliness that set me at my ease at once.

"Will you allow me to do myself that pleasure?"

"I think I can spare you the trouble," she replied, in the most musical of voices. "You have come from London to stand godfather to baby?"

"I have," I answered, wondering how she knew, and watching with pleasure the arch look that suddenly darted into her wonderful eyes. I began to think that she had one of the most interesting faces I had ever seen; her lips were red and saucy, and were, I thought just then, made to kiss and be kissed.

"Shall I point you out the godmother," she asked, watching my face as she spoke.

"No—that is, yes," I replied, thinking of what Tom had told me, and just a little curious to see his beau ideal of my future wife.

"There she is, at the other side of the room, in a gray silk dress, talking to that stout little man with the brown wig."

"Do you mean——"

"Yes, that tall angular lady, with the little bunch of curls at each side of her face. She has been a beauty in her day, and has just come in for a thousand a year, since which time she has had six proposals of marriage and has stood godmother to a hundred and twenty-three children. Before she came in for that legacy no one ever noticed her; and though her manners have not changed in the least, the world has only now suddenly discovered that she is one of the most amiable women living. Now, I always knew that fact, and stated it openly, though no one would believe it."

Whilst my new friend spoke I felt that she was watching my face keenly. This, then, I said to myself, was the woman whom Tom Phelan had assured me would make me a happy man. The lady was at least twenty years older than I was; but any disparity in that way Tom [illegible] would be made up to me by the fact of my future wife possessing a thousand a year. I began to think that my friend's character had undergone a change. I had always considered him far from mercenary; but probably the cares and expenses of his new life had made him regard money in a different light from what he had done in the old days; and he thought he would do me a friendly turn by marrying me to a woman old enough to be my mother, because of her wealth. I was sorry for Tom Phelan. Marriage, I thought, had not raised the tone of his mind. I looked over at him then, and saw a cheerful look on his round pleasant face, as if something had occurred that made him very happy. Probably, I said mentally, it is one of Mrs. MacFum's tales that makes this most good-tempered of men delighted. When next I looked at my neighbor, she too, I thought, had a merry expression in her eyes, that seemed to spring from a look she exchanged with Tom Phelan.

"So that lady is to be baby's godmother?" I said presently, directing my gaze to the lady in gray silk, with the little bunch of curls confined by tortoiseshell combs, edged with a row of pearls, at each side of her thin pale face.

"Yes. You must let me introduce you. Indeed, you must know her. She is one of the best and kindest of women."

I began to wonder if my new friend was in the plot, too, and if she were engaged by Tom and Mrs. Tom to lend her assistance towards the desired end of marrying me to this spinster. I felt as if I should like to get up and run away out of the house and out of the toils that these good people evidently sought to ensnare me in; but the voice of this girl with the gray-blue eyes, that now sparkled with humor, and anon melted into tenderness, almost in the same minute, as only Irish eyes can, held me a prisoner. I was unwilling to move from her side.

"[illegible] did not tell me her name," she told me all about herself in a frank, naive manner, that completed the charm she held over me, and made me her faithful bond-slave from that hour to this day. Her father was in India, she said; she and her mother were living in Bray during his absence. She expected him home next year, when she feared they would leave dear old Ireland, and go on the Continent.

Then suddenly, in the midst of her confidential chat, she asked me once more to cross the room with her, and get introduced to the lady who was to be godmother to Tom Phelan's baby. Before I could answer she stood up, and waited for me to accompany her. Miss Fay was the name of the spinster, who was a mild, agreeable gentlewoman, with sad eyes and a gentle manner. When my new friend had introduced me she suddenly disappeared. Soon after, some people who came in engaged Miss Fay's attention, and I was left alone.

Then Tom Phelan came up to me, beaming all over with smiles.

"You have not lost much time in making her acquaintance, Fitz, old boy."

"No," I answered dryly, understanding what he meant.

"What do you think of her?"

He looked at me with his head on one side and a broad smile on his face.

"Think of her? She is very amiable." This in a stiff tone.

"You will get on famously together. She is the woman to make you happy, old man." This with an air of patronage and superiority.

"You are very good," said I, humoring him, and thinking at the same time how changed he was.

"Now, Fitz, I have arranged that you shall take in Mrs. Carey to dinner. May will introduce you. I want to ask you to make yourself agreeable to her; not too agreeable, you know, as you can do sometimes to women, for she has a husband, though he is in India. A safe distance, my boy."

"All right," I said.

Tom hurried away, and just then dinner was announced, the host giving his arm to Mrs. MacFum. The hostess pointed out a lady to me, whom I was to take down to the dining-room, and in a few minutes we were comfortably seated. My new friend sat opposite to me. I could see her bright face smiling across the flowers. Her eyes at once dazzled and fascinated me, and her voice made my heart flutter in an unaccustomed way. The lady whom I had taken down, and who now sat beside me, was a stout, solemn-faced woman, arrayed in black velvet, who spoke very little. I was glad of this latter fact; for I could not, I felt, keep up a conversation. I was listening to the voice of my new friend, who talked well and wittily with her neighbors. Occasionally she directed an old sentence to me across the flowers.

When dessert was over, my neighbor in black velvet, with whom Tom Phelan had unnecessarily warned me not to flirt because of her having a husband in India, took up her fan and commenced to wave it gently to and fro.

"How hot it is!" she said to me, in a voice as subdued as if she spoke in a church.

"Yes," I replied, "the night is close, but we should not complain. If we had to bear the heat that your husband is at present enduring—"

Suddenly something went against my new friend's breath, then every one at my end of the table became all at once silent, and I saw that though some of them seemed grave enough, others strove to keep themselves from laughing outright. Tom Phelan, after a moment's keen struggle, strove to look as if nothing in particular had happened. What was the cause of all this I had not the slightest idea, but that something wrong had occurred there was no doubt.

Mrs. Phelan at this instant caught Mrs. MacFum's eye, and rose from the table; the other ladies followed. My neighbor, whom I had taken down, was the last to rise, and as she did so gave me a withering look, which I long remembered.

When the door was safely closed, Tom Phelan threw himself back in his chair and laughed until the tears rolled down his fat cheeks; the other men joined him, looking at me the while.

"What is the joke?" I asked; "I am out in the cold."

"My dear fellow, Mrs. Carey, who sat next you is a widow."

In a moment I saw the blunder I had made; I had taken down the wrong woman to dinner.

An hour afterwards I had completely forgotten my little mistake for by some chance I found myself by the side of my new friend, who was seated at the piano singing "Oft in the Stilly Night." I turned the leaves of the music, bending over her until I touched her once or twice. Her voice was soft and sweet; it stirred me in a way I had never before experienced, and made me strangely happy and sad almost in the minute. When she had finished singing, and whilst I was yet bending over her, on pretence of closing the book, our eyes met for a second; hers grew soft and liquid, and seemed to melt into a world of [illegible]. My heart gave a great throb, and then I knew far better than all the words could say that we two had fallen in love.

When a man comes to make such a discovery, a sense of delicious happiness fills him, and makes all the world seem brighter than words, which are poor things at best—can tell. Three hours ago, and I had never met this woman; then fate—accident—chance—call it by what name you will, had flung us together, and a new light took in her eyes, some stray tone in her voice, the touch of her hand, had woven a charm for me that at once mocked at and set to flight my ideas of happy bachelorhood, that revealed to me feelings and hopes which I had never known before, and which made me feel that come weal or woe, this was she who must walk by my side all the days of my life. Do the gods sport with men as in the olden days? I asked myself.

An hour after she had sung that song, by some strange accident we found ourselves in the long garden that runs at the back of Tom's house. It was a glorious night in June, the air was cool and balmy, the smell of the flowers delightful, a young moon was in the cloudless sky.

"Well, how do you like Miss Fay?" the girl who had taken my heart captive, asked, looking at me from under her dark lashes.

"Very much, but—but—may I say it?"

My heart was terribly anxious to speak.

"What?" she asked suddenly; but I noticed her eyes did not meet mine.

"I like some one else much better."

I could hardly get the words out.

"Probably you do—some one in London?"

"No, some one in Ireland; some one who is standing beside me now."

There was silence in the garden after I had spoken. She did not reply or laugh, but raised her eyes and looked at me once; then I saw the color coming into her cheeks.

"I think I must go in now," she said presently, "or they will miss me, if they want me to sing."

"Give me a flower before you go?" I pleaded, not daring to say more.

She stooped down, plucked a red rose, just touched her lips with it, and handed it to me. When I looked at her there was the merry light in her eyes I had seen there when she first spoke to me that evening. In another second she turned and ran towards the house.

I followed slowly. Just as I arrived at the glass doors of the dining-room that communicated with the garden, I came suddenly face to face with Tom Phelan.

"Well, Fitz, what are you doing out here?" he said, with a smile that I was ill-natured enough to set down in my mind as a grin. He spoke as if he intended to express surprise, but failed.

"Doing? Looking at the moon," I replied, staring up, as I spoke, into the Summer sky.

"Don't you think a pair of gray eyes better worth looking at?" he asked, with a merry twinkle in his own.

"Perhaps," I answered calmly.

"I say, old man, you have behaved capitally—better than I expected."

There was a sudden change in his voice that struck me.

"How?"

"You have fallen in love—don't deny it—with the girl who will make you a happy man. You have done just as I wished, old fellow."

He placed his arm around my shoulders, as he had often done when we were boys at school.

"You make a mistake there, Tom; I have no desire to sell myself for a thousand a year."

"What do you mean?" he asked; with surprise shining in his good-natured face.

"I have no desire to marry the woman you were good enough to select for me—Miss Fay."

Tom burst out laughing, this time holding his fat sides as if he feared he should explode.

"What is the matter?" I asked, when he had almost done.

"You will be the death of me, Fitz, if you go on making these little mistakes."

"I don't understand you," I said.

"You cunning dog! I saw you both out here two minutes ago; and you have fallen in love with her, like a sensible man, just as I wanted you to do."

"My dear fellow, you said it was the boy's godmother you had selected for me; and that is Miss Fay."

"Miss Fay is one of them, Kitty Berfort is the other;" and to emphasize his words, Tom Phelan struck me on the shoulder with a blow that made me stagger.

"You are a brick," I said to him, seizing his hand with enthusiasm.

Poor good-natured Tom Phelan! His eyes grew dim just for a second, as he returned my friendly grasp.

"Tom," I said, "God bless your boy!"

I spoke in such a grave, impressive voice that the happy father burst out laughing in my face. This time I joined him heartily.

Before I left the Green Isle, Kitty Berfort and I became engaged. When her father came back from India, we were married, and at our wedding-breakfast Tom Phelan—who, by the way, had that week been presented with remarkably fine twins—told the story of my little mistakes.

A MARVELOUS STORY

TOLD IN TWO LETTERS.

FROM THE SON: "28 Cedar St., New York, Oct. 28, 1882.

"Gentlemen My father resides at Glover, Vt. He has been a great sufferer from Scrofula, and the inclosed letter will tell you what a marvelous effect has had in his case. I think his blood must have contained the humor for at least ten years; but it did not show, except in the form of a scrofulous sore on the leg, until about five years ago. From a few spots which appeared at that time, it gradually spread so as to cover his entire body. I assure you he was terribly afflicted, and an object of pity, when he began using your medicine. Now, there are few men of his age who enjoy as good health as he has. I could easily name fifty persons who would testify to the facts in his case.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Yours truly, W. M. PHILLIPS."

FROM THE FATHER: "It is both a pleasure and a duty for me to state to you the benefit I have derived from the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Six months ago I was completely covered with a terrible humor and scrofulous sores. The humor caused an incessant and intolerable itching, and the skin cracked so as to cause the blood to flow in many places whenever I moved. My sufferings were great, and my life a burden. I commenced the use of the SARSAPARILLA in April last, and have used it regularly since that time. My condition began to improve at once. The sores have all healed, and I feel perfectly well in every respect—being now able to do a good day's work, although 73 years of age. Many inquire what has wrought such a cure in my case, and I tell them, as I have here tried to tell you, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. Glover, Vt., Oct. 21, 1882. Yours gratefully,

HIRAM PHILLIPS."

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cures Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears the blood of all impurities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.

How Watch Cases are Made.

It is a fact not generally known that the James Boss' Gold Watch Cases really contain more pure gold than many "solid" gold cases. The demand for these watch cases has led to the manufacture of a very poor grade of solid gold watch cases—low in quality, and deficient in quantity. These cases are made from 4½ to 10 karats, and a 5 or 6 karat case is often sold for 12 or 14 karats. It is NOT economy to buy a watch case so poor in quality that it will soon lose its color, or one so soft that it will lose its shape and fail to shut tight, thus letting in dust and damaging the works, or one so thin that a slight blow will break the crystal, and perhaps the movement. It IS economy to buy a James Boss' Gold Watch Case, in which NONE of these things ever occur. This watch case is not an experiment—it has been made nearly thirty years.

HAZLETON, PA., Oct. 24, 1882.

I sold two James Boss' Gold Watch Cases thirty years ago, when they first came out, and they are in good condition yet. One of them is carried by a carpenter, Mr. L. W. Drake, of Hazleton, and only shows the wear in one or two places; the other by Mr. Bowman, of Cunningham, Pa.; and I can produce one or both of these cases at any time.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

Is designed to meet the wants of a large portion of our people who are either too poor to employ a physician, or are too far removed to easily call one, and a still larger class who are not sick enough to require medical advice, and yet are out of sorts and need a medicine to build them up, give them an appetite, purify their blood, and oil up the machinery of their bodies so it will do its duty willingly. No other article takes hold of the system and hits exactly the spot like

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

It works like magic, reaching every part of the human body through the blood, giving all renewed life and energy.

My friend, you need not take our word. Ask your neighbor, who has just taken our bottle. He will tell you that "It's the best dollar I ever invested."

LEBANON, N. H., Feb. 19, 1879.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO.: Dear Sirs—Although greatly prejudiced against patent medicines in general, I was induced, from the excellent reports I had heard of your Sarsaparilla, to try a bottle, last December, for dyspepsia and general prostration, and I have received very gratifying results from its use. I am now using the second bottle, and consider it a very valuable remedy for indigestion and its attendant troubles.

Yours truly,
F. C. CHURCHILL.
(Firm of Carter & Churchill.)

FITS A Leading London Physician establishes an Office in New York for the Cure of EPILEPTIC FITS. From Am. Journal of Medicine.

Dr. Ab. Meserole (late of London), who makes a specialty of Epilepsy, has without doubt treated and cured more cases than any other living physician. His success has simply been astonishing; we have heard of cases of over 20 years' standing successfully cured by him. He has published a work on this disease, which he sends with a large bottle of his wonderful cure free to any sufferer who may send their express and P. O. Address. We advise any one wishing a cure to address

Carlotta.

According to Belgian papers the health of ex-Empress Carlotta, widow of Maximilian, has so much improved within the last five months that her physicians entertain hopes of her recovery. The ex-Empress is now in her forty-third year, but looks much older, her hair being very gray. She has become thin and wrinkled, but her eyes still retain their old animated expression. The King and Queen of the Belgians often visit her at the castle of Bouchonte, where she resides.

The ex-Empress can not afford to recover. She is happy as she is, and a restoration of her memory would bring her the keenest regret. She is still, in her own eyes, the wife of the fair young man who was shot to death by Mexicans shortly [illegible] to the termination of [illegible] war, and still the Empress of Mexico. She went to Paris to beg Louis Napoleon, who was the master of Maximilian in the effort to convert Mexico into an Empire, to save her husband and the Empire, so called; but his Majesty had just received word from Mr. Seward to the effect that he must get out of Mexico, and he felt he must leave the well-meaning and chivalrous young Austrian to his fate. Carlotta was refused an audience, and that was the last accurate intelligence that ever came to her weary brain. She never knew how her husband was shot. She does not know to-day that the Mexican Empire was a failure. The paper grandeur over which she presided has faded away, but she thinks herself as much an Empress as she was when it existed. The court which recognized her as its Queen has been scattered to the four winds, and most of the men and women who composed it are dead; but the Queen is the Queen still, with her King, her companions, and her servants about her. She reaches out her hands to grasp that of her imaginary glory which is palpable, and the fingers fold themselves on the rose leaves within the palm; but she knows not the difference and she knows neither disappointment nor grief. It is a charmed life, and it would be a pity to awake it to the bitterness which it has so happily escaped; to the knowledge that the King is dead, the paper house has been in ruins a quarter of a century, the French Empire has followed the fate of the one that existed for a few days in Mexico, and the Emperor who wrought the ruin has himself passed on, leaving a childless widow more forlorn than herself.

"Poor Carlotta!" exclaimed Maximilian as he faced the soldiers who a second thereafter shot him. His sympathy was wasted, for she has been happier during all these years than perhaps any of the brilliant court that came up so suddenly and so suddenly passed away.—N. Y. Graphic.

History of an Oak-Table.

A handsome oak-table, elegantly carved, stands in the parlor of an uptown house.

"How did it come into my possession?" said a gentleman who was writing at it to a reporter of the Sun. "Oh, oddly enough. It was given to me by a convict just released from the Connecticut State Prison at Wetherstield."

"He made it himself?" asked the visitor.

"Made it! Not he. But he stole the money that bought it. O, no. I am not a receiver of stolen goods. I will tell you the story.

"About thirteen years ago I rented a house from Warden Willard of the Connecticut State Prison, who was afterward murdered by the convict Wilson. The prisoners used to be hired out to farmers, and brought back to their cells at night, and many of them worked on the roads. Among the latter was a large, powerful, full-blooded negro, who was serving a ten years' term for robbery. I made his acquaintance, and often prevailed on the keepers to allow him to pass an hour in my house, where both I and my family grew to regard him as a quiet, inoffensive fellow, who had gone astray once, but would probably lead an honest life after his liberation. At last he took me into his confidence in the most astonishing way. He said the money he had stolen had never been recovered by the owners. He had turned it all into cash and buried it. He assured me that it amounted to fifteen thousand dollars, and he offered to share it equally with me if I would dig it up and keep it until he came out of prison. Of course I refused, and urged him to give up the money or tell me where it was buried. He declined to do either, and thereafter he lost no opportunity to renew his proposal. At last he was liberated, and left the prison a few days after Warden Willard was murdered. Three months later a negro who attracted the attention of half Wethersfield by the splendor of his dress called at my house. It was my old friend, the convict.

"'So you have dug up the plunder?' I said.

"His face assumed a vacant expression. 'What plunder yon 'lude to sah?' he asked.

"'Why, the money you stole and buried.'

"'Case of 'staken 'dentity, sah,' he said, with dignity. 'I never stole no money. Never buried none. A lyin' verdict, sah, sent me to prison.'

"I never saw him again; but a week later an express wagon stopped at the door, and the driver delivered this table and a small parcel containing a handsome set of jewelry for each of my daughters. With them was an envelope containing a sheet of paper, on which were the words: 'Well, yes, boss. Dug 'em all up.'"—N. Y. Sun.

It has cured thousands, and will cure you, for, by purifying the blood and strengthening every weak portion of the body, it removes every symptom of distress.

Romance in Real Life.

The beautiful and highly-cultivated daughter of one of the proud old Roman nobles, the Duke of Gallese, was introduced to the Italian poet, Signor D'Annunzio. Her kinsfolk never dreamed that a lady of such great expectations and high birth could run any risk by an intimate acquaintance with a man risen from the lower ranks. The two walked and chatted together, but, while the young lady's friends supposed that she was talking of intellectual matters, it turned out that the conversation of the interesting couple turned in a very different direction. The Duke learned, to his horror and anger, that his daughter had dared to betroth herself to the poet. As a matter of course, he refused to give his sanction to their marriage, whereupon the lovers took the train to Florence, where they were made man and wife. This last step made the Duke so indignant that he had a legal document drawn up by which he disinherited his daughter; but the father and the man afterwards so far overcame the aristocrat in him that he settled upon her for life a yearly income of 6,000 lire. The story has since obtained an almost tragical completeness by the separation of the Duke from his own wife. He accused her of having secretly favored the cause of D'Annunzio, and of allowing the lovers to hold interviews after the father had prohibited all further intercourse between the two. He has consequently broken up his household in Rome, made a settlement upon his Duchess and declared that he will henceforth live and die as if he had neither wife nor child. —London Echo.

Intelligent people have quit taking bitters and mineral poisons, have quit doctoring kidneys and liver, nerves and brain, have quit using alcoholic poisons and narcotic drugs, have quit poisoning their system with quack nostrums, and keep themselves and families in perfect health by occasionally using the only perfect blood purifier and true strengthener of weak portions of the body, known far and wide as Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. TECUMSEH, MICH., JAN. 1, 1884.

Winter must have gone into winter quarters. He hasn't been heard from since Christmas.

Shall our war taxation be continued in time of peace? This is one of the chief political questions of the near future.

In the list of Presidential possibilities the gallant Gen. Hancock should not be overlooked. He could be elected next time.

The surplus in Uncle Sam's coffers on Jan. 1st, was $142,000,000, and the liabilities about $[illegible], leaving a net balance of $[illegible] to begin the New Year with.

Next summer's campaign will be a lively one. The tariff question is looming into prominence and will not down. The people intend to say something on that subject.

The chandelier is coming to the front again. The legislative circus at Columbus has opened and the show bids fair to be a hot one until a United States Senator shall have been chosen.

Vanderbilt opposed the opening of the New York Art Loan on Sunday. He had religious scruples on the subject. It would be a serious injury to the Sunday excursion trains on his railroad.

Col. Eldridge is treated very well for a new member in the formation of committees. He has a place on Public Land Claims and the District of Columbia. The latter of which is becoming an important committee.

Leap year has come again. The numerous old bachelors about Tecumseh can now buy a few new collars, brush up their best coats, contract with some confectioner for a new supply of taffy and prepare for business.

The wasteful wedding is coming into fashion. At the conclusion of the ceremony the bride and groom pull a wish-bone, and the unlucky party who takes the short end is elected to get up in the morning and build the fire forever after.

The Prohibitionists of the State will meet in convention at Jackson on Jan. 9th, to formally organize a new political party. The Republican party had its origin at Jackson. The selection of that town is a favorable omen for the new movement.

Nast's latest cartoon in Harper's Weekly is a capital hit. It represents Santa Claus just emerged from the congressional chimney with "protection" in one hand and "free trade" in the other. The Democratic sock hangs at one end of the mantel and the Republican stocking at the other. Old Nick looks around bewildered and exclaims: "Blow me if I know which goes into which."

The reduction of taxation is the living issue to-day. The ordinary revenues for the last fiscal year were $300,000,000, the expenditures were $265,000,000 leaving a balance of $135,000,000. One hundred millions of this surplus could be safely done away with, and the people relieved of that much burden. A sufficient surplus would still remain to apply on the reduction of the public debt.

The Detroit Times observes that Talmage generally gets off a sensible sermon when he leaves religion alone. Preaching about politics the other Sunday, he said, that "the next candidate for the presidency will be the man who is the most successful in bewildering the public mind, so that Pennsylvania thinks he is in favor of a protective tariff and Kentucky thinks he is in favor of free trade." Blessed is he fog!

Speaker Carlisle has shown wise in in the selection of the House committees. He has placed himself above personal jealousy and made them for the business in hand. The two most important—Ways and Means and Appropriations—are admirably constituted. Morrison, Hurd and Hewitt will reform the tariff. Randall and Holman will lop off the excessive taxation now burdening the industries of the country. Carlisle starts out well.

THE OLD AND THE NEW.

The old year is dead. Its last hour has flown. The last requiem has been tolled over its tomb. Its sad and happy days, its joys and disappointments, its sunshine and shadows have all gone, never to return. Old Father Time has gathered them in, and 1883 has passed into the domain of history. How the years come and go! We can scarcely realize that three hundred and sixty-five days have flown since the Happy New Year of 1883 rolled in on its tide. Has it been a happy year? To some it has. To many it has been a season of sadness and disappointment. Disasters and casualties, fools and swindlers have abounded, the world and mankind seemed retrograd, hungry, hungry and penniless. Business men have gone down in bankruptcy, the young, the middle aged, the gray haired veteran have been summoned rather than reckoning the widows father the widowed mother, the betrothed maiden, the rejected lover, gazing with tearful eyes upon the pile of the old year, and sigh for better times to come. In the field of trade the year has been far from prosperous. No general financial panic has occurred to be sure, but failures have increased, mills and factories have closed, the shrinkage in stocks has been enormous, profits have been reduced, prudent merchants are curtailing their expenses, trade and business, commerce and manufactures are becoming more and more depressed, and the business outlook for '84 is far from reassuring. Yet we have abundant reasons for thankfulness and rejoicing. No bloody war has devastated our fair land. The bugle is silent, the roar of musketry is heard no more, the artillery is rusting upon the parapet, swords have become plow shares and spears have been turned into pruning hooks. The valleys of the great west have smiled under the sunshine and rain of heaven and have laughed fruitfulness. Still laborers are out of employment, tramps are increasing, crimes are multiplying, intemperance is growing and the burdensome taxation of a war tariff is still draining the pockets of the people.

But this is no time for mournful reflections. Let us not borrow trouble of the past but press onward to better endeavor in the future. The old blotted, dog eared pages of last year's book are filed and we cannot change them if we would. The unwritten book of 1884 lies before us and a fresh, clean leaf can now be turned. New resolves can be made, new plans adopted, new and better habits formed.

"Good resolutions are cheap," the grumbler says. "And what of a few sentimental self pledges, amount to? True, they are cheap, hence why not make them? Did any improvement ever result in any sphere of life except in a firm resolve to do, and accomplish that improvement? We may beat each the coveted goal, we may not realize our ambition, our feet may falter by the wayside, and our good resolves may come to naught; but in turning the table post of the new year, we should nevertheless resolve to strive for better things. Have friends proven false? Sound our own hearts and see whether the fault be not within ourselves. Have business reverses overtaken us? Study the causes, cut down the briars in the pathway and press on. Have sickness and adversity cast their shadows upon us? Get into the sunshine again and conquer the fates, whether they be friendly or no. Let us resolve to be faithful to our friends, attentive to our business, just and prompt in our deal, temperate in our habits, economical in our expenditures, and earnest in the performance of our religious obligations. These resolves, if sincerely made, will some of them be fruitful, and we shall be happier and better by reason of them, on the closing day of another year.

The new year may be the dawning of the best age the world has ever seen. The light of modern civilization is shedding its rays into the four corners of the earth. The people are shaking off old despotisms everywhere and the "rights of man" are becoming something more than a mere name. Old traditions and names are passing away. People are coming to know their political rights and to be fearless in maintaining them. Science is unveiling to a wondering world new mysteries every hour, and all the nations are struggling for an enlarged prosperity and an advanced civilization.

It shall be the aim of the HERALD in its less humble sphere, to keep pace with the march of progress. What ever makes for the public welfare, for private virtue, for successful individual life in the office, in the church and in the home, we shall favor; whatever makes against these things, we shall oppose. We speed the parting and welcome the coming guest, prepared to meet the duties of the hour as they may arise, to hope for the best and earnestly strive for its accomplishment. To all the friends and patrons of the HERALD we say, A happy New Year to you; may the sunshine of prosperity illumine your pathway, may you be wiser, happier, richer and better when the bells shall toll 1884 across the threshold from time into eternity.

WHAT THE NEWSPAPERS SAY.

The New York Sun gently touches up the Butler boom as follows:

"Gen. Butler says he shall not occupy his house in Washington next winter. He will go from the tutelar codfish to his own vine and fig tree in Lowell, and is innocent as the babe unborn of any booms or rumors of booms. And yet the wicked newspapers and cynics say that he has now a house in Washington, and say that he has now gone there to live in it. Is it true that he will not be there next winter? Is it true that he will not be there next winter, and perhaps some other winter, and perhaps never? We do not know, but we do know that he has a house in Washington. And we know that the Washington house is for sale, and we know that he has been heard to say that he would like to sell the house, that Mr. Arthur is now occupying for cash and thirty days."

The New York World shows the marvelous volume of passenger travel on the Elevated railroad.

"The cars on the Elevated railroad are now furnished with a printed placard which announces that 92,000,000 people travel annually over these lines in this city. Starting at this enormous figure it is there is probably no exaggeration in it. We are thus confronted with the fact that these roads in one year carry passengers equal to nearly twice the entire population of the United States and five times as many as are carried over the Pennsylvania Central and the New York Central. In twenty years the Elevated railroad will have carried a number equal to the entire population of the globe. As an aggregate of travel nothing like this has ever been shown before in railroading, and the magnitude of the business brings to mind the enormous risks incurred by the people collectively, and the equally enormous responsibility that attaches to the directors. That so few accidents have, comparatively speaking, occurred out of this enormous mass of living freight, is owing, we think, in a large measure to the quickness, adaptability and wide-awake character of the 92,000,000 passengers, and not to the forethought or consideration of the railway officers. The point made by the statistics is that the American people are remarkably able to take care of themselves under the most perilous circumstances."

The New York Independent points out the small practical difference between the various Protestant sects:

"The superficial differences between denominations are the burden of numerous stories, a few of which we gather, hoping that, if each one of them shall be old and stale to somebody, yet one or more of the lot will be new to each reader. The difference between "High Church" and "Low Church" was felicitously explained by the pastor of a flowing locality, who, when asked whether his was High or Low, responded that that depended entirely upon the tide. An English cottier distinguished them otherwise, however. When desired to prepare an entertainment he required to know whether they were High Church or Low Church; "because," said he, "if they are Low Church we must roll if they are High Church we dance." The difference between Old School and New School Presbyterians was described in quite as happy a manner by some one who said he believed it consisted in this: that the Old School stood up when it prayed, and the New School stood up when it sang. The difference between a Universalist and a Unitarian was wittily expressed by Starr King while still belonging to the former body: 'The Universalists believe that God is too good to damn men, while the Unitarians believe that they are too good to be damned.' The difference between a Methodist and a Baptist was set forth by the concluding remarks of a spirited discussion between two members of those denominations, when the Baptist remarked, 'I don't like you Methodists anyhow, for you have too much machinery about you,' to which the Methodist brother promptly retorted, 'I don't care if we have, we don't run it by water.'"

The Chicago News has these pertinent words on the present business depression and its causes. The manufacturers themselves are beginning to see that a mushroom growth of any business occasioned by artificial stimulation is not an unmixed blessing. The reaction is sure to come after a big spree:

"There is no blinking the fact that, as the close of the year approaches, the general trade situation of the country assumes a more gloomy aspect. All the manufactural industries—iron, wooden, cotton, leather, lumber—are more or less crippled. Those protected trades on which the country was to rely in an emergency, and which the government has been carrying, are actually those with which the country is most seriously overweighted. 'Overproduction' is now upon the lips of every manufacturer. He also adds: 'We must shut down our mills and discharge our hands. Only by so doing can we create a demand which is now lacking.' But these manufacturers do not see that this is a confession of the weakness of their whole system, as it is a well known doctrine of political economy that normal production begets consumption, and where this law does not hold good, there must be some special reason for the exception. The truth is our exorbitant tariff shuts us out from the markets of the world, while periodically and spasmodically expanding and contracting our home production, and also periodically throwing the country upon the excessive export of our agricultural products as a means of relief. This is shown in the enormous excess of our exports from 1876 to 1880, from the revival of imports in 1881, and from the tendency to increased exports in 1882-83, caused by the depression in our manufactures. Thus the logic of the trade situation is that the high tariff so stimulates manufactural production periodically that the only means of relief is excessive exports of those products which are not too high in price to sell abroad, these being of course agricultural. But the product of these exports when received again seeks an outlet in artificially stimulated manufactures only to again unnaturally increase them, and so the circle of overproduction and consequent depression is kept in constant motion."

PERSONAL AND LITERARY.

—A Bridgeport (Conn.) gentleman will pay for all the rejected poems he can find.

—Mrs. A. C. Ford, a sister of the famous Sam Patch, died at Peters burg, Va., recently.

—Senator Colquitt, of Georgia, and Congressman Milliken, of Maine, are said to resemble each other as closely as two brothers.

—David Pulsifer, who has been clerk in the Massachusetts Secretary of State's office for [illegible] years, recently died at Boston.

—Dr. Dio Lewis, of Lewis's Gymnasium, N. Y., is said to have retired from active practice, and to be now devoting his time to the study of the health question. He is a good physician.—Cor. Lancet.

—Ex-President Thomas Hill, of Harvard College, has edited an almanac in which the complaints have been made according to the new Eastern standard time, the first of the kind to be published.—Boston Herald.

—Mr. Bennett, the owner of the New York Herald, is said by persons who have seen him in Paris lately to have become "prematurely old." His hair is turning gray and he is as slow and uncertain in his movements as a snail.

—A Waterloo (N. Y.) girl was married to a young man who fell in love with her photograph, and the courting was done through the medium of correspondence. They met for the first time at their wedding.—Buffalo Express.

—Senor Soteldo, who turns up in Washington as the Minister from Venezuela, is the father of A. M. Soteldo, the young gentleman who lost his life while trying to regulate the editorial management of the Washington Republican from the outside.

—"What sort of a man is Uncle Remus?" I asked of a Georgia friend, writes a Washington correspondent. "Joel Chandler Harris," he replied, smiling, "He's a little, red-headed, freckle-faced farmer's boy from Putnam County. Just about as handsome as a tomat show. He's a good fellow, though, and bright, but indolent. Sort of a singed cat. He has been very well treated by the Atlanta Constitution people. They give him a good salary for writing an hour or two every day, in addition to a very nice house, which they gave him outright as a Christmas gift, I think. So he has plenty of time for literature and a pleasant place to write it in."—In a recent interview.

HUMOROUS.

—"There is danger in the electric wire," remarked the criminal when overtaken by a telegram.

—"Young farmer—Are you fond of toasts, Miss Gilpertson?" Miss Gilpertson—"Oh, really, Mr. Pawkes, if you mean that as a declaration, I must speak to mamma."—Texas Siftings.

—"The compliments often paid us," said Mrs. Jolly, "are not half, never three-fourths of women." The latter would have gone home and cried over all the slights.—Merchant's Herald.

—"Get out!" screamed a lady in a crowded horse car at a Market street crossing to her dog. "Get up, you go!" said the conductor. The dog was right.—Philadelphia Times.

—Down in New Jersey the grasshoppers are performing duty that those who go on hunting expeditions have to perform. A sportsman occurrence is for a sportsman to surround a single snipe and go through such ridiculous, though highly sportsmanlike, performances that the poor bird actually does laughing at them.—Lowell Courier.

—"I wish I was a star," he said, smiling at his own poetic fancy. "I would rather you were a comet," she said, in a dreamy tone that made his pulse quicken with hope. "And why?" he asked, with suppressed anxiety. "Oh," she replied, in a freezing tone, "if you were a comet you would only come 'round once in fifteen hundred years."—Detroit Free Press.

—"Wasn't Mr. Thornton mad that you went into his woods and cut all that birch bark?" asked a little girl whose brothers came from a wood belonging to a neighbor with their arms filled with great strips of the birch. "No," said the boys; "he saw us and never said a word." "Well," cried the little sister, triumphantly, "that's just it. He was so mad he wouldn't speak to you."—Harper's Bazar.

—A story is told of a Wequetequock man being brought to a Stonington doctor in an ox-cart, having been handled without gloves by a brother. While the doctor was dressing the wounds the man asked: "Do tor, if I die from the effects of this beating will they hang my brother?" "I'm afraid they will," replied the doctor." "Then let me die," said the Wequetequocker.—Norwich (Conn.) Bulletin.

—"Why, how are you, Gilpin?" exclaimed an erratic Austin man, trying to thrust his hand into the unwilling, clammy paw of the supposed acquaintance, "how you have changed! Never saw a man change so in my life." "My name is not Gilpin," said the stranger in a thirty-six-degrees-below-zero tone. "Heavens!" ejaculated the Austin man, "worse and worse! You have not only changed wonderfully in personal appearance, but have actually changed your name."—Texas Siftings.

Perfectly Dreadful.

"Oh, say, Chawley, dey was a chawming ewe-faw you chanced with at Mrs. Bullion's t'other eve."

"No, Hawy, she was not chawming; she is a vulgah ewe-faw."

"Wy, weally, you don't say so, Chawley."

"Yaas she asked me if I liked oysters and wums, and I told her that I had tried them in Paris, but I didn't like them as well as twied twogs. And then she larfed actually larfed. Just think of a society gyurl larfing!"

"Pwiffee dwedful, wasn't it?"

"Yes; and then she asked me if I know why Twedlie Dumpson was a fountain of honor, and when I said no she said it was because he was always having tonls."

"Oh, Chawley, how could you? Take me to a soda-fountain. I feel faint and need a stimulant."—Essex County (Mass.) Statesman.

Rheumatic SYRUP.

The Greatest Blood Purifier Known!

RHEUMATISM CURED.	SCROFULA CURED.	NEURALGIA CURED.
ROCHESTER, N.Y., Apr. 6, '83. Rheumatic Syrup Co.: Gents—I have been a great sufferer from Rheumatism for six years and hearing of the success of Rheumatic Syrup I concluded to give it a trial in my own case, and I cheerfully say that I have been greatly benefited by its use. I can walk with entire freedom from pain, and my general health is much improved. It is a splendid remedy for the blood and debilitated system. E. CHESTER PARK, M.D.	PORT BYRON, N.Y., Feb. 20, '82. Rheumatic Syrup Co.: I had been doctoring for three or four years with different physicians for scrofula, as some called it, but found no relief until I commenced taking your Syrup. After taking of a short time, to my surprise it began to help me. Continuing its use a few weeks, I found myself as well as ever. As a blood purifier I think it has no equal. MRS. WM. SUTANO.	FAIRPORT, N.Y., March 12, '83. Rheumatic Syrup Co.: Gents—Since November, 1882, I have been a constant sufferer from neuralgia, and have not known what it was to be free from pain until I commenced to use of Rheumatic Syrup. I have felt no pain since using the fifth bottle. I think it the best medy I have ever heard of for purifying the blood and for the cure of rheumatism and neuralgia. W. B. CHASE.

Longfellow said, "In the world a man must be either anvil or hammer." He was wrong, however. Lots of men are nothing but bellows.

The "job" of attending the poor of this township for the coming year has been let to Dr. H. W. Catlin. The "job" has fallen into good hands.

The venerable muskrat weather prophets, who have been predicting a mild and open winter, have gone into their holes, and drawn the holes in after 'em.

A copy of the Pictoria Annual issued by the Adrian Press is on our table. It is a very creditable piece of work and shows that the Press is up with the times.

The January number of the Baptist Items was issued Tuesday. It is the best number that has yet appeared. We are indebted to the Items for a column of interesting local matter.

I very much wish that the person who wrote me an anonymous letter this week would call at my office and have a confidential talk. The matter referred to is an important one and deserves immediate attention.

Is this the January thaw?

Read our club list on the 8th page.

How did the New Year open with you?

John R. Clark took his New Year's dinner at home.

Bert Tribou, of Detroit, passed his holiday week at home.

The winter term of the Tecumseh schools will open next Monday.

The state teachers' association held a very successful session at Lansing last week.

Mr. Will Kies, who has been sojourning some weeks in Colorado is rapidly improving his health.

The telephone office is being removed to rooms over Strong & McNair's clothing store.

M. P. Henry, of Palmyra, who formerly owned the A. P. Coddington farm, was in town last week.

Lots of men are happy around this vicinity on account of having new babies at their homes.

Misses Jennie Fraser and Manie Monaghan leave to day for Lake Linden, upper peninsula, to resume their school duties there next Monday. They are both much pleased with their situation there.

C. B. Pennock's store (east of the HERALD office) is well stocked with goods, and is fitted up in an attractive manner. His clerks are attentive and obliging, and he seems to be working up a good trade.

Dr. Stewart, J. Gilchrist and "Gus" Slayton are attending the annual meeting of the the Mich. Flooring and Handle Manufacturing Co., at Summit City, Grand Traverse County. They went over the M. & O. to Monteith.

Lyman Thorpe, of this village, has secured the agency for Eastern Michigan of the Union Parer and Corer, which is an excellent household utensil and will doubtless have an extensive sale. We hope and believe he has struck a good thing.

We have received from James Cook a pamphlet "The Industries of Lisbon," printed at Lisbon, Dakota. It gives a full discription of that growing city and of Ransom county. The population of the county is now 8,000, and it will probably be doubled in one year.

At the election of officers for the Presbyterian Sunday school, the following persons were chosen:

Superintendent—C. A. Slayton.
Assistant Supt—P. S. McKinnon.
Lady Assistant—Sena Drew.
Sec. & Treas.—Harry P. Spaulding.
Librarian—Will Hastings.

It is not what people eat, but what they digest, that makes them strong. It is not what they gain, but what they save that makes them rich. It is not what they read, but what they remember that makes them learned. It is not what they profess but what they practice that makes them righteous.

We acknowledge the receipt of a complimentary ticket to the Warner Observatory from H. H. Warner & Co., of Rochester, N. Y. It would give us pleasure to take a trip to Rochester and look through the big telescope, but we are taking subscriptions so rapidly now that it is impossible to leave home.

We have made arrangements to offer The Ohio Farmer of Cleveland, O., with the HERALD, both one year, for the low price of $2.50. The Ohio Farmer is a 16 page, 64 column paper, has been established thirty-six years, strictly first-class in every respect, and is one of the oldest, largest, most valuable, enterprising, and reliable agricultural weeklies in the country.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Tefft returned last week from Hamilton, N. Y., where they went to attend the funeral of Mrs. Tefft's father, Seth Bass, Esq. "Uncle Seth," as he was familiarly known, was with one exception the oldest settler in Hamilton, and was 87 years old at the time of his death. Silas W. Bass, a son of the deceased, returned with Mr. Tefft, and will remain here the balance of the winter.

Those in attendance at the Methodist church last Sunday had the benefit of a good smoking, whether they enjoyed it or not. In the repairs going on the smoke pipe of the new furnace had been disjointed where it runs through the west hot air pipe. Of course it sent its contents into the audience room above. It was so bad that the evening service was held in the lecture room. It is now readjusted, and no further trouble is anticipated.

The young ladies' missionary society of the Presbyterian church will celebrate its first anniversary at 7 o'clock on Sunday night in the church. A brief report of the society's operations for the year will be given. Mrs. E. B. Wood will also present a review of the woman's foreign missionary society of the church, which completed ten years of existence last April. The pastor will deliver an address appropriate to the occasion. A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend the service.

Miss Florence Shepard, who is teaching in the Grand Haven city schools, spent the holidays with her Tecumseh friends.

Regular meeting of Tecumseh Lodge, No. 69, F. & A. M., one week from to-morrow evening, Friday, Jan. 11th.

We issue a large extra edition of the HERALD this week, and send out several hundred sample copies. Persons who receive a copy are respectfully invited to subscribe.

Seth Green, the veteran fish culturist, suggests, as a plan for replenishing the lakes with white fish, that a convention of fishermen be called, who shall agree to use no smaller net than a two inch mesh, and provide for men whose duty it shall be to take the impregnated spawn from the fish and send it to the hatcheries. Should these ideas be adopted, with strict enforcement of rules, he thinks that in a few years the lakes would swarm with whitefish, with little danger of future extermination.

Last February Rev. Conley went to the assistance of the Jackson Baptist Church in a series of meetings with the understanding that Pastor Kirtley would come to our assistance in a like effort some time during the present year. Arrangements are now made for him to come Jan. 7th. Evangelistic singer, L. E. Hatch of Delavan, Wis., will also be here for a few days. Everybody who met him at the S. S. Institute Nov. 29th, will remember the enthusiasm of his singing. It was contagious. Everybody wanted to sing and almost everybody did sing.

The Kelly's Corners correspondent of the Brooklyn Exponent says: "On Thursday Uncle Bill Nixon, our former host and old time landlord of Tecumseh, made us a friendly visit.—Uncle Bill is one of the few grand old pioneers of Michigan's early days, still left. He help to build the Chicago turnpike in 1828, fought in the Blackhawk war, and is also a veteran of the Toledo war. It was to the inspiring strains of Uncle Bill's fife that the army under the command of General Brown, of Tecumseh, marched to Toledo to conquor or die. The prompt action of the government averted bloodshed, and Uncle Bill marched back to Tecumseh, where he has since remained one of its most respected citizens.

FLASHES BY C. T. LINE OPRS.

Now is the time for writing a four over the three in 1884.

B. J. Slater, operator of Fort Wayne Junction, was home over Sunday. He commenced studying telegraphy on the C. T. line about a year ago.

To Mr. and Mrs. William Witherell, of Franklin, a New Year's present of a bouncing nine pound girl.

John Carson, jr., is prospecting in Montcalm county.

Mrs. Benjamin Dove is visiting her parents, Mr. G. W. Stacy in Buffalo, N. Y.

Eddie Spaulding and sisters, of Franklin, spent New Years with their sister Mrs. L. M. Mangus.

Dr. North reports the barometer lower Wednesday morning than for the last two years.

Mr. John Severans, of Franklin, died last Monday. He was one of the pioneers of that town, leaving only two pioneers between Clinton and Evans Lake, Mr. John Smalley and Mr. Job Graves, to recite the tales of pioneer life.

D. E. Bowen met with a misfortune last Saturday. He started to take a load of hay to town, and when near Newburg, the load upset, throwing him violently to the ground, fracturing the left knee. This is the third time Mr. Bowen has been rendered helpless by accident.

FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY.

Not many wedded pairs are permitted to celebrate a fortieth anniversary of their wedding. We may esteem those highly favored whose married life covers a period of forty years, unless it be true, as some pessimistic people would have us believe, that their life is not worth the living, and that he is most fortunate who quits it early. Be this as it may, our esteemed townspeople, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ford, celebrated their fortieth anniversary on New Year's eve. And a pleasant time it seems to have been to them. Their friends gathered in force, completely filling up their comfortable home and passing the evening until a late hour in social intercourse. And best of all, they did not come empty-handed. They brought numerous presents with them, which we cannot describe. One deserves special mention. It is a memorial tablet, nicely framed, consisting of gilt letters on a dark ground work, appropriately worded in commemoration of their anniversary. It is the gift of their son in Iowa and his wife, who were not able to be present. Another nice gift was a china tea set, the gift of a number of persons together. Rev. R. S. Pardington sent a present and a letter of regret that he and wife were not able to be present. A bountiful collation was served to all present. The happy pair enter upon the last decade of the fifty years with prospects bright and many words of cheer from friends and relations.

BEAN'S TANNERY BURNED.

About half past seven o'clock this evening a fire broke out in O. W. Bean's tannery, and within an hour the entire building was in ruins. The fire originated in the dry kiln, and must have started after supper, for when the employees quit work at five o'clock, everything was all right. The alarm was promptly given and the fire department responded at once, but when the steamer arrived on the ground, it was too late to do any good. We understand there was about $3,000 worth of stock in the tannery, which will be a total loss as well as the building itself. There was a policy of insurance on the building of $2,000, but no insurance on the stock.

FROM THE BAPTIST ITEMS.

Happy New Year.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Mills Dec. 24th, 1883—a girl. All doing well.

The regular annual donation occurred on the 21st ult. Result, about $87.00.

The Point Chautauqua Class has about finished "Ancient Cities and Empires."

Quite a large number of our people took part in the "War Song" concert for the benefit of the High School piano fund.

At the last annual meeting of the Clinton Baptist Church, held Dec. 1st, Bro. J. K. Waldron was elected trustee for three years. He will make a good one.

Married, at the residence of J. W. Cook, Tecumseh, by Rev. C. E. Conley, Dec. 25th, 1883, Mr. C. B. Caswell of Milan, and Miss Ella Auton, of Macon, Mich.

At the annual meeting of the Tecumseh Baptist Church, held Dec. 25, J. Margeson and L. G. North were re-elected trustees for three years. The reports were of an unusually encouraging character.

A certain church committee do not propose to be called "The Sick and Poor Committee" any more, for since the Carman concert they are neither. In fact it has been suggested that they start a national bank.

Married Dec. 2d, by the pastor, at the parsonage, Mr. Adoniram F. A. Spencer of Battle Creek and Rosa A. Baxter of Fairfield. Also, on the 17th, of Dec., by the same, at the bride's residence in this village, Mr. Edward C. Rhodes of Pittsford and Mrs. Caroline Cole.

The Church Social for December was entertained on the 13th in the Chapel by Mrs. Bramble, Mrs. J. Benedict, Mrs J. Cook, Mrs. W. Merritt, Mrs. H. Sweet, Mrs. L. G. Lester and and Mrs. D. Garlinghouse. It was a great success and largely attended. We are not informed as to the receipts.

The return of the holidays is accompanied with the return of our young brethern from college. Everybody has been shaking hands with Brethern Bramble, Lester and Heck from Kalamazoo, and R. F. Taggart from the University. Our Kalamazoo delegation will be augmented by Miss Eva Daglish next term.

The Carman concert was an undreamed of success. The church was literally packed full; in fact people went away unable to get in—how many we have no means of knowing. The business manager, Mr. A. S. Carman, said it might be possible that they would favor us again next summer. Everybody sincerely hopes that they will do so. Their singing is rarely equaled.

At the December Covenant Meeting Mrs. J. Heck was elected to membership of the committee on sick and poor, in the place of Mrs. A. J. North, resigned. At the same meeting O. B. Finch tendered his resignation as Clerk of the Church. It was accepted to take effect Jan. 4th, 1884. Deacons J. Margeson and Clough and Bro. Bramble were appointed a committee to nominate a successor at next Covenant meeting.

The last monthly Missionary Concert was devoted to the consideration of Christian Education. The special topic under consideration was Kalamazoo Ladies' Hall Association. It was one of the most interesting meetings of the year. No one present will henceforth doubt that the Tecumseh Baptist Church has genuine interest in our college. Two brethren openly declared their intention to remember the institution in a substantial manner.

On the 15th ult. Bro. T. Mills met with a severe accident. He was in the woods loading wood, when by some means he so severely sprained his ankle he could neither stand nor walk. As a consequence he was obliged to lie upon the frozen ground with the snow falling upon him, in the hope that some one might come to his rescue. He lay in this condition for about three hours, when Bro. F. Brynn came into the same piece of timber, where attention he finally attracted by his outcries. When Bro. B. reached him, three of his toes were frozen and the sprained ankle was terribly swollen. He was immediately removed to his residence, where under skillful treatment and kind attention he is rapidly recovering.

The Deerfield ladies inaugurated leap year with a grand ball on the evening of the 1st inst.

Clinton News: One of J. S. Kies' hens made him a Christmas present of an egg weighing 4¼ oz. and having a circumference, 8¾ inches one way and 6¾ inches the other. Where is the hen that can show a better Christmas record than that?

Adrian Times: Messrs. Clint. Williams and A. O. Miller are contemplating putting on the road next season "Uncle Tom's Cabin," to be played under canvass and to travel by wagon. It seems as though there was a hat full of money in the scheme.

Hudson Gazette: D. P. Anthony, Esq., of Tecumseh, was in the city a few days this week in the interest of the St. Paul Self Binding Harvester he is now representing. He has engaged Messrs. Carpenter and Kellogg as Hudson agents for the machine.—Mr. Anthony is acting as general manager for the company in this vicinity.

Blissfield Advance: It is alleged that a large manufacturing establishment in this State will soon begin to make the Doan scrapers regardless of Mr. Doan's patent. The patent lawyers, so it is said, claim that Mr. D's patent involves no new principle that is patentable. Mr. Doan, on the other hand, says he will defend his patent against all infringements.

MORE MEDICAL ETHICS.

A few days since, a disciple of Æsculapius, residing in Tecumseh, a man of distinguished medical attainments, gentlemanly deportment and equable temper, stepped into a store on Chicago street upon an errand, and after transacting his business, stepped out, leaving his gloves on the counter. The proprietor found them and stowed them away between two show cases for safe-keeping. On the following day the doctor happened into the same store, when the proprietor accosted him thus: "I say, doctor, has anybody got the small-pox or diptheria? You left your gloves here yesterday in your hurry; you will find them between those two show cases." The doctor went where the gloves were, and—they were not there. Some shop-lifter had cabbaged them.

Thereupon arose a question in medical ethics, which the national code throws no light upon.

The doctor accused the proprietor with stealing his gloves, and he wanted pay for them. They were valuable gloves, imported from Canada, when the owner moved into the States fifteen years ago. He had used them to groom his horses and carry in wood with ever since. The left glove had received two new fingers during that time, and the right one had been repaired with a new thumb this very fall. Those gloves were purchased new the winter in which he did most of his sparking. He used them in the dissecting room to prevent contamination from the cadavers. The associations connected with those gloves, and the memories and patches and odors which clustered about them, made them dear to his heart.

"And then I declare,"
Said he, pulling his hair,
"I've no money to spare
To buy a new pair."

"A Tecumseh physician, who bids on the "job" of attending the township poor and fails to get the "job," has no money to fool away.

"I've three cases of measles and one case of whoopin' cough on hand now, but they're all down in the colored ward, and I've got to wait for my pay. This asinine custom of letting the "job" of medical attendance upon the poor is an outrage. I've hitched up old Bill and driven down to old Roper's three times a day for the past three weeks, and have had to furnish my own quinine and blue pills in the bargain.

"I am not aware that the national code has any provision touching the larceny of a respectable physician's esteemed buckskin gloves, but the legal code has. This offence, sir, shall never be condoned, and you can produce those gloves or shell out fifty cents to buy a new pair with, or I'll slap the law to you."

The proprietor respectfully declined to "shell out," and the storm that followed shook the plastering from the ceiling and cracked the show cases, while its echoes have been reverberating through this community ever since.

Several interesting queries suggest themselves in connection with this affair, which the national code certainly ought to provide for

1—Is it consistent with medical ethics for a physican to bring in wood with a pair of imported buckskin gloves?

2—Is it ethical for a doctor under any circumstances, to damn a storekeeper who steals his gloves?

3—When a reputable physician loses an old and valued pair of buckskin gloves, is it legal and proper for him to hot out the job of thrashing the thief?

4—Is it ethical for a physician to wear buckskin gloves when attending upon cases of measles and whoopin' cough among the colored population?

5—When a man steals a doctor's buckskin gloves, should he be dissected or hung, in a state in which capital punishment is abolished?

COUNTY CONDENSATIONS.

North Morenci has a flourishing dancing club.

More talk of enlarging the stage of the Clinton town hall.

Joel White, of Woodstock, will soon move back to Tennessee.

Morenci Observer: Dr. Wyman takes the cake in the way of official positions. He is W. M. of the Masons, N. G. of the Odd Fellows, P. W. of the Pythagorean, Commander of the R. A. M., Surgeon of the G. A. R., chairman of the Democratic township and district committees, justice of the peace, health officer of the village, physician to two life insurance companies, weighs 300 pounds, and wears a plug hat.

Morenci Observer: So striking is the general resemblance of Joe Ingood, Esq., of Medina, to Marcus Tutts, of Seneca, that almost daily and weekly for near twenty five years has he been addressed as Mr. Tutts and vice versa. So meeting here yesterday they concluded to have their photographs taken together, and had a right down jolly and social time over the matter. They are both prosperous and respected citizens.

Clinton News: The Masons celebrated St. John's day in their customary way, with a social and supper at their commodious rooms in the second story of the Town Hall. A pleasant company of Masons, their wives, children and friends, sat down to an elegant supper in the dining room at 8 o'clock, and after all had fully satisfied the demands of the inner man, Rev. St. John made a few very appropriate remarks and the evening was ended with social enjoyments.

Adrian Record: A singular sort of social convention, called by the participants, "The Old Maid's Conclave" took place yesterday afternoon in the south part of the city, near the conjunction of South Main and Beecher streets. The gathering numbered some fifteen maturish sort of ladies who have never known the intricacies of wedded life, and proved a very agreeable gathering. Several old bachelors were invited to be present as spectators, but were allowed no voice in the proceedings.

Adrian Times: A gay party of young people from this city enjoyed a sleigh ride to Rome Center last evening, to visit Mr. John H. Coobs. While there one of the young gentlemen, a visitor in the city, had his maiden experience with handcuffs, a fair lady putting them on his wrists, and then in her efforts to release him breaking the key in the lock. The chain was filed apart, and the lock of one of the handcuffs picked. The other, containing the key, could not be removed, and he was obliged to wear it until the next day.

Hudson Post: About 10 o'clock Christmas eve, as the people were returning from the entertainments of the various churches in town, a crowd was gathered in front of one of the Main street saloons, to the exclusion of passers by from the walk in the vicinity. Some poor fellow's appetite and some one's greed for liquor had succeeded in brutalizing a victim, and his friends were celebrating "Peace on earth and good will to men" by snailing him to some haven of repose where he might commune with the spirits within him, and get ready to spend a Merry Christmas with his wife, mother, sister and friends.

DR. A. TRASK'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is instantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with world it speaks, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are astonished, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Scalds, Burns, Sore Throat, Diphtheria, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders accompanied with inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin, never fails to purify the life current of the blood. By this means it cures scalding fever in a few hours, the most malignant forms of disease, by penetrating to every portion of the human frame, every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Honest it copes readily with Eternal as well as Internal diseases.

Over 40 Years,

This ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlets around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

FRANK BIRD. TOM HAVENS

Right to the point

The Rev. J. E. Searles, of New York, is one of the most widely-known and highly esteemed of Methodist ministers.

Mr. Searles says: "I am impressed that it is a duty I owe to those afflicted with Rheumatism or Neuralgia, to say that a remedy has lately been proved that is indeed a wonderful blessing. My son was greatly afflicted with Rheumatism, and suffered so severely that at times he was obliged to take morphine to induce him to sleep. Nothing would give him relief. He discovered a remedy which effected immediate relief, and a permanent cure. He has since furnished it to many others with the same result. I have also furnished it to a number of people suffering with Rheumatism, and it has proved the best immediate relief, and a permanent cure, I know of. Yours, etc. I gave it to Rev. Wm. P. Corbit, pastor of the Georgetown St. M. E. Church, New Haven, Conn., who was suffering greatly with this terrible disease. I will give you his own words as written to my son, wishing him to publish the fact for the benefit of others suffering with the same disease."

What Mr. Corbit Says:

"New Haven, July 24, 1882.

"Mr. Searles—Dear Sir—I wish to say for the benefit of all who are suffering with Inflammatory Rheumatism, that your medicine is infallible. I suffered for two months the most excruciating torture, lost 18 pounds of flesh, and was not out of my house for a month. I heard of your remedy, and was almost instantly relieved by it. If there is a specific for disease of any kind, you're most certainly is for Inflammatory Rheumatism in its severest form.

"Yours most respectfully, WM. P. CORBIT,
"Pastor Georgetown St. M. E. Church, New Haven, Conn."

Such is ATHLOPHOROS, a thorough and efficient cure for the worst cases of Rheumatism and Neuralgia.

If you cannot get ATHLOPHOROS of your druggist, we will send it express paid, on receipt of regular price—one dollar per bottle. We prefer that you buy it from your druggist, but if he hasn't it, do not be persuaded to try something else, but order at once from us as directed.

ATHLOPHOROS CO., 112 WALL ST., NEW YORK.

THINK OF IT NOW!

Although much is said about the importance of a blood purifying medicine, it may be possible that the subject has never seriously claimed your attention. Think of it now!

Almost every person has some form of scrofulous poison latent in his veins. When this develops in Scrofulous Sores, Ulcers, or Eruptions, or in the form of Rheumatism, or Organic Diseases, the suffering that ensues is terrible. Hence the gratitude of those who discover, as thousands yearly do, that will thoroughly eradicate this evil from the system.

As well expect life without air as health without pure blood. Cleanse the blood with AYER'S SARSAPARILLA.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Gathered from All Quarters.

WASHINGTON.

THE House Committee on Public Lands have held five meetings since the adjournment of Congress. It has been decided to report to the House immediately after Congress reassembles the pending bills which declare the forfeiture of all unearned or lapsed railroad land grants. The reports to accompany these bills will be prepared immediately. Chairman Cobb says: "Once before the House the bills will be vigorously pushed."

THE death of General Andrew A. Humphreys occurred very suddenly at Washington on the night of the 27th ult. He served on the staff of General McClelland in the early part of the war and was mustered out of the army as a Brigadier General in 1879 at his own request. He was a member of many scientific associations both in this country and Europe.

WASHINGTON dispatches announce that the Committee on Judiciary propose making a thorough investigation of the alleged misuse of power and the people's money by the Department of Justice in recent trials at the capital.

THE Commissioner General of the Land Office, upon evidence showing fraud in making entry, the past week canceled twenty-one entries of public land in Colorado, twelve in Dakota and seventeen in New Mexico.

A DISPATCH from Texas on the 28th ult says: Frank Hurd, Congressman from Ohio, will introduce into the House immediately after the holiday recess resolutions calling for a committee to investigate the conduct of Brewster, Cameron, Joel W. Bowman and Z. L. Tidball, connected with the Department of Justice in Texas, against whom specific charges have been prepared and will be presented at the same time.

AN order has been issued by the Secretary of the Navy to suspend work in the Boston navy yards on January 15, and dismiss half the force. The breaking up of condemned vessels will continue, and the yard converted into a rope walk. An order closing the League Island navy yard and converting it into a construction yard for steel vessels will be issued soon.

THE President has approved the action of the court-martial in the case of Chaplain Toussaint Mesplie, convicted of having duplicated pay accounts, and sentenced to be dismissed from service. He also approved the sentence of the court martial in the case of Captain Chambers McKibben convicted of a similar offense, but who in view of mitigating circumstances, was only sentenced to be reduced ten numbers to the relative rank of Captain of infantry. It is understood that the court-martial tried First Lieutenants W. L. Clarke, of the Twenty-third Infantry, and Joseph L. Cummings, of the Third Infantry, on charges of duplicating pay accounts and found them guilty, and sentenced them to be dismissed from the service.

THE Secretary of the Interior has decided to direct the Surveyor General of New Mexico to ascertain the truth of the allegations made to the department that the western boundary of the patented Pedro Armedaris grant in New Mexico was by fraud or gross error in the survey two and one half miles too far west, thereby including about fifty square miles of valuable Government mineral land. The papers presented in the Secretary's opinion, made a strong showing in support of the alleged error.

THE EAST.

THE horses attached to a sleigh containing four couples ran away at Rocktown, Pa., on the 27th ult., dragging the sleigh over a precipice. James Smith had his leg and arm broken, Henry Green an arm broken, and Mary Krohner internally injured. The others were slightly injured.

IN New York recently John Thoma quarreled with his wife and then went to the grave of his child in Greenwood Cemetery and shot himself dead. He was found lying across the grave covered with snow by a police officer.

WHILE three men were digging coal near Girardsville, Pa., on the 27th ult., they were buried by falling earth. One was fatally and the other seriously injured.

GENERAL GRANT slipped on the ice in front of his residence in New York recently and fell, sustaining injuries which confined him to his bed for several days. It is thought his injuries are not serious.

PETITIONS are being circulated throughout Pennsylvania requesting Congress to prevent the importation of foreign laborers under contracts made abroad, and are receiving the signatures of many workingmen.

THE number of schedules in assignment filed in New York in 1883 was 343. Liabilities $20,857,843, actual assets $9,734,541.

THE Free Thinkers' Convention opened at Salamanca, N. Y., on the 27th ult., with a large attendance. Among the speakers present were ex-Rev. Burnham, of Michigan, and John E. Remburg, of Kansas.

AT many points along the Atlantic coast the wind blew at the rate of sixty miles an hour on the 28th ult. Considerable damage was done to shipping at Sandy Hook, six houses in Brooklyn, N. Y., were blown down, and at Pittsfield, Mass., chimneys and trees were leveled all over the town and a number of people in the streets lifted from their feet. A business block and the high school building were unroofed.

ON the 28th ult., Daniel P. Reynolds, of New York, called at the residence of James Budd, in Dorchester, Mass., and after being ushered into the parlor shot Budd twice with a revolver. The wounds are likely to prove fatal. Trouble about property and family matters is supposed to be the cause of the shooting.

THE recently dismissed Treasurer of the Providence (R. I.) Institution for Savings, Samuel C. Blodgett, has been discovered to be an embezzler to the amount of $27,000. The robberies cover a period of eight years.

NEAR Jersey City, N. J., on the 28th ult. James McCann and an unknown woman were found dead under an overturned wagon which had fallen down an embankment.

A BROKEN rail caused an accident to a passenger train near Dunbar, Pa., on the 28th ult. Three coaches and a baggage car were thrown from the track, all badly wrecked. Several passengers were injured, but none killed.

THE business failures in the United States during the week ending on the 28th ult. number 214, and in Canada twenty-four, a reduction of eighty-four compared with the total of the previous week.

THE American bishops deny that any agreement was arrived at or the matter discussed while in Rome concerning the Catholic clergy of the United States and Freemasonry.

THE Socialistic Labor Congress closed its session at Baltimore on the 28th ult. A demand was adopted for the abolition of the offices of President and Vice President of the United States and the United States Senate, and the substitution of a Federal Council.

THE Albany (N. Y.) Argus of the 28th ult. contains interviews and letters from a great many of the leading iron men in regard to the present depression in that industry. One of the most prominent manufacturers says: "The proximate cause of the present depression in the industry is to be found in the fact of the capacity for producing iron in excess of its actual consumption, not only in this country but in foreign countries which are large producers of iron and steel." The iron men of Troy, N. Y., declare that the maintenance of the present tariff is necessary to keep the furnaces in blast.

WHILE feeding a threshing machine at the barn of Lincoln Gray, near Meadville, Pa., on the 28th ult., Robert Gray, aged twelve years, fell into the cylinder and had one leg torn from his body at the thigh and received other injuries which caused instant death.

JOHN MCCARTHY SCULLY, the well-known Irish Nationalist, was found dead in his bed in New York on the morning of the 30th ult. His death is attributed to heart disease. He had been in failing health for several months and his death was accelerated by severe literary work. He was instrumental in founding many Fenian organizations in America, and was the chief organizer of the Land League movement in New York.

ALL the collieries of the Reading (Pa.) Company's Lehigh Susquehanna Division resumed work on the 30th ult. at full time. Heretofore the men have been working on the three days-a-week system. The company's stores have been abandoned.

IN consideration of the reduction on the assessed value of the New Jersey Central's holdings here, agents of the road have agreed to pay Jersey City $150,000 past due taxes.

A CONTRACT has been signed between the manager of a Philadelphia museum and Sergeant Mason, binding the latter to appear on exhibition there for a limited period at a salary of $200 per week.

A LITTLE six-year old daughter of Elias Schlenger, residing near Kutztown, Pa., was attacked by a vicious dog while passing a mill near her home on her way to a neighbor's recently. The brute seized the girl by the throat and threw her to the ground. The animal then loosened his hold and made a savage dash at the fleshy part of the face. Both cheeks, the eyelids, and the flesh about the forehead was literally torn into shreds. Her neck was also terribly lacerated. The child was picked up in an unconscious condition. She cannot recover. The dog was shot.

ROSE HORAN, formerly lady's maid to Lady Mandeville, began suit at New York on the 30th ult. to recover $20,000 damages for false arrest and imprisonment at the instance of Lord and Lady Mandeville who charged the maid with larceny.

WEST AND SOUTH.

AN unknown person, supposed to be a negro, went to the house of a German farmer named Ketcher, near Little Rock, Ark., one night recently and shot a load of buckshot into Ketcher, and after the latter made his escape in the darkness, the assassin went into the house and brutally assaulted Ketcher's wife. No motive for the assault is known. Ketcher and his wife will probably die.

PETER K. MORGAN, of Richmond, Va., aged ninety-eight, and a veteran of the war of 1812, died on the 27th ult.

C. A. COUTANT & Co., Chicago fancy dry goods and notion dealers, failed for $100,000 the 27th ult.

COUNTY AUDITOR BREWSTER, of Hamilton County, Ohio, says he has discovered $1,000,000 of fraudulent increase of valuation of property for taxes on the books, made for the purpose of getting a fee by clerks for procuring the refunding of excessive taxes. It has been done since 1880.

AT Bloomington, Ill., on the 28th ult., Mrs. Benjamin F. Watson, wife of a traveling salesman and an estimable lady, committed suicide by jumping into a cistern. She was formerly a Miss Cowling, of London, Ohio.

THE steamer Clara S., with a cargo of 1,000 bales of cotton and 200 bags of seed, struck a snag in Tehula Lake, Miss., on the 28th ult., and sank in five minutes. The crew was rescued.

THE hanging of William Fox for the murder of Tom Howard in May last, occurred at Nevada, Mo., on the 28th ult., in the presence of 10,000 men, women and children.

A CEREMONY representing the funeral of O'Donnell, who was hanged in London, took place at San Francisco on the 30th ult. Efforts were made to make it a grand demonstration. The board of supervisors of prominent Irish organizations declined to take part, and it resulted in a dismal failure. There were only about 300 people in the procession.

JOSEPH LONGWORTH, a son of the late Nicholas Longworth, of Cincinnati, who amassed great wealth in that city in dealing in real estate, died at his residence on the morning of the 30th ult., aged seventy years. His ailment was simply breaking down of vital energies. Several weeks ago he began to fail and had been gradually sinking until the day of his death. He leaves a wife, a son—Judge Nicholas Longworth—and daughter, a wife of Colonel George Ward Nichols. He made frequent large donations to the city, chiefly for the promotion of the fine arts in the same.

IN the trial of Mrs. Anna Schock, matron of the Woman's Industrial Home at Chicago, who is charged with cruelty to the children under her charge, a horrible tale of hungry, naked, shivering little ones was brought out. Lydia Hanks, a fifteen-year-old girl who had been Mrs. Schock's maid, testified that only on rare occasions did the children have any food except corn meal and skimmed milk. The cow was kept in the kitchen, the filth being terrible. Mrs. Schock's private table was supplied with porterhouse steak, fresh eggs, wine, etc. The only water-closet was some distance from the house and the children could not go to it, but used the dining room floor. Mrs. Ella Smith testified that the bodies and clothing of the little ones were alive with vermin. The only garment worn by the children was a little shirt, and there were no fires and scarcely a whole window pane in the house. Other witnesses corroborated these statements.

THE residence of Charles E. Styles, at Atchison, Kansas, was destroyed by fire on the 30th ult. The wife and child of Mr. Styles perished in the flames and he himself was quite seriously burned. The origin of the fire is believed to be an explosion of a gasoline machine in the cellar.

A FEW days ago, near Warsaw, Coshocton County, Ohio, two men named Hass and Clingler were opening up an abandoned coal mine which had been closed for twenty years. The mouth of the mine for some ten feet had caved in, completely stopping up the entry. After removing this dirt they came upon a large and rather deep pool of water, in which myriads of snakes and lizards were crawling. As soon at the opening was made the snakes in wriggling masses commenced crawling into the entry, badly frightening the two men, who killed a large number and then fled from the place. After procuring assistance the men returned to the mine and killed, it is said, nearly a wagon load of the snakes.

FOR a long time past the northwestern part of Illinois and the northern part of Missouri have been infested with horse thieves, whose headquarters it is believed have been at Cape Girardeau, the latter State. A farmer named Kimball, living in North Missouri, had three horses stolen recently, and organizing a posse of seven started in pursuit of the thieves, who were overtaken near Forsyth, Mo. The thieves turned on their pursuers and a desperate fight ensued. Two of the pursuers were seriously injured, and two of the thieves, James and Andrew Davis, formerly residents of Cape Girardeau, were shot dead.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

AT Hanover, Germany, a few days since, Colonel Henry R. Rathbone, of Albany, N. Y., well known in Washington society, shot his wife dead and then attempted suicide by stabbing himself. The family had gone to Germany to educate their three children. Mrs. Rathbone was the daughter of the late Senator Ira Harris, of New York. Mr. Rathbone was laboring under a temporary aberration of mind. He may recover.

CHARLES BRADLAUGH, who has been refused a seat in the British Parliament because he wouldn't take the customary oath recognizing the existence of a God, announces his intention of going to the House of Commons on the day of the opening of Parliament alone, and doing his best to take his seat. He rejects the idea of holding public meetings and obtaining petitions, because he says such a course would be useless.

PARIS dispatches of the 28th ult. state that the sending of reinforcements to Tonquin will be hastened. The Government has asked French steamship companies for transports to send 2,000 troops immediately.

REPORTS are in circulation to the effect that the Russian and American Governments have advised China to recall her troops from Bacninh and leave the Black Flags to their fate.

THE Swedish brig National, from Boston, which arrived at Brisbane, Queensland, on the 30th ult., reports a mutiny on the voyage, in which the Captain and first mate were wounded and the second mate killed. The Captain shot two mutineers and secured three others. The latter are in prison here.

LATER NEWS.

WINFIELD HEISLER, a coppersmith, of Wilmington, Del., had his skull fractured on the 1st by the explosion of a copper kettle formerly used to hold nitroglycerine, some of which remained in the hollow handle, and when held over the fire exploded.

MISS SALLIE LOUGHERY, aged eighteen, was accidentally shot and killed by her lover at Knottsville, Taylor County, W. Va., on the 1st. While they were out walking the young man drew his handkerchief from his pocket when a revolver in the same pocket fell to the ground and was discharged, the ball striking Miss Loughery in the side and killing her instantly.

A SPECIAL from Oxford, Ala., states that a fire broke out in that place on the 30th ult., and before it could be checked destroyed six business houses, including the new bank building. This is the second fire that has occurred on the same spot within six months.

A PROMINENT gentleman of Athens, Ga., has a record of all the slaves his family owned, one thousand in number, and is confident that some day he or his descendants will receive pay for them from the Government.

THEY have begun to inforce the "four-mile" law in Tennessee. It is virtual prohibition. As a result the river steamers are freighted with jugs of whisky for private consumers. The W. A. Johnson recently steamed away from Paducah with eight hundred jugs for distribution along the river bank.

THERE is now no doubt but that Colonel Rathbone killed his wife at Hanover, Germany, while laboring under a fit of insanity. He had an idea that his wife was about to take the children away. She, knowing his murderous disposition on the fatal day, bravely sacrificed her own life to save her children. She lived five minutes after she had been shot and stabbed with a dagger.

ABNER BOND, a well-to-do citizen of Taylorsville, Ill., aged fifty years, and a cousin of Miss Emma Bond, who was brutally outraged in a school house some time ago, suicided by hanging of the loft of his barn on the 1st. It is supposed that he became temporarily insane from the constant mental worry over the outrage of his cousin and the trial of her alleged ravisher, now progressing.

FOUR negro cabins were burned in West Kansas City, Mo., on the night of the 31st ult. and the body of a disease negress, named Maggie Howard, was found in the ruins. There is a suspicion that the woman was murdered by her negro paramour and the shanty burned. The man has disappeared.

ST. N. GRIFFITH, a farmer residing a short distance south of Salem, Ohio, was found dead near his house on the morning of the 1st by his son, eighteen years of age, who said it was suicide. The boy has since disappeared and the indications show it to be a case of murder.

Healthy People Sometimes Laugh

At the sufferings of dyspeptics, and say that their pains and distresses are imaginary. This is not meant for cruelty, but it is cruelty, all the same. A person who has a crooked foot, or a wounded hand, or a sightless eye, calls forth sympathy by the exhibition of the defective member. If the dyspeptic's inner stomach could be placed on exhibition, the cause of his distress would be apparent.

The man with a troublesome stomach often suffers quite as much as the man with a broken leg, but is far less likely to receive sympathy.

Sympathy is good for sufferers, as far as it goes. But Brown's Iron Bitters is better, for it strikes at the root of these troubles, and cures disease. Disappointed dyspeptics, weary of living, tried many experiments in seeking cure, will do well to make one fair trial of Brown's Iron Bitters, and report the result. That this well-tried family medicine will thus diminish the quantity of human suffering, is an established fact.

BULL DOGLETS.

A man who had traveled abroad,
Was heard very plain to speak out:
"I have chewed in all lands,
But the finest of brands
Is the 'Bull Dog' without any doubt!"

A man up at Kalamazoo
Said to decent tobacco he knew,
But the "Bull Dog" he tried—
Was so well satisfied
He bought a whole cask to chew.

A resident at a way-station
Was grumbling about his location.
He said: "I'd no mind
If I only could find
'Bull Dog Fine' in this part of creation."

An old man who dwelt in Tecumseh,
Saw a "Bull Dog" sign over a door.
He said: "While I'm by,
I'll prove are a supply,
And bought all they had in the store."

An "old timer," not noted for campaigning,
Said his son nearly died of consumption,
But his health was renewed
When the "Bull Dog" he chewed,
That he had was the common presumption.

But the steady increase of demand
Shows the sick and ailing understand,
Though "Bull Dog" don't cure
All the ills we endure,
'TIS THE FINEST BY FAR IN THE LAND.

THE HERALD FOR 1884.

Advertising has become a necessity to business success, and if the trader and speculator find the use of printer's ink a paying investment why should not the newspaper publisher adopt the same method to make known his wares? Newspapers have become a necessity in every household. No well regulated family in these days thinks of getting along with only one newspaper. The paterfamilias must have his trade or agricultural journal, a city political weekly and a local sheet; the housewife needs a lady's magazine; the children sigh for a juvenile paper. The HERALD will seek to fill only one of these fields, that of a local newspaper. But it shall be our aim to make improvements in that direction and to till that special field more thoroughly than heretofore. We shall give no chromos nor stationery, nor organs, nor sewing machines to subscribers during the coming year. Recognizing the tendency of the times towards cheaper rates, we shall accommodate ourselves to it. We have chosen twelve publications, giving a good variety for family needs, have secured special terms on them, and can offer them in connection with the HERALD at "rock-bottom rates." No such rates have ever before been offered to our patrons. Under this club offer, however, we shall not accept elm wood or hard cider, or potatoes, or turnips on subscription.—These rates mean "cash down" with the order. The table below gives the name of each paper clubbed with the HERALD, the regular subscription price of the outside paper and the club price of the same in connection with the HERALD. A glance at the figures will show the remarkable offer which we extend to our patrons for the New Year. We shall be prepared to take subscriptions for any paper or magazine published at reduced rates, but our special "rock-bottom" offer will be confined to the papers named in the appended list. Having done our part to give our friends the lowest figures on their reading matter for '84 we respectfully ask them to return the compliment and swell the subscription list of the HERALD during the ensuing two months beyond any number hitherto reached in its history.

Turn over a new leaf now.

A Friend of "Unser Fritz."

Mr. Henry Sauer, a genial German, keeps a saloon at No. 8 Grand street, Brooklyn. The surest way to his sympathies is to recite the glories achieved by Bismarck and Kaiser Wilhelm in the late Franco-Prussian war. A recent occurrence, however, has soured his hitherto guileless affection for his illustrious fellow-countrymen.

About two weeks ago a burly German with a big scar on his neck entered the boarding-house and applied for two weeks' lodging. "I have just come from Germany," he told the worthy proprietor, "and am on my way to California. Do you see this scar? Donnerwetter, but I laid out the rascal of a Frenchman who gave me that!"

"You were in the Franco-Prussian war?" asked Mr. Sauer, at once interested.

"Was I? From the time the first shot was fired to our triumphant entry into Paris! I fought at Weisenbourg, Gravelotte, Sedan, everywhere. How did I get this scar? At Gravelotte a Frenchman drew his sword on Unser Fritz. I see the danger, spring to the rescue of the Crown Prince, and receive the thrust in my neck. The blood squirted up so as to almost blind me, but I up with my needle-gun, take aim, and bang the Frenchman lies dead at my feet."

"That was a heroic act, mein freund," exclaimed the enthusiastic landlord; "you take a drink."

"Oh, that was nothing," continued the hero, wiping the froth from his lips with his sleeve. "At Sedan I received the commission from Moltke himself to capture Napoleon. With a detachment of ten trusty men I crept in the dead of night into the enemy's camp. We throttled the sentinels and were already before the house where the French Emperor was sleeping, when the verfluchte Turkos sprang on us with their scimitars and chopped off the heads of all my companions. Luckily, I escaped with only this scar."

Some of the bystanders suggested that the hero had but just now declared that he had received the scar at Gravelotte, but the patriotic landlord frowned upon their hints as traitorous, and bade the valiant stranger continue.

"That was tough, but even that was mere child's play to what I encountered when I lay in the trenches before Paris. The Commune had been declared, and the Communists, having defeated their own National Guard, made a sortie on us and captured me with a number of my comrades. We were brought to the Place des Greves, where Archbishop Darboy had just been shot by Megy, and it was ordered that we should all be dynamited. I had to witness with my own eyes my comrades one by one blown to pieces by those demons of women, the petroleuses. Finally my turn came. Already I saw the hand-bomb filled with nitro-glycerine raised to be dashed at me, when our brave troops made their final attack on the city. Every one rushed off and I was alone. I made my way to the scene of combat, and before I could regain our lines was stabbed in the neck here by one of our own people. You can still see the scar."

"Mein freund and I rudder," enthusiastically interrupted Mr. Sauer, utterly oblivious to the fact that the same wound had been received on three separate occasions, "you shall lodge with me. Everything in my house is yours."

The military stranger took him at his word. After living like a lord for two weeks, he yesterday morning decamped with fifteen dollars in money and an overcoat. Since his disappearance Mr. Sauer, who does not even know his name, has discovered that his lodger has been all over Brooklyn telling the same stories, showing the wound, getting credit for his lodging, and then leaving with whatever he could lay his hands on.

"Dot vas a fine coundryman, and id," pathetically asked Mr. Sauer, as he reported the circumstances to the police, "is dey all dat?"—N. Y. World.

Faded Hopes.

A young man with a broad back and a sorrowful look was standing in front of the Board of Trade yesterday, when an acquaintance came up and called out:

"Hello! Thomas—out of a job?"

"Yes, out of a job," was the sad reply.

"No! Why you were porter for a wholesale house for three years past."

"Just so, but I've been discharged."

"Is that so, have trouble with the boss?"

"No, not exactly. You see I went into the house to work my way up. The first Christmas I ought to have been promoted to salesman, but I wasn't. The second Christmas I ought to have been offered a partnership for my faithful services, but the offer didn't come. This year I ought to have married the daughter of the senior partner and found a house and lot in my Christmas stocking, but that prospect has now departed."

"And you left?"

"Well, I overhauled the old man on the street-car yesterday, and intimated that I was ready to do my part, but he never let on that he knew me. This morning I was told that my services were no longer needed."

"But can the house run without you?"

"It may possibly squeeze along, but if there's a failure it must not be laid up agin me. Do you know of any bank where a man can begin as watchman and work up to marry the President's widow? I think I'll try that business for a spell."—Detroit Free Press.

—We have another striking evidence that this is an age of rapid evolution. Miss Daisy Backus, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Backus, of Selma, Ala., celebrated her fifth birthday recently, and among her guests was Master Frankie Butler, who presented Miss Daisy with a beautiful plain gold engagement ring, bearing the words in delicate engraved letters: "Frankie to Daisy."

—A young beau at his sister's evening party began to sing: "Why am I weak and weary?" when a little brother brought the performance to a sudden close by calling out: "Aunt May says it's 'cause you come home so late every night."—N. Y. Graphic.

Quickness and Talent.

Quickness is frequently confounded with talent. Lord Eldon is said to have remarked, when blamed for "the law's delays," that slow justice was preferable to swift injustice; but to many persons few grievances are more intolerable than delay. The slow but accurate thinker will rarely attain the same popular reputation for ability that attaches to the swift though often mistaken reasoner.

Yet even great minds are rarely at the same time hasty and accurate. Napoleon was gifted with extraordinary quickness of perception, and owed most of his early successes to the swift and unexpected tactics with which he broke through the old extraordinary methods of conducting campaigns. Quick himself, he detested slowness in others, and was impatient if any one he questioned hesitated a moment in reply. Cuvier complained that he lost the Emperor's favor because he would not give a sudden categorical answer to an important question of finance. On one occasion, riding through Fontainebleau, the Emperor suddenly turned to the forest-master and demanded how many acres of wood the park contained. The forest-master, an honest man, waited a moment to consider; at which a subordinate, who knew the Emperor's peculiarity, promptly named some imaginary number, so delighting Napoleon that he bestowed the head rangership on this swiftly-replying person. The result did not justify the Emperor's penetration, for the quick-witted man proved so extremely dishonest that after a short time he was dismissed, and the slower thinker reinstated.

Hasty-judging people of lesser rank frequently make equally unfortunate mistakes. Readers of Bret Harte's poems will remember the ridiculous incident of the old man who calls at a farm-house during the American war, and remarks: "I was with Grant"—and how the farmer, who had a son in the Northern army, received him with questions, admiration, offers of hospitality, cutting short all his attempts at finishing the sentence, until at last

"Said the aged man,
"I should have remarked before
I was with Grant—in Illinois—
Three years before the war."

It is scarcely just when the farmer dismissed the old man with anger as an imposter, when his own overhaste was the cause of the mistake.—London Globe.

Eating Lemons.

A good deal has been said through the papers about the healthfulness of lemons. The latest advice is how to use them so that they will do the most good, as follows: Most people know the benefit of lemonade before breakfast, but few know that it is more than doubled by taking another at night also. The way to get the better of the bilious system without blue pills or quinine is to take the juice of one, two or three lemons, as appetite craves, in as much ice water as makes it pleasant to drink without sugar, before going to bed. In the morning, on rising, at least a half hour before breakfast, take the juice of one lemon in a goblet of water. This will clear the system of humor and bile with efficiency, without any of the weakening effects of calomel or congress water. People should not irritate the stomach by eating lemons clear; the powerful acid of the juice, which is always most corrosive, invariably produces inflammation after awhile, but properly diluted, so that it does not burn or draw the throat, it does its medical work without harm, and, when the stomach has clear of food, has abundant opportunity to work over the system thoroughly, says a medical authority.—Exchange.

DIED.

NORCROSS—In this village, Dec. 22, 1883, of inflammation of the lungs, Elizabeth Norcross, aged 74 years and 22 days.

The deceased was born in Geneseo, N. Y. When she was quite young her father moved to Groveland, N. Y., where she became a member of the Presbyterian church. In 1832, she, with her parents, moved to Monroe, Mich., where she became a member of the church by letter. There her mother died. Soon after that event in 1833, she removed with her father to Tecumseh, where she again joined the church by letter, and continued a member until her death. She and her sister Mary Ann have lived on the old homestead since 1845. Having made this village her home for half a century, she had widely extended the circle of her acquaintances, who now mourn her sudden death. But the greatest bereavement is at the home altar, where time only can soften, but not repair the loss. These sisters were all in all to each other, until God's hand was laid upon the one, calling her to a "mansion not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." The bereaved brother and sister tender their thanks to their friends who so kindly sympathized and assisted them in the trying hours of sickness and sorrow through which they have been passing.
